Minesweeper Overdue; 29 Aboard

Canuck Craft Last Seen Off Gaspe Oct. 19; Feared Storm Victim

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—(CP)—The navy announced today the sturdy auxiliary minesweeper H.M.C.S. Bras d'Or, guardian of the gale-whipped lower St. Lawrence, is over due with Lieut. Charles Avery Hornsby of Halifax and 29 officers and men aboard.

Next-of-kin already have been notified and the navy held only slim hope the captor of the Italian merchantman Capo Nolb might turn up.

The official statement said: "The search will continue until the vessel is found or until it is considered that hope should be abandoned."

The announcement, followed by two days the disclosure of loss of the Canadian destroyer Margaree with 140 officers and men. Last June there was the loss of the destroyer Fraser with 45 men, both detroyers going down in collision.

Loss of the Margaree reduced Canada's destroyer strength to 12. Canada's present strength in minesweepers is not known. She had four at the outbreak of the war in September, 1939, and the Bras d'Or was added later. Only recently, Navy Minister Macdonald said 18 were under construction, and others besides the Bras d'Or may have been added in the past year.

6 Raider Victims

Boston, Oct. 30 (AP)

SINKING of six ships by a German raider operating in South Indian Ocean waters was reported today by passengers arriving on the American export line freighter Excellency from the Far East.

Victims of the raider, the passengers said, were five British ships and a Greek freighter. The crew of the latter, according to the passengers, was rescued by a British steamship now en route to South America.

The new arrivals said the Excellency was stopped for identification off Madagascar by a heavily-armed Netherlands cruiser, which, with British warships, was seeking the raider.

The Sorry Tale

Vichy, Oct. 30 (AP)

MARSHAL Philippe Petain, in a broadcast tonight explaining his meeting with Hitler said his government has decided on collaboration with the Rome-Berlin axis "to maintain French unity."

"Thus in the near future the weight of suffering laid on our country can be lightened," Petain said. "The plight of our prisoners can be bettered and the expenses of occupation (by the German army) can be diminished.

"This collaboration must be sincere. It must exclude all sorts of aggression. This policy is mine. The ministers are responsible only to me. It is I alone history will judge.

"Up to now I have used the language of a father. Today I use the language of a chief."

RAF Defies Gale Bombs Berlin Through Snow

LONDON, Oct. 30.—(CP)—Carrying on through cold mist which covered their planes with ice, Royal Air Force fliers last night bombed Berlin and dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs on numerous industrial plants and military objectives in Germany and German-occupied territory, the Air Ministry said today.

Fires were started at oil plants at Homberg, Sterkrade and Magdeburg.

Again the R.A.F. roared down on Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, Germany, and on Den Helder, Ymuiden and Flushing, Holland, and Ostend, Belgium, attacking shipyards and docks.

Other planes raided railway communications, airdromes, searchlight batteries and anti-aircraft gun positions. Two planes were lost in the operations, the ministry said.

Its news service reported the British airmen ran into snowstorms and had to drop parachute flares to find their targets at Berlin. The heavy fall of snow prevented observation of the results. The pilots flew by instruments.

"We had hoped to get clear of snow before reaching Berlin," one said, "but if anything it was worse when we arrived. Still we managed to find our target, a large electrical works, and bombed it through the snow."

No Raiders Reach London

LONDON, Oct. 30.—(CP)—German raiders crossed England's southeast coast today apparently headed for London but were engaged high above the clouds by Royal Air Force fighter planes and turned back.

London had only a brief daylight raid.

Thain Boasts Of Murder Witness Says

Startling Statement In Conversation In Jail Told In Court

(For Tuesday Afternoon's Evidence See Pages 2 and 8.)

By HARRY THEOBALD
(Examiner Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 30.—"Thain said me: 'I did a good job. I gave him both barrels. I don't know why I did it'."

This almost startling statement, recalling a conversation in the local jail, was given in evidence this morning by Lingham Martin, Crown witness in the trial of Fred Thain for the murder of Arnold Wellman and his wife of Rawdon township, January 31 last.

"We were sitting on a bench in the Belleville jail on February 5, Fred Thain and I. We were talking about the time I used to work for Arnold Wellman about two years ago.

"I said it was too bad about the deaths of the Wellmans. Then I said to Mr. Thain: 'Did you go to the house or the barn first?" He said he went to the barn first. I asked him was Mr. Wellman milking and Mr. Thain said he guessed Wellman was just starting to milk. Then Thain said: "I did a good job, I gave him both barrels."

"He started to tell me about going to the house, but just then the turnkey came along."

Vernon Runnels, 21, Rawdon township, first witness, said he called at Arnold Wellman's on January 31, about 9 a.m., applied for a job to cut wood and was to begin work two days later, on Friday. "That was the last time I saw Mr. Wellman alive," witness said.

Robert Flemming, grist miller at Springbrook, corroborated previous evidence that Wellman had taken a load of grain to the mill on Monday, January 31.

"It was mostly oats with a sprinkle of wheat. I weighed his load. It was 1,100 pounds in bags, I think 14 of them. He left for home around 1.30 or 2 o'clock."

"What was the market price that day of 1,100 pounds of chop?" Mr. Snyder asked.

"About $1.30 a hundred, I think."

Lingham Martin, farm laborer, worked three weeks for Arnold Wellman two years ago.

Mr. Snyder: "Did you know Fred Thain?"

"Yes."

"Yes."

Witness admitted that on January

Please Spare Rome

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP)

A VIRTUAL promise that Italy would refrain from bombing Athens so long as Rome is spared from aerial attack was broadcast by the Rome radio today in a statement denying what it claimed was a British assertion that Fascist planes had already raided the Greek capital.

(No such report had been received from London.)

27 Raiders Down On Tuesday; Night Easy One

LONDON, Oct. 30.—(CP)—German air raiders opened their daylight attacks today shortly before noon (7 a.m. EDT) with assaults on London and the industrial Midlands.

London and other main targets had enjoyed long breathing spells during the night.

While Southeastern England, including the London area, was bearing the brunt of Nazi nighttime assaults, Royal Air Force bombers attacked "a number of targets in Germany, including some in the Berlin area," despite adverse weather conditions, the Air Ministry announced.

A number of persons were killed in German attacks at several points in Eastern and Northeastern England where, a communique said, the raiders machine-gunned streets at several places. "Casualties were not numerous," it added.

In two towns in the industrial Midlands, incendiary bombs started "many" fires, the communique said, but these were reported quickly extinguished or brought under control. Some houses were reported destroyed, and commercial and other buildings were damaged.

The Nazi raiders also attacked Merseyside, the dock and shipbuilding section of Liverpool. There, the damage was described as "small in extent."

The government revised its figures on yesterday's air battles to bring to 27 the total of German planes shot down, as against seven British planes.

Hard Struggle And Long Is Predicted

British Sea Mastery Ensures Aid Says Moscow Press

MOSCOW, Oct. 30—(AP).—The "Red Star," Soviet army newspaper, declared today the British fleet is master of the eastern Mediterranean and forecast a hard battle between the Allied British and Greek forces and Italy.

The Soviet Government was informed of war developments by the Greek Minister.

"The location of Greece in the eastern part of the Mediterranean, where the British fleet is master, ensures aid from her British allies who are interested in keeping so advantageous a battlefield as Greece," the paper said.

"The limited possibilities of Albania as a base for the Italian front, having only three or four highways, make it difficult for Italy to concentrate overwhelming forces.

"With the appearance of British aviation in Greece, the Italian bases in the southeastern part of Italy itself will be subjected to blows from bombers. Under such conditions, operations in the Albanian-Greek theatre of war do not promise quick decisive development."

Must Realize Needs

OTTAWA, Oct. 30—(CP).—Once the Canadian people become conscious of the imperative needs of the war program, there will be no question of their response to the war savings compaign or any other worth-while war effort, Dr. W. C. Clark, deputy Minister of Finance, told a meeting of the War Savings Committee here Tuesday. Dr. Clark was speaking at the close of a two-day session of the national group which discussed plans for a more expansive campaign to enlist 2,000,000 regular "war savers."

Metaxas Line Not Reached Yet British Mine Seaboard Mum On Island Occupation

Rome Claims Advance Without Any Serious Difficulties

ROME, Oct. 30—(AP).—Fascist troops were claimed to be moving "deeper" into Greece from the Albanian frontier today without encountering "serious military difficulties."

A Fascist source acknowledged the Greeks are resisting, but Italians denied they had driven any counter thrust into Albania.

On the African front, a high command communique said, British mechanized units made two attacks on Eritrea from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Italian losses were described as "slight."

The newspaper Il Piccolo, meanwhile, alleged that Crown Prince Paul of Greece, brother of King George II., had been placed under police surveillance in Athens because, it said, he was known to be friendly to Italy and favorable to Axis policies.

Dispatches from Italian correspondents who presumably fled Greece after the hostilities began, claimed a police guard had been placed around the prince's residence immediately after the Greek Cabinet had decided to reject Italy's ultimatum early Monday morning.

"The Crown Prince now is in the hands of Metaxas (Premier John Metaxas)—that is to say of the English," Iyl Piccolo told its readers.

Trouble In Cabinet?

The newspaper declared reports from Athens told of Cabinet dissension over the decision to resist the Italians. According to these reports, a controversy developed between Metaxas and Kostas Kotzias, mayor of Athens, and a member of the Cabinet described as a "friend of Italy."

It was understood that Greek Minister Politis has asked for his passports with the intention of leaving Rome tomorrow. In that case, Fascists said, arrangements would be made for the exchange of the Greek Legation staff for the staff of the Italian Legation at Athens. So far as is known here, Italian Minister Grazzi still is in Athens.

Reports of revolt against Italians in Albania were denied. Italian reports asserted, instead, there has been such enthusiasm among the Albanians that it has been necessary "to restrain individual initiative which tended to interfere with orderly development of military operations" against Greece.

Turkish Tip Reports British Naval Units Already On Crete And Cephalonia Warning Sent Bulgaria "To Stay Out"

ATHENS, Oct. 30—(AP). — The Italians pointed a heavy attack into the western sector of Greece's defences today, apparently driving for Ionina (Janina), 30 miles from the frontier and about the same distance from the coast.

Neutral military quarters said the Greeks were resisting strongly, although the advance guards who faced the border at the outbreak of hostilities were slowly retiring to the main defence lines.

The fighting was the heaviest since Italy attempted invasion, they said, and heavy artillery thundered throughout the night on the lower flank of the battle in northwestern Greece.

The Italians were said to be still far from the main Greek defence system, which was described as strongly fortified. Because of the mountainous terrain, the invaders were able to make little use of their mechanized equipment. Artillery, however, is being employed on a large scale.

Informed quarters said another strong Italian thrust was being made closer to the coast in an effort to reach a road which approaches Ionina from the west, but that the Italians had made no considerable gains in this coastal drive.

Think Passes Safe.

Neutral military experts expressed belief that the Greek troops along the Albanian frontier would be able to hold their lines because of the mountainous character of the area. All roads run through narrow valleys.

There was almost no Italian air activity yesterday and up to noon today (6 a.m., EDT) no air raids had been reported from any part of Greece. The only raid yesterday was said to have been on Ionina.

The Greek high command, strengthening its defence positions with reservists streaming north by train and truck, said in a communique early today that the Italians were striking with heavy force across the Albanian frontier in the Epirus district.

Heavy artillery and light Italian mountain guns were reported hammering at Greece's front line there in the rugged uplands which Aristotle described as the original home of the ancient Hellenes.

Of Greek resistance there, the high command disclosed only that "our movements are carried out on the basis of prearranged plans."

The defence of the Greek-Albanian frontier in Epirus has been planned since the Italians occupied Albania in April, 1939, and Premier John Metaxas started the building of the secret strong points of the "Metaxas Line."

LONDON, Oct. 30 — (CP). — The Royal Navy, moving to the aid of Greece, has mined approaches to important ports on both the east and west coasts of the kingdom, the Admiralty announced to-day.

The announcement said portions of the Gulfs of Corinth and Patras had been mined and that a mine field had been sown in the waters lying north of Crete along the east coast of the Peloponnesus.

Included in the latter area is the Gulf of Aegina—approach to Pirteus, port of Athens.

Shipping was warned of the danger of navigating in the specified areas.

British military circles declared no British troops have been landed in Corfu or Crete, and that they have no confirmation of a reported Italian landing at Corfu.

Charalambos Simopoulos, Greek Minister to London, conferred with Greek shipping representatives here to-day on the problem of transporting volunteers from Britain to Greece.

Asked about reports that naval detachments had landed on various Greek islands, informed sources said they had 'no information" as to whether any had disembarked.

British Marines on Crete

ANKARA, Turkey, Oct. 29—(delayed)—(AP).—The British Information Office said today that British naval detachments had landed on the Greek Island of Crete and on the island of Caphalonia, south of Corfu.

(London had denied that "troops" had been landed on Greek islands).

Turkish officials were silent on the nation's attitude toward the Italo-Greek conflict, but the official newspaper Ulus said Turkey is "whole-heartedly with Greece." and the newspaper Yeni Sabah added: "Turkey will....if need be, know her duty to give all aid" to Greece.

The latter periódical also warned Bulgaria to stay out, declaring: "Should Bulgaria try an adventure toward the Aegean Sea she will be paced by the Turkish army."

Turkish rail communications were interrupted today (possibly by troop movements), and the Simplon Express from the north, which passes through Eastern Greece, had stopped.

Relief Sheets Clear, 15 Centres

TORONTO, Oct. 30—(CP). — At least 15 of the 40 municipalities which make up 90 per cent. of Ontario's relief load are without a fully employable family head on their relief rolls, Welfare Minister Cross said today in making public figures covering relief during September.

Total expenditures for relief in September in the 40 municipalities were $454,061, compared with $570,984 in August and $1,234,983 in September, 1939.

At the end of September, Mr. Cross said, there were 5,911 employable family heads receiving relief with 4,548 of these in Toronto. Municipalities reporting no employable family heads on relief were: Brantford, Midland, Kitchener, Mimico, Collingwood, Port Arthur, Cornwall township, New Toronto, Long Branch, Welland, Trenton, Toronto township, Sudbury, North Bay and Timmins. Only one employable family head on relief was reported in Etobicoke, Stratford, Peterborough, Port William and

U.S. Plans Major Aid Boost For UK

Enroute with President Roosevelt to Boston, Oct. 30 (AP)—A major step to increase aid for Britain and her allies probably will be announced by President Roosevelt tonight in an address in Boston, a White House official indicated today.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters to be on the watch for something along that line. He would give no hints as to the nature of the aid.

Early also warned them, however, not to "go overboard" on releasing United States "Flying Fortresses" to Great Britain.

There had been speculation that the United States might turn over more destroyers to Britain or perhaps allow her a priority on airplane contracts.

Early left an impression that priorities might be involved. He said that the new aid would not take away any existing equipment for the United States armed forces.

Six U.S. Draft Numbers Vanish

Forces F.D.R. and War Secretary To Hold 2nd 'Little Lottery'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30— (CP). —The United States to-day completed the lottery that will send 800,000 young men to camp for a year to form the nation's first peacetime conscripted army, although officials lost six out of the total of 9,00 draftee numbers and wound up officially with two more than they should have had.

Finding of the missing numbers necessitated a subsidiary "little lottery" which took only a few minutes. There was no clue to how the missing numbers, discovered through a wrong total and a check of the master list, disappeared in the first instance.

President Roosevelt, who faces next Tuesday the greatest test at the polls his long career has brought him, launched the complex draft machinery yesterday.

Three hundred newspapermen scribbled and a huge battery of cameras recorded the historic scene in the blue and gold auditorium of the Labor Department.

And the undertone was a weird, high-pitched scream of a mother when the President read the first number—158—the number held by her 21-year-old son.

The President was loudly cheered as he declared "The young men of America have thought this thing through and they thoroughly understand the necessity for national defence."

Grim-visaged and obviously wearied from his political tour and the grave events abroad which kept him locked up most of the day with State Department officials, the President declared in a low, serious voice:

"Recent history proves, I am sorry to say, that only the strong may continue to live in freedom and peace."

Beside him was a table on which reposed the historic glass aquarium from which number were drawn in the first draft lottery July 20, 1917.

Of the 55 embassies and legations in the United States capital at least 22 represent countries now engaged in war, obliterated by war or on the brink of the conflict.

Before the war a white tie and tails were necessary articles of the socially-aspiring Washingtonian. In the last year these habiliments have become frozen assets.

Doubling Up On School Planes

U.S., Canada Increase Output, Easing Britain's Part in Plan

CHICAGO, Oct. 30—(CP).—Canada and the United States will furnish about twice as many airplanes as they were scheduled to provide for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Malcolm McLean, special assistant to Hon. C. G. Power, Canada's Minister of National Defence for Air, said today.

This increased output of planes will allow British factories to concentrate on types of aircraft needed for defence of the United Kingdom, he told executives of a farm implement company, (International Harvester) in a luncheon address.

"Britain, in spite of the Battle of London, has been able to resume shipments of training aircraft to Canada)," Mr. McLean said.

"Her factories also have been speeded up for fighting planes, but, even at that, she will not furnish more than one-half as many training aircraft as was originally intended, the United States and Canada each approximately twice as many."

Mr. McLean, Liberal member of the Dominion Parliament for Melfort (Sask.), said Canada is now confident there will be little shortage in providing aircraft for schools operating under the Training Plan.

"For every plane now in operation, there will be, by June 1 next, three required for extensions and wastage, and we believe that all the schools required will be provided with sufficient for their needs," he added.

Summing up his description of "a great plan which Britain believed would be the most important contribution Canada could make to the war effort," he said the Training Scheme was the greatest single undertaking ever attempted by Canada in so brief a period.

All across Canada a mighty effort was being made to make the enterprise a success. Permanent force officers were given the job of supervising and organizing the plan. Practically all the instructional staff had to be trained. There

Trace Shells To Suspect Murder Trial

Empty Shells Found In Wellman's Barn Fired By Thane's Gun

By H. T. THEOBALD
(Examiner Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 30.—Out of the provincially famous laboratory of Dr. Edgar R. Frankish, medical adviser to the Attorney-General's Department, came evidence Tuesday afternoon in the trial of Fred Thain for the murder of his elderly Rawdon township neighbors, Arnold Wellman and his wife Nancy last January 31, evidence that trailed the crime close to his door and person. It began with the purchase of 25 cents worth of shot gun shells, five of them at five cents each, a nickel a shell, by the prisoner from Mrs. Mildred Graham, a general storekeeper at Wellman's Corners, a roadside community on the Marmora-Stirling highway, early in the afternoon of Wednesday, January 31, a few hours prior to time the Wellmans were slain, according to the Crown's retracing of the progress of the events that day.

And this evidence ended dramatically in its import with the sworn statement of Dr. Frankish that two empty shot gun shells found in Arnold Wellman's barn were discharged from a shotgun found by the police in Fred Thain's home. They were bright and shiny shells, Dominion Canucks their trade name, like others remaining in the box at the Graham store from which Fred Thain bought five for a "quarter."

Found by Nephew

One of those empties was found in Arnold Wellman's barn by his nephew, David Wellman, the other deeper in rubbish at the same spot by Sergeant Harry Thompson of the Provincial Police.

Then the police bought other Dominion Canuck shotgun shells, and sent them with the two exploded ones to Dr. Frankish and with them went the double-barrelled shotgun taken from Fred Thain's house, and with those materials Dr. Frankish went to work in his laboratory of the Criminal Investigation Department. He set the gun in a vice and fired Dominion Canuck shells at certain targets placed at different distances or spaces from the muzzle of the gun. Then he took many photographs of those shells and examined them under a powerful microscope. He also photographed the two suspected shells, and brought enlargements and four shells to show the jury.

Two of the four were Wellman ible for the non-appearance of the Bras d'Or, but if worst fears of the Navy prove correct the loss would raise total Navy casualties since the war started to 243.

A spokesman said "if there is any hope it is only of the slimmest kind."

Messages sent to next-of-kin said she was "nine days overdue." And while the Navy statement omitted the "presumed lost" commonly used in such announcements, it emphasized the foul autumn weather prevailing in the area through which the vessel was travelling.

The Bras d'Or, under her 44-year-old skipper, has not been seen since 3 a.m. October 19, the Navy said. Then she was sighted in the snow-flecked waters of the Gaspe Peninsula by a freighter.

In wartime a Navy vessel seldom sends messages except when in danger. But no communication has come from the Bras d'Or, a veteran of the Lower St. Lawrence waters, since she left Clark City, Que., on October 18 for Sydney, N.S.

The Navy in its customary cryptic style used only 225 words to announce the Bras d'Or was overdue. In that it included a brief biography of her commander and recounted the minesweeper's capture last June of the Capo Noli off the Bic Island, some 10 miles west of Rimouski, Que.

"Naval Service Headquarters regrets to announce that H.M.C.S. Bras d'Or is overdue," said the statement.

"H.M.C.S. Bras d'Or left Clark City, Que., on October 18 for Sydney, N.S. Since then no communication has been received from the ship. She was last seen by a freighter in the Gaspe Passage at 3 a.m. on October 19.

"An extensive search has been made and in continuing to be made, by naval vessels and aircraft. Weather conditions, heavy gales and snow, have been most severe in the region where the Bras d'Or is carrying out her duties.

"The search will continue until the vessel is found or until it is considered that hope should be abandoned."

The statement did not mention the number of men aboard the vessel, but it was accompanied by a list of them, totalling 30, and giving their next-of-kin.

Lieut. Hornsby, Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, was born at Sunderland, England. Back of him were many years' service in the merchant navy as a qualified master mariner.

He joined the R.C.N.R. a month after the outbreak of war and took command of the Bras d'Or last April 26 after serving in the navy's shore establishment at Halifax and in H.M.C.S. Gaspe and Fundy, both minesweepers.

Of the Bras d'Or's complement 14 came from Nova Scotia, seven of them from Halifax; nine more were from Quebec, four from Ontario and one each from Saskatchewan, Alberta and Newfoundland.

Captured Capo Noli.

Most of them aided in the capture of the Italian merchantman Capo Noli, but just how many the Navy's Information Department could not say. The navy switches its men from ship to ship for one reason or another.

The Italian declaration of war caught the Italian ship driving for the sea with the Bras d'Or hot on her trail, Lieut. Hornsby directing operations.

When word of the Canadian Parliament's decision to declare a state of war between Canada and Italy was made known, the Bras d'Or closed in on the merchantman.

Her crew sought to evade capture by running the vessel aground and attempted to set her afire.

Lieut. Hornsby ordered removal of the Italian crew, turned them over to the police and aided a fire tug in putting out the Capo Noli flames. Later the Italian ship was turned over to Canadian shipping authorities—a prize of war and the second vessel in which the Canadian Navy had a hand in capturing.

The first such instance was the capture of the German merchantman Hannover, a 5,600-ton vessel overtaken and captured by the Canadian flotilla leader Assiniboine and a Royal Navy vessel in the Carribean March 8 as she sought to run the British blockade.

Since then the armed merchant cruiser Prince Robert has captured the Nazi express cargo boat Weser of the Mexican coast.

The Bras d'Or was travelling waters familiar to her. Before she was taken into the naval service as an auxiliary minesweeper she was in the service of the Transport Department.

The navy took her over Sept. 15, 1939, for minesweeping and patrol duties. Her length is 113½ feet; beam 23½ feet; draught 14½ feet and gross tonnage 221 tons.

Armed, the vessel has a cruising radius of 2,000 miles.

Another Craft Overdue

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 30 (CP)—The fierce weather that swept the eastern seaboard while the overdue minesweeper Bras d'Or was travelling down the lower St. Lawrence to Sydney was believed today to have claimed five lives aboard another vessel at sea at the same time.

Hope was all but abandoned for Capt. Jack Hayman and his Newfoundland crew of four seamen aboard the fishing schooner Blueboard, sailing out of nearby Glace Bay. They were trapped in a sudden storm that smashed down on the Cape Breton coast Oct. 22, two days after the Bras d'Or was last seen.

Fifteen fishermen aboard three other Glace Bay vessels were missing for more than a day after the snow-laden gale scattered the fleet off that port. One of the little craft was wrecked on Flint Island, but its crew was saved. The other ships straggled into port with crews intact to report a severe battering in the blow.

But no trace of the 14-ton Blueboard has been found. Shipping men believe she sank with all hands.

You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Can Tolerate No Friend Of Britain

Aim To Cut Off All Ports In Asia For Royal Navy

BERLIN, Oct. 30—(AP).—Well-informed German sources hinted today that the Axis powers, seeking to counteract Britain's strength in the Mediterranean, soon may hand Turkey an ultimatum similar to that which preceded Italy's invasion of Greece.

Turkey, like Greece, is a friend of Britain, which has guaranteed to help her in event of aggression by any European nation involving Turkey in war in the Mediterranean.

Commenting upon Axis plans, the semi-official Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz—which has close connections with the German Foreign Office—said:

"Wherever British bases and hideouts exist, they must be extirpated in the interests of the European continuity. This naturally applies to the Mediterranean."

Previously, the Dienst Aus Deutschland suggested Hitler and Mussolini had agreed at their Florence meeting Monday upon some unified action against Britain in which France and Spain might have a role.

The National Zeitung of Essen predicted the next Axis step would be an attempt to sever British connections with Europe, Asia and Africa so that no port in those continents would be open to British warships.

Must Have Unity.

Dienst aus Deutschland said British efforts to "sabotage the Axis work of continental unity" had only strengthened the German-Italian determination to strip the Continent of all British influences. The same, this commentary said, held true for the Mediterranean area.

The Axis powers, Dienst declared, are determined to "complete the War Secretary Henry Stimson was blindfolded by Col. C. R. Morris, using the same bandage, a piece of the upholstery from a chair used by a signer of the Declaration of Independence, that he used for War Secretary Newton D. Baker in 1917.

Col. Morris stirred the blue capsules with a wooden ladle made from a piece of rafter from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, also used in 1917, and Secretary Stimson drew the first number, passing it to the President.

When Mr. Roosevelt called the first number—158—there was a split second of silence, broken by the shriek of Mrs. Mildred Bell of Washington, whose son, Robert, had drawn that number in one of the Washington local board districts.

But it was only a cry of surprise, she explained to the reporters and cameramen, who immediately surrounded her in the centre of the auditorium.

Mrs. Bell apologized for the interruption and later went to the platform to tell a national radio audience she was glad to have her son serve. Her husband, a war veteran, was one of the honorary guard of American Legionaires accompanying the President.

ROOSEVELT TO BOSTON, Oct. 30—(AP).—President Roosevelt started a political tour of New England to-day by telling a rain-drenched crowd at the New Haven, Conn., station that men were being trained for military service for "just the same reason that you've got umbrellas up to-day—so as not to get wet."

The President said it still was necessary to have man-power, even though there was no expectation of using it.

He added: "This talk about sending American boys to Europe.... does not conform with either the facts of the past or the facts of the future."

He said it was a "pity" that fear had been injected into the election campaign—"fears about things that don't exist."

"What a pity it is," Mr. Roosevelt added, "the only thing we have to fear in America is fear itself."

Lines Holding Well

The high command declared "the situation remains unchanged" along the upper half of the border battle-front—in western Macedonia from where Alexander the Great marched to the conquest of ancient Persia.

The defences there, where the Greek reports indicated the attack was less severe, guard the 100-mile route to Salonika, upper Aegean guardian of road and rail routes through Thrace to Turkey and the Dardanelles.

So far, the high command said, "Enemy aviation activity has been very light," although several Greek towns, mostly ports, have been bombed.

Greeks hoped British naval planes would help make up for Greece's weakness in the air and hold back Italian bombers.

was the greatest harmony between uniformed and civilian men connected with the scheme.

"Flying clubs, bush operators, highly-organized commercial air companies, schools and universities, Provincial Governments, corporations, and the man in the street, all are joined together in giving, not only moral, but financial and material support," he said.

"With such backing the Royal Canadian Air Force realizes that it must not, and can not fail.

"Blunders and mistakes we have made, but this is not the time to consider them, except to avoid repetition, and, in spite of difficulties, the organization is rolling along to the time when Canada will contribute materially in the final and decisive blows for victory."

But Mr. McLean warned his listeners against over-optimism. He quoted from a recent speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill:

"Long dark months of trials and tribulations lie before us. Not only great dangers, but many more misfortunes, many shortcomings and many disappointments will surely be our lot.

"Death and sorrow will be the companions of our journey, hardship our garment, and constancy and valor our only shield.

'We must be united, we must be undaunted, we must be inflexible."

19 last he was sentenced to three months in Belleville jail for obstructing police at Marmora.

"So you were in jail here when Fred Thain was brought there on February 2?"

"Yes."

"Did you have a conversation with Thain about the Wellmans' deaths?"

"Yes."

Henry Sharkey, one-legged and using crutches, who was also a jail companion of Fred Thain, stirred the gallery to laughter as he said he was convicted of bootlegging, making moonshine, and was sentenced to three months. Mr. Justice MacKay threatened to clear the court room if there was a recurrence of any "demonstration of merriment." Sharkey testified he was talking with Thain in the jail corridor about the end of April this year.

Jury Out Two Hours

Admissibility of Sharkey's evidence was questioned by defense counsel, Robt. McCullough, and the jury was asked to retire while the question was being considered. They were also previously absent while Martin's astounding statement was reviewed first to Mr. Justice MacKay.

During the absence of the jury, C. L. Snyder, K.C., special Crown Prosecutor, proposed to Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay that he also determine whether a statement taken by Provincial Police Sergeant Harry Thompson from the accused, Fred Thain, in the court building on February 3 should also be admitted as evidence to be presented to the jury. Argument by counsel continued for nearly two hours. Mr. Justice MacKay decided that the evidence of Sharkey and also the Thain statement to police should be given to the jury. At the request of Mr. Snyder the noon adjournment was made at twelve o'clock until 2.15 with Sharkey to be recalled to the stand. Sharkey had already told the court that Thain met him in a corridor of the jail and asked him "Did you hear anything about my case? Its been in the papers." At that point the jury left the chamber, and Sharkey went on with his recital of Thain's story to him about his sleighs breaking down while he was in the vicinity of the Wellman farm and of his going to the store to buy shells.

Rawdon township farmers continue to manifest a keen interest in the progress of the case. About fifty of those who crowded the court room Tuesday morning had brought lunches and stayed in their seats during the two-hour adjournment. Again today there was a scramble to get into the court for the opening session, but the room was cleared for airing. The audience took to the stairway, which was crowded from top to bottom awaiting for the continuance of the case and the re-opening of the doors at 2 o'clock. Most of those two hundred or more were apparently those who preferred to go without lunch to be first in line for afternoon seats.

Sharkey Recalled.

Henry Sharkey of Sulphide was recalled to the stand as the court resumed the Thain trial this afternoon. He was a prisoner in jail for moonshine making last spring from March 16 for a term of three months. He said he met the accused Fred Thain in jail.

"About the end of April he and I were sleeping in the corridor together. He asked if I had seen anything in the papers about his case, that he would like to have read about it. He said he had bought some shells at the corner store, and had gone to the Wellmans' house. The old lady was sick in bed and then he went to the barn where Mr. Wellman was milking a cow. He said he had used some shells, but I didn't ask him any question about them. He said he was driving through a field and saw two men cutting wood. He also said he had some shells hidden at his house, and he was going to have them in court and swear they were the shells he had used."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Oct. 30—(AP).—Clarence Clark Hamlin, 72, publisher of The Gazette and The Telegraph, political leader in Colorado nearly 40 years, and one of the United States West's best known attorneys, died last night at his home. New Order Bars Houde Running

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—The Federal Cabinet yesterday spiked the plans of Mayor Camillien Houde to run for re-election in Montreal from behind the barbed-wire fences of an Ontario internment camp.

An Order-in-Council amending the Defence of Canada Regulations, passed Tuesday afternoon, provides that no internee shall be eligible for public office.

The Cabinet went further than providing that no internee should be permitted to attempt stirring up of discord at elections; it ruled that persons who are members of organizations declared illegal, or who advocate the principles of such organizations, likewise become automatically ineligible for office.

This second clause should end the annual assault on the electors by Toronto Communists. As the list of banned organizations is large, there should be no opportunity of Communists getting on the ballot paper through one of their many affiliated bodies.

to the dazzling displays of hospitality in which one foreign country vied with another to attract the most notable guests but it has created a problem for those whose official capacities require them to entertain.

It would never do to have the German ambassador brought into an accidental meeting with the representative of the British government in Washington while the latter was discussing a cocktail with the Polish ambassador.

Fortunately the ambassador and ministers concerned "play ball" with hosts and hostesses. Those from the aggressor nations, Germany, Italy and Japan, go about very little.

When they make necessary calls at the State Department or White House their arrival is known well in advance. They conclude their business with all speed and leave at once.

There was a recent instance of a British Embassy official calling upon a high officer of the United States State Department while the Italian Ambassador was there.

It seemed certain that a meeting would occur in the ante-room until a bright under-secretary solved the difficulty by asking the British official to step into the office of another department officer who wished to talk with him. When the Italian had left the British official was taken in to his appointment and he never knew of the incident.

At the annual diplomatic reception in the White House, about the middle of December, there was difficulty last year in arranging matters so that representatives of enemy countries would not come into conflict.

That task will be doubly difficult when the reception is held this December because so many more countries are involved.

Those on the staffs of the embassies and legations involved in the war have strict orders from their superiors not to make themselves conspicuous and to avoid publicity.

The British fighters gave the invaders battle just after they crossed the sea. From the cloud banks hiding them from watchers below came the rattle of machine-gun fire and the whine of diving planes. In a short time the Nazis flew off.

German long-range guns mounted on the French Coast fired across the misty Dover Strait into the Dover area this afternoon, but no casualties or damage were reported when the firing ceased at 3 p.m.

Four R.A.F. pilots were known to have been saved of 7 downed yesterday.

Highlight of yesterday's air fighting was the performance of a Scottish auxiliary squadron which took only 10 minutes to knock down eight Messerschmitts 109.

The German casualties were increased by their revival of mass-attack methods which they had not used for some time. The Nazi's concentrated yesterday's attacks mostly on London and the Portsmouth naval station.

London's second alarm of the day was sounded in mid-afternoon.

This evening the Air Ministry said "only a number of small enemy formations" crossed the southeast coast without penetrating far inland. A few bombs were dropped "and little damage done and few casualties caused."

The communique stated that 28 German planes were destroyed yesterday and two bombers during the night.

Five Nazi planes were destroyed today and four British planes lost, the ministry said.

No Peace, Even In Death

Nazi bombers pay a visit to a rural town in the southeast of England and spread destruction even over a peaceful cemetery. The wreckage pictured is from a church which stood next to the cemetery.

War Created On Y.W.C.A. New Demands

Instead of a drop in Y.W.C.A. activities because of so many new demands, the Y.W.C.A. is crowded every day almost to capacity and officials are wishing the building were larger and that there were more hours in the day.

The reporter who dropped in the other day found several meetings of city organizations; swimming pool, gymnasium and club rooms filled; the office so busy there was no time for reports. Between calls, Miss Brownscombe said all clubs but one were up to and past the enrolment record of last year; two new clubs have been organized and another club getting together. All club programs include educational projects and service work.

The Gym-Swim-Club is meeting the needs of industrial girls with a program of gymnasium drill, swimming for recreation, and club activities for educational and social contacts.

The Saturday afternoon clubs reach a large number of children who enjoy stories, cooking, sewing, handicraft and parties, all for the small sum of 2 cents each Saturday which the children are encouraged to bring.

The Friday Supper club started off the season 90 strong and has now reached its full membership of 100.

A Junior High School club has just been organized and will meet Thursday afternoons.

The Happy Hour, Old Country club and Thirty-eight club are all most enthusiastic "Y" members.

At the request of a number for swimming, instruction arrangements will be made for a class each week. Miss Leone Comstock will take over instruction of two dancing classes.

Gymnasium classes all have a good registration and it is hoped this will be a record year. Girls are feeling if they are to be physically fit for heavier war time work they need the 'keep fit' exercises and recreation of gymnasium classes. Basketball and badminton provide recreation for groups during hours when the gymnasium is free.

The Y.W.C.A. Residence has been filled to capacity with extra beds put up for transients. Fifteen new business girls, besides students, have come in this Fall and are now residents. Groups of soldier boys have found friends at the "Y" and almost every evening finds groups around the piano.

The Girls' council has undertaken a busy year. They are sponsoring the Hallowe'en Party, November first, and a series of social evenings for members and boy friends each Monday evening.

Trouble In Norway

London, Oct. 30. (CP)

THE NORWEGIAN Telegraph Agency reported today that it had received information that there have been 'violent demonstrations against the new order in Norway, especially at Bergen."

The agency said there have also been demonstrations at Trondheim.

FDR's Secretary In Police Tangle

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP)—A New York negro policeman reported today that he had been kicked in the groin by a man attempting to board President Roosevelt's special train Monday night, and in Washington Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, said he "gave the knee" to an officer who ignored his credentials. James Sloane, 42, the negro policeman, said a man, unknown to him and carrying no credentials, appeared at a gate on the lower level of Pennsylvania Station and, after being halted, kicked him.

Sloane was reported confined to his bed, suffering from complications of a recent hernia injury. He was treated by a police surgeon for contusions of the abdomen.

The patrolman said he had been given "strict orders not to speak about this case."

Meanwhile, Early, asked about the incident, said that when he reached the train his party was halted by a squad of policemen, headed by a sergeant, who said: "Ain't nobody going to go in there."

Early said that he and other party members exhibited identification cards, but that the sergeant made the same reply. The policemen then began to push, he said and he pushed back.

In the ensuing scramble, he said, he put up both hands to ward off the police and "gave the knee to one of them" coming at him from the side.

Still unable to pass, added Early, he and his party went to an upper floor and identified themselves to a police captain, who escorted them to the train.

Captain Walter Harding, commander of the West 123rd Street Police Station, said he was making a "complete investigation of the case and had already interviewed several persons.

Reprisals In Bombing

Always is there that question about fighting a war in two days or by two sets of rules which are entirely different. We refer to the bombing of war time. The German theory is to batter and break London because it is the capital of the United Kingdom and because it contains the greatest number of people. It is not a military objective in any sense of the word, but it has been badly battered by the Germans. The homes of the people have been smashed and the women and children have been killed as though they were combatants actively engaged in carrying on the war.

The Royal Air Force adheres to the plan of striking military objectives. It goes for munitions factories, shipyards, troop concentrations, oil storage centres and so on, and its aim is deadly and its work is effective.

The word "retaliation" or "reprisal" is continually coming to the front, and there are numerous advocates of the cause of reprisal. Bomb the Germans in their homes; let them know what the war is like which they are inflicting on other people. Possibly the people in Germany have never heard that the homes in Britain have been bombed or that people in country lanes have been machine-gunned. They get only such information as their censors care to give out, and it may not be considered advisable to tell them that German pilots bomb everything in sight.

British opinion is divided. We have read articles in British papers advocating a return of the kind of bombing Germans have been doing, but the feeling is not unanimous. From the London Times we quote extracts from letters on this question:

GENERAL SIR IAN HAMILTON: "I am sure that there are many of our airmen who would jib at an order to bomb women and children."

PROFESSOR E. M. CAMMAERTS: "The adoption of such methods would strengthen the hands of Nazi propagandists who have repeatedly accused the Allies of the very crimes which their masters were about to commit."

REV. J. R. LAMB: "I have been much around the East End, and no one even among those poor people who have lost home and relatives has used the word 'reprisal'."

THE BISHOP OF LEWIS: "To bomb the defenceless would be to degrade our arms, to betray our trust, to lower our nation to the level of the enemy. Satan cannot cast out Satan. But God will."

SIR W. BEACH THOMAS: "It would be 'a sin in the soul' to ask our men to bomb the homes of women and children of set purpose."

GENERAL SIR H. PRICE: "I very much doubt that reprisals on civilians will have any real effect."

ADMIRAL SIR B. BERTHELOT: "To copy Nazi brutality is not the way to beat the enemy....Copy the methods of the Nazi and the grand morale of our Forces and of our people would rapidly fail."

THE BISHOP OF SOUTHAMPTON: "Could we rely on our airmen to maintain their present superhuman standard of courage and skill if they were called on to carry out what the fine flower of them would regard as dirty work?"

The Ottawa Journal after discussing this question, comes to the conclusion it is a decision which will have to be made in Britain, because it is there that the people are suffering. It leaves the matter wide open in this comment:

"If they should decide to give Germany such a shellacking as may make the name of Hitler something of a stench to the German people and may alter their crazy ideas about the beauty of war, it is not likely, we fancy, that many Canadians will shed tears."

From the cold point of military tactics we believe it has been demonstrated that the sort of bombing to which Germany has subscribed is not the ultimately successful or effective sort.

The bombing of London has driven the British people to efforts never before approached.

It has solidified the people as nothing else could have done.

It has brought into existence a form and degree of determination such as the country has not known previously.

It has established in the eyes of the world the fact that Germany is brutal beyond belief.

It has shown that such bombing has not crippled Britain as her power to strike is infinitely greater today than it was three months ago.

It has made the world conscious of the mentality of the naked and revealed inward Germany.

It has spurred United States to far greater efforts to make certain that assistance is forthcoming in greater volume for Britain.

Apart from that there is revealed to the world a type of British citizenship which could have been reflected in no other way. It refuses to bomb women and children. Bombing for the sake of destruction and killing people will not win a war. Bombing military objectives, munitions plants, oil centres and such, and bombing them out of existence will produce far greater results.

The Man Who Runs Away

When a member of the R.C.A.F. was doing picket duty in Toronto he was struck by a car and so seriously injured that he died. The driver of the car did not wait, but an arrest has since been made.

That brings to a total of 159 the number of hit-run cases in Toronto alone in 1940, and it is reasonable, if not gladsome, to anticipate the number will increase. A miserable thing like that will not vanish at once and of its own volition.

A farmer walking home from Warkworth with his son was struck, and the father was so seriously hurt that he died. In this case arrests have also been made.

There is nothing red-blooded or sincere about running away from the injury one has done. It probably comes from that feeling that safety lies in getting some distance away. But it doesn't.

There is nothing more stupid. The man who has been in an accident of that sort, and who stays and does what he can to help put things right, is doing two things: (1) he is acting like a man, and (2) he is putting himself in the best possible light in the eyes of the law. His position is at once infinitely better than that of the driver who runs away.

The man who runs away must live in fear and torment. Wherever he goes he will have the feeling that some one is looking for him. If his car has incriminating marks on it he can't go to get it fixed for fear he will be walking into the arms of the law.

What we do need is some juries in the land which will stand up to their duty in such cases and not wince at bringing into a verdict of manslaughter. Charging these people with dangerous driving because it is feared a jury would not convict on a manslaughter charge is too weak in the spine and it is not doing anything to discourage the hit-run custom. In Toronto alone 159 hit-run cases so far this year is appalling.

A Sensible Bylaw

Toronto City Council has given the necessary three readings to a bylaw dealing with parked cars. This one says that the driver of a car who parks and fails to take the key out of the ignition shall be subject to a fine of from $1 to $10.

Municipalities have a habit of passing a good many bylaws, but this one looks sensible and right, even if it may be quite a problem to catch the guilty and collect the fines.

Leaving the key in the car is just a habit, and a rather sloppy one.

It is more or less an invitation to the loose-minded element in the community to sit down and drive off.

After which the car owner communicates with the police and expects the whole department to be turned to his account for the undoing of something he could have prevented by the simple act of putting the car key in his pocket. Toronto's bylaw looks all right from this distance.

If Woodsworth Drops Out

The national convention of the C.C.F. in session at Winnipeg has decided not to accept the resignation of J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., as president and leader of the Parliamentary group. Mr. Woodsworth has two good reasons for desiring to resign: (1) he suffered a stroke some time ago, from the effects of which he has not fully recovered, and (2) differences of opinion regarding the war issue.

Mr. Woodsworth has always been a pacifist and still is, and from that attitude he will not change.

The trouble is that when J. S. Woodsworth drops out of the active leadership of the C.C.F., there is apt to be quite a hole made in the organization and in its place in the public life of Canada. The C.C.F. has a scheme and a plan and a way of living which originated with J. S. Woodsworth. He nursed it along until in the election of 1935 there were seven members returned; in 1940 there were eight, and with the exception of one member they are all from the West.

Saying farewell to J. S. Woodsworth will be something the same as removing the mainspring from a watch.

He'd Be a Grand Example

A resident of Toronto, but formerly living in Lindsay, appeared in magistrate's court in Lindsay charged with non-support. It was a strange story which unfolded. He had been married and was living with his wife and two children in Lindsay when he picked up and went to Toronto.

In the larger city he lived with another woman, formerly from Lindsay, whose husband was dead. There were three children in the family, and during his residence there two more were added. For the past six years he has been supporting the woman in Toronto and the five children, and apparently had neglected sending as much as a thin dime for the support of his legal wife and their children in Lindsay.

This poor mut had the effrontery to tell court he was seeking to bring up the five children in Toronto "in a righteous and God-fearing way," but his zeal did not find any channel for expression in making certain that his wife and two children in Lindsay had anything to wear, a hod of coal to keep them warm or a slice of bread to eat. He merely walked out and left his responsibility to those who might care to assume it.

He is now ordered to pay through the Children's Aid Society $2 a week for the support of each of his children, and that will probably turn into another of those cases where the chief problem of the future will be to get it.

There's No Other Course

There were two items in the day's news, and they had their origin at widely-separated points. First we take a report from Montreal telling about a strike at the plant of Canadian Vickers where 150 members of the Independent Industrial Union of Shipyard Workers went on strike the second time within four days.

The other report is from London, and tells of an address by Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, for years one of the outstanding labor leaders in Britain. This he said:

"Any one who promotes or perpetuates labor disputes in the United Kingdom while Britain is at war is a friend of Hitler and an enemy of liberty and democracy. Britain cannot afford quarrels between labor and management. If the war is lost everything will be lost.

"Our navy must be given every ship it requires and every gun, so it can nullify the boastful threat of Hitler to blockade us and starve us into submission."

Admittedly we do not know the full text of the grievances at the marine section of the Vickers plant in Montreal, but we do know that the straight words of Ernest Bevin are just as applicable in this country as they are in the land from which he spoke.

Management and workers have a responsibility in these days which certainly was not present in days of peace when a strike or a lockout or any other such form of trouble affected chiefly the people immediately concerned.

Today every last man who is working is pointing his efforts toward victory or defeat and we can't think in terms of defeat. Therefore we must work for victory. In this hour we can't have strikes and we cannot tolerate lockouts.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Australian airlines flew 100,000,000 passenger miles during a year with no injury to a paying patron. That news is probably sent out to keep people from asking for passes.

It is announced that No. 2 highway will soon be extended in its two-way dimension as far as Oshawa in the interests of safety. May be, but it beats all how the boys can wrap their cars around the poles along those superhighways.

Two German prisoners escaped from a western internment camp, and after being allowed to roam a while they walked right into the arms of the officers as expected. The business of escaping has been so far a 100 per cent. failure as they have all been captured.

BRAVE MEN

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Wee Angus' gang have plans I know, of what they'll do and where they'll go, when it comes Hallowe'en; they've been in conference I hear, and planned things most uncommon queer, they're sly and very keen.

¶ I know that they've been out before, they rapped upon a neighbor's door, they swiped a garbage can; and they had plans to pinch a gate, the owner hollered words of hate, right then they turned and ran.

¶ We told Wee Angus and his men, that they should gather home at ten, for that was late enough; they all agreed that would be fine, to play their havoc they'd have time, nor would they grow too rough.

¶ But when it came to nine o'clock, I heard their feet pound down the block, I asked not what they'd done; I merely opened up the door, said not a word of going out more, were glad enough to come.

¶ They said they'd play some little game, it struck me then as rather tame; for bold destructive men; and they were quiet and gentle too, of boisterous words had very few, no damage left in them.

¶ The place they dumped the garbage can, there lived an active sort of man, nor was he slow or frail; he'd hollered at them just in fun, and said he knew them every one—he'd land them all in jail.

Few Gay Times In Washington; Things on Edge

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — This doesn't promise to be a colorful diplomatic winter in Washington. Normally the various embassies and legations in the U.S. capital are regular whirlpools of social activity from late autumn until early spring. It's as much business of an ambassador or a minister plenipotentiary to be noted for his brilliant entertainments as it is for him to represent his country competently at the state department. But it's hard to see how they're going to do it during the coming season.

Lord Lothian

Lord Lothian, now home in Britain, reporting to his government but expected back soon, may contrive to pull off a successful party or two.

What chance, however, does Charge d'Affaires Hans Thomsen stand of getting any invitations accepted, to attend functions at Germany's headquarters on Massachusetts Ave.? Why, Thomsen is responsible for the behavior of Hitler's consuls in the United States, and three of 'em (in New York, San Francisco and New Orleans) have been accused of disseminating Nazi propaganda in our midst. Hans will be lucky if Washington diplomats don't break off diplomatic relations with him altogether.

Italy isn't much more popular than Germany. Mussolini's embassy did try to throw a reception recently but scarcely anyone attended it, except a few Germans and Japanese.

As for the Japs, it's well recognized that they couldn't get a corporal's guard to drink their cocktails or eat their raw (but palatable) fish.

RUSSIA BETTER OFF

AMBASSADOR Constantine Oumansky might draw a respectable crowd. Not so far back, the Russian embassy made the attempt and it was boycotted about 90 per cent, despite its champagne and caviar. Now, though the U.S. likes the Soviet outfit a little better it still hates 'em as Communists, but there are hints that they may have temporary common interests with Comrade Stalin versus Japan.

Everybody's sorry for France, but there's no enthusiasm for its new Ambassador Henri-Haye, as representative of the capitulated Petain regime.

Then there are the overrun small democracies' spokesmen—from Poland, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland, etcetera. Their legations are hanging on quite numerously in Washington. However, with no governments of their own back home, they're mere orphans—no money to entertain company with. Callers at their addresses need to take their drinks with 'em—and share those with the ministers and the latters' sub-officials, whom they're calling on. Furthermore, it's like going to a funeral to visit such places.

Ambassador Hu Shih of China somehow manages to maintain a pretty good lick. He gave a cocktail celebration the other day which was quite a success. His recent predecessor, Dr. C. T. Wang, had to resign, his secretary, Dr. Y. F. Lieu, told me, because his home government couldn't finance him any longer, and his own wallet was empty, too. Dr. Hu Shih seems to have resources of his own.

All told, it looks like a dull diplomatic winter in Washington.

Evidently we're going to be dependent on Lord Lothian, Hu Shih and our Latin American continent. They're hardly enough to go around.

THAT CHAPLIN FILM

INCIDENTALLY, speaking of diplomacy, the state department has been waiting for a reaction, from Berlin and Rome, to the new movie, "The Great Dictator," in which Chaplin caricatures Adolf Hitler as Adenoid Hynkel, the Phooey of Tomania, and Jack Oakie caricatures Benito Mussolini as Benzino Napoloni, the Duce of Bacteria.

The department actually got international repercussions when Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York said Adolf's wax image ought to be put in the chamber of horrors.

Berlin said officially that it thought the federal government should keep Fiorello corked up, and wasn't a bit satisfied with the state department's answer that it hadn't a bit of authority over him as mayor of New York.

So it was surmised that "The Great Dictator" might evoke protests from Berlin and Rome alike.

Of course, the dictators' difficulty is that, whereas Mayor La Guardia mentioned Adolf by name, neither Adolf nor Benito was specifically designated in "The Great Dictator." If they howl, they're placed in the position of saying "The caps fit; we hereby put 'em on."

INSTINCT OF BRITAIN

The instinct that makes a mother protect her child and a man his wife at the risk of their own lives is spread to a wider circumference by every man and woman and child. A letter from England says: "I saw three little girls run into a shelter after four successive nights of bombing. Each had a doll in her arms, and each held her hand over the doll's face to protect it."—Dorothy Thompson, Columnist.

SERVING? YES

"I daresay you've got great-grandchildren serving?"

"Aye. There's young Betty there—'er'll be glad to serve 'ee wi' a couple o' pints."

• Students at Queen's Seek Good Will

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—It was with deep regret that I read your recent editorial about the incident which occurred on our campus one week ago today.

An interfaculty fracas (but not a RIOT) did take place, of a slightly different nature than those of former days. This was due, perhaps, to the fact that we are living in such perilous and trying times and to the fact that an orthodox outlet for nervous energies was discarded when the intercollegiate games were cancelled.

We suggest that had it not been for the editorial in a local journal the whole affair might have passed unnoticed. As it is, the noble institution that is Queen's, has received much adverse publicity.

Queen's men are proud of their university and of its spirit and tradition. It is for this reason that all the unfair criticism has aroused the student body to anger and inspired the numerous letters of protest.

After a true estimate was taken it was found that less damage was done in the fight than outward appearances and other influences had previously led us to suppose.

May we further point out that such a single, isolated incident is not indicative of our student conduct in general.

Queen's students are, on the whole, vigorous, industrious and intelligent. Their record in trade, commerce, science and the arts is sufficient proof of this statement. They achieved by far the best record in C.O.T.C. work and C.O.T.C. examinations for last year. We also refer you to the large number of our men who have joined the army, navy and air force.

Queen's students, like other patriotic Canadians, have dutifully subjected themselves to new and ever-increasing burdens which arose out of our inspired war effort.

Today Queen's students are quietly going about their regular, nerve-straining work of attending academic and military lectures, of studying and drilling. That is our normal life at university and that is the way we would like our public to know us and think about us. Tuesday's incident was only an incident, an outburst and nothing more. Had it not been for unfavorable criticism, we students might have forgotten the entire matter.

The soldiers and Kingstonians are becoming convinced that they have a grievance with the students. This false and harmful impression must be corrected before it is too late. The students are actively engaged in a program designed to curb this ill-feeling. In the church, in athletics and on the street the students are openly working for mutual friendship and co-operation.

We realize, of course, that the Whig-Standard is affiliated with your worthy paper. The local editor has, in all fairness, agreed to print the letters addressed to him.

May we solicit your support and enlist your influence in encouraging co-operation and friendship among the three bodies mentioned? The cause is great. Help us to pass around "the pipe of peace." Thank you.

• The Function of the Electoral College

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—When the office of President of the United States was created the electoral college also came into existence. It gave the framers of the constitution much concern and it was a long time before it was perfected. The electoral college is a safeguard thrown around the office of President to prevent it from turning back to a monarchial power or be dominated by a demagogue because it gives the balance of power to the thickly populated states.

On the first week of August preceding presidential election the legislators meet in Lansing (and the same is done in the other states) and appoint the electors-at-large. Their names are not on the ballot and we do not vote for them. No one who holds any office in the gift of the federal government, such as a judge, postmaster, or collector of customs can be appointed. They are usually party workers or wheel horses within their own parties and they are appointed without regard to their political faith.

They are in duty bound to vote for the highest man in the ballot; that is, the man receiving the highest number of popular votes. Thus if the president and vice-president are from the same state the electors can only vote for president. In case of a tie in the popular vote (which has never yet occurred) the secretary of that state can cast the deciding vote.

On the first week of December following elections the electors meet in the capitals of their various states and record their votes on a secret ballot. Those votes are sealed by the clerk of the House and sent to the president of the senate in Washington, who is vice-president of United States. On the first week of February before organization those votes are opened and counted before both Houses by the clerk of the Senate, and the new President of United States is duly elected.

TOURIST CHUCKLED

A FROLICSOME American tourist put the wind up a desk clerk and a number of guests in a Moncton, N.B., hotel rather badly one evening not long back. Entering the hotel, he enquired about accommodations, decided on a room, and made a move to register. Then, poising the pen hesitantly above the blank card, he remarked in loud, clear tones: "When you see where I come from, you may not want me in your hotel."

The clerk looked a bit alarmed and a lot astonished, while several bystanders moved closer into positions of vantage. Boldly the traveller inscribed his name, then, in the space allotted to "City or Town" wrote in large letters, "Berlin." A horrified gasp went up from the onlookers, but the visitor merely chuckled in keen appreciation of his own jest as he completed the address with the words:

"New Hampshire."—Maclean's Magazine.

ARMY HOSTESSES

ARMY CAMPS aren't night clubs. Some at least of the 37 young women who applied Wednesday to the Army recruiting office in Detroit for positions as camp hostesses seem to have thought they were.

Uncle Sam is rather choosy about the type of woman to look after the boys who wear his uniform. She need not be very young or very beautiful. She must, however, have a high school education or its equivalent, and at least one year's experience as a hostess or in a similar occupation. Senior hostesses must be between 30 and 50 years of age and junior hostesses between 25 and 45.

We suggest that young women looking for a career, who haven't these qualifications, try Hollywood instead of footlessly bothering the recruiting office.—Detroit Free Press.

NO DECADENCE THERE

When 477 school children from Great Britain went to Australia, they were feted at every port where the ship stopped. At one place the children were taken on a picnic and they consumed 300 oranges, 1,000 apples, 2,000 creams and 300 pounds of candy. And not one stomach ache was registered in the whole crowd. Think of that and then snap your fingers at anyone who says the British are a decadent people.—Windsor Star.

NAMES GERMANIZED

IT IS reported by the Basle National Zeitung (says Reuter) that every one in Alsace-Lorraine with a French Christian name or surname must Germanize it in accordance with a recent decree. The decree provides, says the newspaper, that in cases where the name cannot be Germanized a new name must be chosen. All inscriptions on tombstones must henceforth be written in German instead of French.—London Times.

A Bit of Nonsense

Other Way Round

"Has this man got an account here?" asked the caller at the bank in the wild and wooly West.

"Why, yes," said the manager.

"Then why did you return his cheque to me marked 'No funds'?"

"Oh," replied the manager, "that doesn't mean this man has no funds. It means the bank has no funds."

Waiting For It

A small boy out with his mother was given a sixpence to put in the collecting box to help buy a Spitfire.

The mother walked on, but missed the boy. Looking back, she noticed he was still standing by the man with the box.

"Come along, hurry up," she called.

"Not yet," said the boy. "I haven't got my Spitfire yet."

A Bible Message for Today . . . .

For we know in part and prophesy in part.

But when that which is perfect is come that which is in part shall be done away.

When I was a child I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man I put away childish things.

For now we see through a glass, darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even also as I am known.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, but the greatest of these is charity.

THE EDITOR WEDS

THE newspapers are giving a free ride to a new type of marriage reporting which was introduced, it seems, by a small newspaper in Iowa called the Augusta Union. The editor of the Union, remembering that bridegrooms usually receive little attention at the hands of the society news reporters, decided that he would vary the rule a little when it came his time to marry.

Under the caption, "Ye Editor Takes Himself a Bride," he wrote as follows for his own newspaper:

"Clarence (Tudy) Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers, of Osseo, became the husband of Miss Margaret Gilbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gilbertson, of Augusta, in a beautiful ring ceremony Saturday noon before a Justice of the Peace in Waukon, Ia.

"Blushing prettily, he replied to the questions of the Justice in low but firm tones, never indicating that he noted the omission of the 'obey' in the bride's answers.

"He was attractively attired in a three-piece suit of black pin-stripe woollen material, consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat was charmingly festooned with a white flower in the left buttonhole.

"The vest was sleeveless, closed in the front and gracefully fashioned with pockets. It was held together at the back with a strap and buckle.

"His pants were neatly pressed for the occasion, and he wore them with an air as if he little suspected it would be the last time he 'wore the pants' in that family, as the familiar expression goes.

"Hose and necktie added just the right dash of color to complement the effect. Shoes were of genuine leather, laced with strings of the same color, giving a chic effect."

AIMING AT WILLKIE

CCF Will Leave Woodsworth Presidency Open

WINNIPEG, Oct. 30. — (CP).—Delegates to the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation's sixth national convention late yesterday appointed their retiring leader, J. S. Woodsworth, as the organization's first honorary president. It was a unanimous decision of the fifty delegates from coast to coast.

At the same time the convention decided against filling the national presidency which Mr. Woodsworth is vacating because of ill health. It was a post he held since foundation of the C.C.F. in 133.

Unanimous re-election as national chairman of M. J. Coldwell, was also recorded as delegates quickly ran through election of officers for the next two years. Mr. Coldwell has been national chairman for the last three years.

Vice-chairman will be Angus MacInnis, who fills the post formerly held by Grant McNeill of Vancouver. Mr. McNeill did not stand for re-election.

Mr. Woodsworth who has represented Winnipeg North Centre in the House of Commons since 1921, was nominated for the honorary presidency by S. J. Farmer of Winnipeg, leader of the C.C.F. forces in the Manitoba Legislature. The convention quickly and enthusiastically passed approval on the appointment, which maintains Mr. Woodsworth's connection with an organization he steadfastly fostered since its birth.

Mr. Woodsworth tendered his resignation Monday, explaining he did not see his way clear to continue as national president because of his difference in view with other members regarding the war. At the September, 1939, session of the Commons, when Canada's war declaration was made, Mr. Woodsworth reiterated his pacifist stand while Mr. Coldwell favored participation in the conflict.

While in Ottawa last May, the 66-year-old C.C.F. leader, noted for his campaigning for labor and social reform, suffered a paralytic stroke. Duties of active leader will fall on the shoulders of Mr. Coldwell, 51-year-old school principal of Regina.

Bonarlaw Dance Nets W.I. $113

BONARLAW, Oct. 30— (ENS).—The dance sponsored by the Bonarlaw Group of the Springbrook Women's Institute held in the Orange Hall at Springbrook on Friday evening of last week was a decided success, the hall being filled to the doors and over $113 being taken in at the door. The net proceeds will be used for war work. The popular Austin's Orchestra of Wooler furnished excellent music for round and square dancing, and the large number of dancers was well handled by floor manger James Mitts of Stirling. As many as one hundred and sixty dancers were counted on the floor at one time.

Lunch was served by the ladies at midnight, after which the dancing continued until 2 a.m.

Find Time Bomb Upon U.S. Troop Transport

PANAMA, Panama, Oct. 30—(AP). — Crew members of the United States troop transport Republic said last night that an attempt to blow up the ship with a time bomb had been frustrated soon after the ship left San Francisco for the Canal Zone.

The story, as related by the crew awaiting transit to the Atlantic here, was that H. F. Dodd, master of arms on the Republic, loaded with 3,000 troops and passengers, detected a "queer smell" just out of San Francisco, and discovered a smoking box stowed among other objects in the last hold.

Dodd was said to have found a "time bomb" in the box which members of the crew said held enough nitro-glycerine — some said two quarts—to have blown the ship "clear out of the water."

Dodd, they said, picked up the box, and, "praying all the way, made his way to the decks, where a member of the crew helped him toss the 'bomb' overboard."

Few of the passengers, troops or crewmen were aware "how close they were to disaster," these informants said.

U.S. Wants Vichy To Tip Her On Fleet Moves

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 — (AP) The United States, concerned over potential threats to American interests, was reported in informed quarters today to have asked the Vichy regime to supply official information concerning any change in the status of the French fleet or strategic French colonies, especially Dakar.

American naval and military experts consider that relinquishment of the French fleet—or the Dakar air and naval base—to Germany would be detrimental both to American interests and to the security of the Western Hemisphere.

It was learned authoritatively that the State Department had approached the French government on the question of the French navy "before and since the armistice," and, while there was no official confirmation, it was understood that renewed representations had been made in recent days.

The French fleet, according to the latest unofficial figures, consists of 192 warships (64 of them still under construction) and could play an important role in the Mediterranean or off Dakar.

Backing Hull Views.

President Roosevelt's message of Marshal Petain, chief of the Vichy regime, sent last week at the moment Petain was conferring with Hitler, was interpreted as designed to reinforce the previously expressed questions and views transmitted by State Secretary Cordell Hull. No official information on this subject, however, has yet been released.

The Roosevelt message was generally understood in informed circles, nevertheless, to have been an appeal to Petain not to submit to any German demands which might force France into belligerent action against its former British ally, or cause a clash between French and American interests.

American apprehension over the future of the French fleet was made plain, it was learned, just before the French government was forced to flee from Paris. Renewed representations have since been made at Bordeaux, Tours and Vichy, the successive subsequent capitals of unoccupied France.

52 Tank Officers Train In England

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Oct. 30 — (CP Cable). — Twelve officers and 40 non-commissioned officers from the new Canadian Armored Brigade at Camp Borden, Ont., are in England receiving instruction in tank fighting tactics with crack British armored units.

Led by Major R. Back of London, Ont., the tank experts are remaining three months, working with the unit and attending tank schools. Then they are returning to Canada to aid the Brigade under Col. F. F. Worthington in advanced training.

Major J. V. Allard of Three Rivers, Que., said the training received here, which the officers will be able to pass on when they return home, is just what the Brigade needs and that probably after 9 months Canadian armored units will be ready to move overseas to join the Canadian Corps.

Other senior officers here are Major M. P. Johnston, Capt. R. Schell, Capt. E. Irwin, all of Oshawa, Ont., and Major W. Helpenny, Winnipeg. Officers and several non-commissioned officers have already been placed with British armored regiments in defence areas, and will alternate for training. Sergt. E. Hodson and Cpl. G. Goodwin are Montrealers operating now with a British tank squadron.

3 Years Wheat For Britain Now In Canada

LONDON, Oct. 30—(CP Cable).—Canada has "enough grain at present to meet all Britain's needs for three years," Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, said today.

The Dominion is able to produce the United Kingdom's bacon requirements for next year, the minister told newsmen. Canada is able to send this country enough bacon to make up the gap used by the loss of supplies from Denmark.

Mr. Gardiner said the conclusion of agreements on the marketing of Canadian food products in the Kingdom awaits his return to Ottawa shortly and discussions with officials there.

"No final agreements will be reached while I am here," he declared.

Britain is "prepared to take all she can," of Canadian grain. The minister estimated it will cost approximately $600,000,000 to finance the farmers pending disposal of the existing wheat surplus. He was confident that an agreement can be reached between the British and Canadian Governments on this problem.

Much Already Stored

Mr. Gardiner said "a considerable quantity" of Canadian wheat is at present stored in the United Kingdom, but he did not state exactly how much.

The Dominion is faced with the problem of marketing about 720,000,000 bushels of wheat after allowing for domestic consumption of 130,000,000 bushels—the average annual figure, Mr. Gardiner added. Britain's average of annual imports from all countries is 200,000,000 bushels.

"Canada has increased production in certain lines, mainly dairy products and bacon, as much as possible," the Agriculture Minister continued. "Unforeseen events resulted in our having greater supplies than was anticipated, particularly in bacon. "The position has been made known to the British Government and our supplies will be made available to meet Britain's needs."

Seventy per cent of Canada's cheese production at present is coming to the United Kingdom, Mr. Gardiner said.

He added that he had talks on "general lines" with Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, concerning news going to Canada of Britain's war effort, but nothing definite had been decided.

See Competition To Get Man Fierce By 1941

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (CP).—Competition among women for men is going to be "something fierce" in the United States next year, says Gail Aronton. To aid what may be tense situation, she recommends use of a "rat," which is "coming back with a bang."

Beauty editor of a fashion magazine, Miss Aronton outlined prospects of the 1941 campaign to the annual convention of the New York State Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association here yesterday. She estimated that American women would spend 300 per cent more money on beautifying themselves than they spent in 1940.

Reason for the prospective increase is that some 800,000 young men will be drafted into the United States army in the coming year, said Miss Aronton who summed up the situation thus: "Women are very loathe to admit that they would doll themselves up for a man, but fundamentally it's all a very primitive business."

The stylist advocated for women who really are out to catch their man that they use a new and improved version of the 1914 rat. It's contrivance designed to give fullness to hair styles such as the pompadour and Lillian Russel wore one with good effect.

Miss Aronton hastened to explain the rat has gone modern. "Of course, in those days they were made out of artificial hair stuffing and were veritable germ traps," she said. "Today they are streamlined and air-conditioned, as you can see."

WINNIPEG CLUB IS READY TO MAKE TRIP EAST FOR RUGBY GAME

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Except that the pros can sleep a little longer in the morning than some of the amateurs there is little difference between the senior O.H.A. setup and the cash and carry circuits. The seven clubs in the "amateur" organization have adopted the N.H.L. playoff system. In other words they are going to start in playing this week and keep on for the next three or four months and at the end of all that long schedule they will have succeeded in eliminating exactly one lone club. The other six will then start in to decide which outfit shall have the right to be dubbed champions for the season. The senior loop is also copying the N.H.L. system in another respect. Clubs will be permitted to carry and dress fifteen players, a change that should be popular with puck chasers as it opens the way for that many more jobs.

This playoff idea which is found not only in hockey loops but in minor baseball leagues as well has always been screwy. A club that finishes in first place after a long and hard schedule has every right to be considered top dog for the year. Things do not work out that way under this playoff plan which often sees a fourth place club carrying off the championship. However, the public is quite willing to stand for the racket and lay in its money at the box office, so there is every reason to feel that these post-season series are likely to continue and to multiply. After all most of our sport nowadays has got to be a business proposition and if the customers are satisfied, what the heck. The salary list of some of those senior O.H.A. clubs must be high, so you can't blame the moguls for going in heavily for the playoff racket.

There has been considerable fuss over a charge against the coach of an American college football club that in a game last Saturday he was flashing signals to his players on the field by manipulating a roll of paper in his hand. He denied the accusation but that is beside the point. It is difficult to understand why there should be so much indignation over an attempt to run a football club from the side lines when so much other stuff along the same line is accepted without any protest in football across the border. Big colleges depend a great deal upon an elaborate spy system. They send scouts to watch rival clubs in action, study the players, and pick out any mannerisms or habits that betray the play that may happen to be coming up. All this information is studied and digested and then used against the opposition club. That kind of 5th column stuff is apparently quite proper but just let a coach wave a signal to this club to throw a forward pass on the next play and there is a scandal right away.

The Basketball Outlook

Basketball is beginning to shape up at the Y.M.C.A. with the House League for the Dominion Life Trophy as the first event in the winter's program. Something definite as to the composition of the teams which will take part in this preliminary campaign will be announced shortly. The House League will be followed by the City League, about which there is little definite at the present time except that already the Quakers loom up as a distinct championship threat. This is because the porridge crew have not only retained all of last year's strong club but expect to have the services of Jimmy Thorburn, ace scorer of the loop for several seasons. Thorburn is employed at the Quaker plant and is expected to line up with the outfit when the season opens.

A story from the Leafs training camp says that Al Bastien, the young goalie who is trying out with the Toronto outfit uses a first base mitt on his left hand and employs it to advantage in stopping drives at his net. Bastien is a jump ahead of Joe Dwyer, the Petes' old goalie, who was satisfied with a fielder's glove when he performed in the nets. Dwyer was one of the first goalkeepers we remember who preferred the baseball glove to the regular goalie's gloves, although several other local netminders followed his example later. Dwyer scorned other regular equipment, too, wearing a homemade felt body protector instead of the inflated breast pad that was at one time used by goalkeepers. Apparently the Dwyer-devised protection worked all right because he played for years without any serious injuries.

A little story of inside baseball has drifted down from the world series. In that final game after McCormick had led off in the seventh for the Reds with a double the Detroit board of strategy, with Cincinnati down one run, quite naturally looked for a sacrifice from Jimmy Ripple, the next batter, as all season the Reds had been bunting under similar circumstances. Accordingly Newsom dished up a high fast ball to Ripple, as the toughest kind of a ball to bunt. And Ripple promptly slapped the horsehide up against the right field wall for a double counter. Detroit knew that Ripple murdered that kind of ball but they played the batter for a sacrifice. McKechnie, the Reds' manager, had doped out the play in advance and had instructed Ripple to take a cut on the first ball, figuring it would be right where the batter loved them. It was and the Reds are world champions as a result.

Encouraging The Youngsters

A story from Kitchener referring to the fact that the police court has been turned over to the Kitchener-Waterloo Boys' Hockey Association for the purpose of holding an annual meeting is interesting for the light that it throws upon the manner in which hockey is stimulated and encouraged in the Twin Cities. The association operated twenty-three young teams last winter. In the season just opening it is hoped to increase that number. In addition the association will enter two junior B clubs in the Ontario Hockey Association. Kitchener and Waterloo have supplied a lot of players for the National Hockey League and the explanation for that fact is found in the story of this organization which makes it possible for a score of young hockey teams to operate under favorable conditions.

* * * * * *

The difference in the encouragement given budding hockey clubs in Kitchener and Waterloo and that shown in other places helps to explain the presence on the roster of N.H.L. clubs of former K.-W. players. Here in Peterborough for example we have not sent a home-grown player to the N.H.L. since Frank Heffernan played for the Toronto outfit. In fact, only four native sons have got into professional hockey at all, Wilfrid Ranger, Lornie Rose, Mickey Murray and now Bill Calladine. There is certainly need here and in many other Ontario centres of an organization on the lines of the Kitchener-Waterloo Association.

The efforts that are being made by the Sports Service League to arrange an East-West football final to take place at Varsity Stadium, Toronto, on December 7 will have the support of all Eastern fans. At present the annual clash is off because the Western interprovincial union refuse to change its rules to conform with those used in the East with the result that the C.R.U. finally called the whole thing off. A battle in Toronto with all the proceeds going to the Sports Service League would be popular with the sporting public and it is to be hoped that Controller Fred Hamilton's organization will be successful in the ambitious undertaking.

THE DEVIL'S MANSION

By REX JARDIN

CHAPTER 40.

Blair sought out the hotel dining-room captain and found Miss Boardeaux's meal checks. For a woman, who seemed ill and frail, she ordered a good deal....easily enough for two persons, he decided.

After more inquiry, he found the waiter who had taken up her meals. No, there was just the lady in the room....the parlor where he had served her meals. His description tallied with that of the bell boy.

When he had obtained all the information he could, Blair went up to his room to think things out.

He had scarcely entered the room when there was a timid knock at the door.

Frowning, he called, "Come in."

"Just me, sir." The chambermaid put her head in the door, and then entered slowly. 'Sorry to bother you, sir, but there's somethin' I forgot. I thought you might like to know .....seein's you was interested in 708-10."

"What is it?"

"When I went in to clean before thes people what are in there now come, I had to wash off all the mirrors with kerosene. Yes, I did. They was all painted over with something ....an' you couldn't tell when you looked at 'em....except you couldn't see yourself in 'em. No matter how you looked. They was lots of mirrors in the suite....and they was all painted over....even the hand mirror on the dressin' table."

If Blair had been doubtful that Maurice was with Janet, he was positive now.

Was he so awful? Did he even hate his own reflection in the mirror?

The bell boy had not been certain the mysterious lady had told her driver to go to the docks....

Blair was speeding down to them again, anyway, on the chance the boy had heard correctly. This time he had a definite name that Janet was travelling under, that she might have sailed under. He could not understand how she could stay with Maurice when it would have been so easy for her to get away.... Maurice could not be with her all the time.

Why had she made that trip to the docks Friday? Probably, he conjectured to secure passage for herself....and Maurice for some place. But why hadn't she left him then? Why hadn't she run away? Could she be sticking to the bargain she must have made with him at the big house near Boisevain? It was incredible to Blair Rodman. That she was in deathly fear of Maurice, he was certain....but she could get away. The bell boy had said she took only a heavy leather box with her, and had returned with it.

At the docks he found no one by the name of Miss Marie Boardeaux had sailed on Saturday, the date for which she must have had her passage. He eagerly scanned all the lists for that day, but without any success.

The harbor master in charge, in return for a generous sized bill Blair handed him, was very helpful ....but all this availed nothing.

"What's this?" Blair inquired casually as his eyes lighted on the name Wanderer, reading over the list of ships.

"A private yacht owned by Casper Able, of Vancouver. Went out Saturday afternoon for a trip around the world."

"Was Mr. Able aboard?"

"No. I believe not. He leased the yacht for a year to somebody.... with a lot of money. At least, I heard rumors that he did."

"Do you keep a passenger list of yachts?"

"No. We have nothing to do with them. I only know the ship was cleared to leave port Saturday."

"How much of a crew does it carry?"

"About 26, I think. Big boat, one of the nicest here. Mr. Able has been waiting to sell it for some time, though. I suppose he thought he might as well get charter money for her as let her lie idle in the harbor."

He helped Blair find the men who had loaded the Wanderer. They knew nothing of the new lessee, except the only passenger they had seen aboard her was a woman, dressed in tan and heavily veiled. After she went aboard, the Wanderer sailed immediately. Mr. Able had been there to see her off.

Blair, after some difficulty, got hold of Able on the 'phone. Yes, he said, he had chartered the Wanderer for a year to a Miss Marie Boardeaux. She had insisted that there be no public announcement of the deal. She had called him Friday morning about the yacht.

The rental fee, Able said, was $20,000 which had been paid to him in gold when he went to the woman's suite at the Vancouver hotel Saturday morning. She was a very beautiful girl, with light hair and violet eyes. She did not say much. He did most of the talking, telling her about the ship, and showing her pictures of it. She said she was going on a long trip for her health. She demanded that the yacht be completely equipped for a long cruise by four o'clock that afternoon.

He had said it was almost impossible, but when she insisted, he had tried his best and succeeded in having everything ship-shape on schedule time. He had seen her off. Yes, she was alone. He had no idea where she was going, but he got the impression it was to be a world cruise. He had needed the money, and had not inquired too closely into Miss Boardeaux's plans.

"Are you sure she was alone?" Blair asked agin.

"Positive."

"There was no man with her?"

"No. I personally took her to her stateroom. She asked to have some of her luggage put in another stateroom, adjoining hers. Then she bade me good-bye, and raised her veil a little. I think there were tears in her eyes, but I'm not certain. She seemed even at my first interview with her, to be unhappy."

'Is there a wireless aboard the Wanderer?"

"Yes....it is fully equipped with everything. Oh, another thing, I asked if she had given any orders to the captain, and she said no; would I tell him to head out through the straits, and when the ship was out at sea she would give him further orders. I did this, of course, just before I left the yacht."

"Who is the captain?"

'O'Malley, a Vancouver man."

Blair held the receiver in his hand a long time after Able had hung up. He was in a telephone booth on the docks.

Janet on the Pacific....Hopeless now, to try to find her. Five days she had been sailing.

At last he left the docks and reentered his car. He might, he thought, charter a boat and follow the Wanderer. He might, but where? Where had the yacht gone?

It might be months before he found trace of the boat. Even Able didn't know its destination. It might not touch at any port for days, and then it might be thousands of miles away, at some small harbor where it would not be reported....

Damn it! Why hadn't he thought of this before? O'Malley, the captain, was a Vancouver man. He might have a family here!

Blair jerked his car to a stop before a drug store, and soon found the street address of Captain Angus O'Malley in a new directory. He was not listed in the telephone book. The address was quite far out, and it was half an hour before he found it....an old-fashioned house, with a sign "Rooms for Rent," hanging crookedly from a post on the front porch.

If O'Malley's wife was at home, she might be able to tell him the course of the Wanderer. The captain might have known it, even if Able did not.

At his ring, a middle-aged lady, stout and smiling, answered the door.

Yes, she was Mrs. O'Malley.

Blair stated his errand as quickly as possible. Did Captain O'Malley tell her where the Wanderer was going?

Mrs. O'Malley shook her head.

"I only know he is to be gone a year," she said. "I was at the boat to see him off, and I know that at that time he had received no orders where to go. He is to write me at the first port they enter, and he will, too, because he's the best husband a woman ever had!" She drew herself up proudly.

"And you haven't heard anything yet?"

"No, it probably will be some time. The Wanderer may head for Zanzibar or China, or, I don't know. O'Malley's getting good pay this trip....it was a hurry call he got from Mr. Able to get the yacht in shape. He's Mr. Able's regular captain, but he takes other jobs when the Wanderer is not in port. If he hadn't happened to have been reconditioning the yacht at the time, they'd never have gotten ready as quickly as they did. O'Malley had just been home from Alaska a few weeks before he got this call. I understand he's to be gone for a year this time, I'll sure miss him."

"Would you phone me at the Vancouver hotel...." Rodman gave her one of his cards...."If you hear from Captain O'Malley? I'm anxious to get in touch with someone aboard the Wanderer. If I change addresses I'll let you know."

Mrs. O'Malley promised, and Rodman returned to the hotel.

East-West Game Favored By Westerners

WINNIPEG, Oct. 30—(CP).—The Winnipeg rugby football club favors an East-West football game in Toronto if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the sponsors of the proposed match.

Joe Ryan, the manager of the champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers, said in an interview that no formal invitation has yet been received from Toronto.

"We can, however, say, subject to the approval of our executive, which can be assumed, that our club will willingly meet the eastern champions in a game or games that will in any way aid any cause that will add anything to Canada's war effort."

A Toronto despatch last night said that Controller Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, had announced his organization is prepared to sponsor a game with financial backing supplied by the Toronto Globe and Mail.

In commenting on this, Ryan said: "It is assumed that the West as well as Eastern organizations providing athletic facilities for soldiers in training, will share on an equal basis.

"In any event, while we are not prepared to speak for Calgary, we think the Western winner will gladly co-operate in any worthwhile cause in any way consistent with their limited ability to do so."

The Blue Bombers and the Calgary Bronks will play the first game of their Western final in Calgary on Saturday.

NEWMARKET, ENGLAND, Oct. 30.—(CP).—Edward Esmond's Hunter's Moon, a French-bred four-year-old colt by Foxhunter from Pearl Opal, to-day won the Cesarewitch Stakes in an exciting finish when Jockey Gordon Richards brought him up in time to nose out Sir Pomm and King Legend.

The winner returned 100 to 8 to his backers. A field of 14 started.

Gets Off To Bad Start, But Girl Piles Up Total Of 731 Pins

Lois Darling took head-pins, corners and blows as part of the game when she bowled in the Westclox Ladies' League at Duffus last night. With two blows for a starter, followed by a mixture of three head-pins and splits, along with six standing corners, Miss Darling wound up the evening with a fine 731 total which is good bowling in any company.

During the night big scores were tossed around in all directions. Miss Britnell banged off 648 for three games while Miss Dawson contributed the big single of the week 284.

The following were some of the good scores:

Westclox Ladies' League: L. Darling 731, V. Britnell 648 (272), M. Trude 599 (264), M. Allison 587, M. Wildman 583, G. Aldred 564, M. Hawthorne 558 (258), D. Dawson 540 (284), J. Hair 521, D. YOUNG LEAFS SHOW CLASS AS WHITES DEFEAT THE BLUES 3 TO 2

Goalie Bastien To Be Leafs' Heir For Broda

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Oct. 30. —(CP).—Shades of Georges Vezina and Lorne Chabot. Working out with the Toronto Maple Leafs at their National Hockey League training camp is a young French-Canadian goalie who bids fair to follow in the footsteps of those other great Habitant netminders.

Aldige (Bas) Bastien has not yet convinced Manager Conny Smythe that he is ready to oust Turk Broda from the Leafs' nets. But the good-looking 21-year-old youngster has showed enough in two weeks to eliminate one doughty rival.

When Smythe last week sold Phil Stein outright to New Haven, it was a tacit admission that Bastien would do. Not perhaps this year, or even a year from now, but sometime in the not too distant future.

Stein, a Toronto boy, has been a trial horse, in a hockey sense, for all the ambitious young goalies who sought a job with the Leafs. For years he has acted as a buffer for Broda. Never good enough to catch a regular berth but too valuable to dispose of.

Almost Made It

Last season Stein seemed to have reached the point where he at least would alternate with Broda. Other years he invariably finished up in the International-American circuit with Syracuse. In his second game with the Leafs, Phlegmatic Phil stopped a puck with his eye. Broda replaced him and remained as a regular thereafter.

With Stein gone, Bastien is a threat that Broda just can't ignore. Five-foot, six inches in height and weighing around 165 pounds, Bas is as active as he is confident.

Timmins-born, he played junior hockey for North Bay Trappers in 1938 and starred for the Northern Ontario champions when they lost to Oshawa Generals in the Memorial Cup playdowns.

Heading south next year, Bastien got a job as second string netminder with Port Colborne seniors of the Ontario Hockey Association, ousting the regular custodian, Art Child, in short order. At the conclusion of the regular schedule last season, Bastien got permission to play with Bert Corbeau's Atlantic City Sea Gulls.

Bastien is an all-round athlete, playing lacrosse, baseball, softball and is a good competitive swimmer. As for confidence, he is brimful of it. In his Port Colborne days he was heard to remark after being scored upon:

"Why, I played that shot right, but that guy didn't make the right shot."

Hank Goldup Drives Home Deciding Goal

BRANTFORD, Oct. 30. — Hank Goldup's goal less than two minutes from the finish climaxed a three-goal comeback that gave Eddie Powers' Whites a 3-2 victory over Hap Day's Blues here last night as the ranks of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team were divided for the first competitive test of the season.

A capacity crowd of approximately 2,000 attended the game. Proceeds will be turned over to the Brantford Rotary Club's crippled children's and boys' work funds.

Whirlwind Finish.

It took a blistering offensive in the last eleven minutes of the third period to produce a victory for the Whites. They were unable to hit their stride in the first two periods, and it wasn't until they had drifted two goals in arrears that the forensic fury of their attack finally paid dividends.

The Lakeshore line of Johnny McCreedy, Dick Kowcinak and Blink Bellinger touched off the spark, McCreedy scoring the first of the three White goals. Red Heron tucked in the equalizer on a solo and then Goldup cashed Pete Langelle's pass for the winning counter.

Prior to that prolific spurt the Blues, boasting most of the Leafs' "name" players, had enjoyed the edge. Nick Metz combined with brother Don and Billy Taylor for the game's initial goal in the second period; then, early in the third session, Wally Stanowski potted Drillon's relay to give the Blues a 2-0 margin.

Scoreless Opener.

The boys cruised into action carefully in the first period, paying strict attention to checks and waiting patiently for openings. The session ended in a "Mexican standoff," neither team scoring and each having to "kill off" a penalty, one going to Kampman of the Blues and the other to Frankie Eddolls of the Whites.

Broda was the busier of the two goalies in the first period and his activity heightened in the second stanza. The blues came rolling in relentlessly, but the Turk kicked everything aside until the 5.25 mark. In a resolute attack on the White cage the Blues peppered Broda with shots from all angles. He booted out a half-dozen before Nick Metz finally caught the mesh. Don Metz and Taylor set up the play.

It was a picture goal. The Metz-Taylor-Metz line came on to relieve the Drillon-Apps-Davidson powerhouse. The youngsters ringed the White defence and kept the puck on Broda's doorstep until Nick Metz was able to lift a high shot over the Turk's shoulder.

Stanowski Widens Lead.

Wally Stanowski engineered one of his specific manoeuvres to hammer the hemp bedind Broda for the second Blue goal after 2:33 of the third frame. Drillon hooked the rubber away from Marker, worked in close and flipped a pass to Stanowski. The latter picked the short corner neatly.

The belabored Whites had been very docile while all this was transpiring. Sweeney Schriner had muffed their best scoring chance, missing the net completely when practically in Bastien's lap.

Once the Whites got clicking, however, there was no holding them. McCreedy, Kowcinak, and Bellinger gave Bastien a terrific "ride" before the former finally poked in the first White goal at the 9.0 mark. Little more than three minutes later Red Heron snared the puck from a faceoff and waltzed right through on the unprotected Bastien. Goldup and Langelle combined for the payoff counter, lanky Hank taking a pass in the clear to move in on Bastien unmolested.

Syl Apps, the pride of Brant County, could not produce a goal for his enthusiastic audience. The Leaf captain had three great opportunities, missed the net once, and was robbed on the other two chances by Broda's sparkling saves.

Injuries Lay Up Many In N.H.L. Training Tilts

TORONTO, Oct. 30 — (CP). — Manager Red Dutton of New York Americans is moaning low to-day. The Americans apparently have lost the services of one of their rookie stars, Squee Allen, for a month. Allen was injured on Monday night when checked by Defenceman Ott Heller of the Rangers in a game won 3-2 by Americans.

Quite a casualty list can be made up from players injured in different National Hockey League camps. Alf Pike and Dutch Hiller of the Rangers are on the shelf; Hooley Smith of Americans is recovering from a minor injury; Bummer Doran, a defenceman, was injured in a Toronto workout; while Defenceman Alex Singbush and Left Winger Louis Trudel are just recovering from bad knees in the Canadiens' camp.

New York Rangers and the Americans play their sixth and last exhibition game to-night at Port Arthur, Ont. Red Dutton's Americans hold the lead at present, 3-2.

Detroit Red Wings are not finding their farm team, Indianapolis Capitals, any soft touch in their exhibition hockey series at Detroit. The Capitals took the measure of the parent club 3-2 the other night and then duplicated the feat again last night.

Six Sent to Reds.

Manager Paul Thompson sent his Chicago Black Hawks through a stiff drill yesterday at St. Paul, Minn. Later this week the Hawks will play two exhibition games with the Saints of the American Association. Thompson also revealed yesterday that six players who have been training with the Hawks have been sent to Providence Reds of the American League for further seasoning. They are John Mariucci, Red Mackay, defencemen; Max Bentley, Paul Platz, George Johnson, and Bill Mosienko, forwards.

Lex Chisholm in a class by himself among Leafs as a golfer, whipped around St. Catharines par 70 course on Tuesday for 71 in successfully defending his hockey title. Chisholm had 37-34. Closest was Red Heron with 35-42—77. Both without handicap. Broda and Apps, also unhandicapped, had 80 and 85, respectively. Ernie Dickens, Winnipeg junior, who will play with Toronto Marlboros, had low net with 70 after deducting 27 handicap from 97 gross. Bob Copp, Port Elgin, N.B. (and Toronto Univ.) amateur, was last with 146 gross, 27 handicap, 119 net.

Argo Drubbing Grand Lesson For Rough Riders

By The Canadian Press.

TORONTO, Oct. 30 — (CP). — Good can come even from football games that are lost, thinks Coach Ross Trimble of Ottawa Rough Riders.

The Riders are just getting used to the fact that they lost last Saturday 11-9 to Toronto Argonauts in the biggest football upset of the season in Eastern Canada. There were rumors that some of the boys wouldn't believe it until they read the score in the newspapers.

Trimble, who had his team out at Lansdowne Park last night for a drill in preparation for this Saturday's game against Montreal, says that the game accomplished more in two hours than he could accomplish in a season of coaching.

"The boys were pretty chesty, but they learned their lesson against Argonauts," said Trimble. The Ottawa coach had praise for the work of Quarterback Bobby Coulter, who sparked the Argonaut team to victory.

Trimble doesn't plan to make any changes in the team, which was good enough the previous week to roll up a 41-6 count against Argonauts at Ottawa. It seems unlikely, however, that Inside Dave Sprague will see action against Montreal, as he suffered a gashed hip in the game against Toronto.

Movies Show Mistakes

In Montreal, Coach Bill Hughes had his players sit in last night on a film of Saturday's game against Hamilton Tigers, which the Montrealers lost 12-7. Hughes ran off the film once without comment and then again more slowly. The second time he pointed out mistakes made by the Montrealers.

Hughes indicated that he plans several changes in his line-up for the meeting with Ottawa, but would not say just what these would be. Maxwell Smith, 260-pound lineman from Winnipeg, turned out again last night for his second drill. Hughes said he did not expect Smith to be ready for the game against Riders, but likely will use the big fellow against Argonauts a week later.

Argonauts went through a practice session that was cut to an hour by a heavy rain. Coach Lew Hayman had a newcomer on hand in the person of Bill McFarlane, a 218-pound end who reported that he played with Cornell University's Varsity team for the past three seasons. Hayman said that if McFarlane shows signs that he is in condition he would use him as a middle wing. The big American joined the Royal Canadian Signal Corps and is stationed in Toronto.

Find Poor Diets Discourage Some Diseases

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—(AP).—Persons living on poor diets are resistant to some infections because they cannot feed the disease germs properly.

In a report to-day before the National Academy of Sciences Dr. Stuart Mudd of the University of Pennsylvania declared that the streptococcus germ, one of the most virulent and widespread of all forms of bacteria, is extremely exacting in its food requirements.

The bug causes erysipelas, the group of diseases such as blood poisoning, childbed fever, intestinal infections, some forms of diphtheria and one form of pneumonia, meningitis, rheumatism, and a number of other diseases.

However, some strains of the streptococcus require carbon, minerals, proteins, thiamin, riboflavin, pantothenic acid and nicotinic acid —members of the "B" family of vitamins—in order to exist, Dr. Mudd said.

The deadly germs are also miniature laboratories for the manufacture of poisonous substances.

"The nature of the organization within a cell of only about 1/300,000 inch, which makes possible such complex syntheses and transformations of matter, is not even vaguely suggested by present knowledge," Dr. Mudd declared.

However, he added, research with the new electron microscopes of the Radio Corporation of America, which reveal things totally invisible under light illumination shows promise of new advances in the study of bacteria and virus diseases and in their conquest.

New Order Bars

Prime Minister Mackenzie King made a brief explanation of the unprecedented step of the Dominion Government entering the municipal field and barring certain candidates from nomination. He said: "The amendment has been made in the interest of public safety, the safety of the State and the efficient prosecution of the war, and the need for it has been suggested by persons from various Provinces, including, among others, the civil election committee of Winnipeg, which purports to represent a membership of 38,000 persons in that city."

In Manitoba a number of men identified with the outlawed Communist Party hold office. One is a member of the Legislature, three are Winnipeg aldermen and two are Winnipeg school trustees.

Though he was not named in the order, there is little doubt that Houde's election ambitions were the main cause for it being issued. Houde is still mayor, though he is behind barbed wire, and is still a member of the Quebec Legislature. His $10,000 mayoralty salary goes on to the end of the year, and is now being paid to his wife.

Mrs. Houde and other agents of the portly mayor, who defied authorities by advising Montreal citizens not to register for national service, have been openly gearing the remnants of his political machine for the December campaign.

Trace Shells

death shells, at least that is the Crown's opinion, because they were found close by the old man's body. And the other two were selected from the shells Dr. Frankish fired in his laboratory. He held up one of each pair showing them to the jury and declared that both of them had been discharged in the right barrel of Fred Thain's gun. Then he held up the other two and said he was positive they had been discharged in the left barrel of the Thain gun.

Of each of these pairs, one shell was found in the Wellman barn and the other was bought by the Crown purposely and solely for Dr. Frankish's experiments, or call it investigation.

There were other shells found in Fred Thain's house in a box which police believed to have been hidden. Several looked new and others faded but they did not receive the careful case-building and detail of testimony which C. L. Synder, K.C., Assistant Attorney-General, special Crown prosecutor, gave to the two "spent" shells found in the Wellman barn.

Search For Grist

Dr. Frankish was the star witness of Tuesday afternoon assize of the Supreme Court with Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay presiding. Other evidence sought to trail the ten or eleven bags of chopped grain Arnold Wellman had ground in a mill at Springbrook on Monday, January 29. He had driven it home in a wagon over winter roads. Police could find only a bag or so of grist around the Wellman barn on February 2nd, and approximately three bags of "chop" at Fred Thain's. But police brought to court thirteen empty grain bags from Thain's. Two of them had the name Arnold Wellman stencilled on them, and a few others were identified by David Wellman, Jr., grand nephew of the dead man as bags he felt certain that he had seen when he had worked at times at his grand uncle's place.

Afternoon Evidence

Lieutenant Sam Ervine of the C.A.S.F., former provincial traffic officer on the Belleville-Marmora highway, told at the resumption of the trial Tuesday afternoon of a search for the chopped grain. He was accompanied by Provincial Sergeant Harry Thompson, Constable Beatty of the R.C.M.P. and Inspector Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department, Toronto. At Wellman's they found a peck of grist in the cow stable and about a bag altogether collected in the piggery on February 2.

Then Ervine went to Thain's farm and found thirteen grain bags upstairs in the granary. Provincial Constable Everett Smith was with him. "We brought the bags to Belleville and turned them over to Sergeant Thompson. On one bag was stamped the name "Arnold Wellman." The bags were empty when we found them. There were also three bags of grist in the granary."

Robert McCullough, defense counsel—"Tell us what grist you found at Thain's?"

"We found about half a bag down stairs and three full bags upstairs."

Lieutenant Everett Smith of Petawawa, on leave from the Provincial Police since enlisting in August, was on duty in this district last winter.

His evidence related to a visit to the Thain home on February 1st and 2nd.

"We looked for grist first at Wellman's and found a bag and several pailfulls. At Thain's there were three bags of grist in the granary and a number of empty sacks.

"Did you find anything else on the Thain premises?" Mr. Snyder asked.

"Yes, a gun. It was in Fred Thain's hands in the morning when I first called. I saw it again about six in the evening. I opened it and could smell powder."

"Can you say the gun was in the same condition in the evening that it was in the morning?"

"No. I cannot."

Witness said it was a double barrelled shot gun, and identified it as one of the Crown's exhibits.

To Mr. McCullough witness said the grist at Thain's was in a box, and his opinion of the quantity was that it was about three bags.

Arrested Thain

Sergeant Harry Thompson, Belleville, of the provincial police supplemented the bag evidence, saying Constable Smith had handed him thirteen bags from the Thain premises and a sample bag from Wellman's.

Comparison with the sample showed that one of the Thain bags was identical, both bearing the same stencilled name of Arnold Wellman.

"On February 2, with Inspector Ward and Constables Adair and Smith we placed Thain under arrest on a charge of theft of grain. At Belleville that night we took from his a pair of overalls he was wearing, and rubber boots."

At Thain's on February 3, Sgt. Thompson and several officers searched for gun shells. "We looked in a pig sty and in a barn."

"Was it because of information you had received?"

Sgt. Thompson: "Yes."

Witness said he found under a board and an old cushion a box of shells. Two on top were spent, one was 'live' and new and several others had also not been fired.

Inspector Albert Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department was asigned to the Wellman case on February 1.

Mr. Snyder: "Did you search the Thain premises on February 3?"

Yes, for ammunition. We found a cardboard box that contained three bright colored shells and several that looked dull. The dull ones were stamped Dominion Export and the shiny ones were marked Dominion Canucks. Witness said he turned the shotgun and shells over to Dr. Edgar Frankish.

Mr. Snyder said he wished to postpone reference to several shells fund at Wellman's.

Says Bags Were Uncle's

David Wellman, Jr., a young farmer in soldier's uniform, said Arnold Wellman was his great uncle, and had lived about three miles away. He said he had taken charge of his great uncle's farm for three months several years ago, and had often helped him. By patches and other marks he identified as his uncle's five of the empty grain bags produced in court by the provincial police.

Found Empty Shell

David Wellman, Sr., father of the preceeding witness said he lived four miles north of his uncle's place. "I was there on February 3 with Sam Woodward looking for pails. I came upon one pail and lifted it up. Under it was an empty shell. I called Mr. Woodward's attention to it before touching it. I said 'look what I've found.' I then gave it to Dr. Lorne Wellman."

Dr. Lorne Wellman, Waterloo, son of the murdered couple, added at this stage that he had given the spent shells to the wife of David Wellman, Sr.

"I got there after dark on February 1st and stayed until after the funeral," witness recalled.

Mrs. Wellman said the empty shell was wrapped in a white cloth. She passed it on to Dr. Marvin Wellman of Whitby, who in turn told the court he gave it to Provincial Constable Smith, who finally gave it to Sergt. Thompson.

This tracing of the spent shell was further amplified by Sgt. Thompson who submitted it as an exhibit at the preliminary hearing. Then it was entrusted to Inspector Ward and he took it to Dr. Frankish. It bore the mark and stamp "Dominion Canuck."

Second Shell Found.

Sergeant Thompson was recalled to identify another shell which he said he had found on Monday, February 5.

"David Wellman, Sr., had told us where he found one shell, so I looked in the same place and found a second one, only it was deeper in rubbish. I gave this second one to Inspector Ward, who delivered it to Dr. Frankish.

Sold Five Shells.

Mrs. Mildred Graham, next witness, proprietor of a general store at Wellman's Corners.

Mr. Snyder—"Did you sell Fred Thain any merchanize on January 31 "

Mrs. Graham—"Yes. He came in between 1 and 2 in the afternoon and bought a file, five shells and a chocolate bar."

"What did he say?"

"He said he wanted five shotgun shells. I sold him five Canucks."

"Why did you sell him Canucks?"

"Because that's all I had."

"Why did you sell him only five shells?"

"That's all he asked for."

"What did you charge him?"

"Twenty-five cents. Five cents each."

"Did he tell you what he wanted them for?"

"Yes. To kill foxes."

Mrs. Graham said Constable Smith called at the store later in the week and bought one Canuck shell. She heard of the Wellman murders on February 1, "the day after I sold the shells to Mr. Thain."

Dr. E. R. Frankish.

One of the principal witnesses for the Crown was called next, Dr. Edgar R. Frankish, Toronto, medical adviser to the Attorney-General's Department.

Mr. Snyder—"Do you agree with Dr. Robinson that Arnold Wellman died of gunshot wounds?"

"I do."

"Have you an opinion as to whether there were two shots or one?"

"I think there were two, either simultaneously, or in rapid succession."

Dr. Frankish recounted experiments made with the Thain double-barrelled shotgun and Canuck ammunition. Holding in his hand one of those exploded test shells and the empty shell found by Sgt. Thompson in the Arnold Wellman barn, Dr. Frankish declared: "I am absolutely satisfied both these shells were fired from the right barrel of the gun produced in this court."

Witness produced a group of enlarged photographs of these two exploded shells and pointed out similarities in markings to the jury. He added that the test shells were purchased from the Graham store at Wellman's Corners. The other, an exhibit shell, reached the court from police officers.

Taking another empty test shell and comparing it with the empty shell found by David Wellman, Sr., Dr. Frankish said: "I am positive those two shells were fired from the left barrel of the gun exhibited in this court."

Mr. Snyder: "Your evidence then is that the two empty shells found in Arnold Wellman's barn were fired from Fred Thain's shotgun, one from the right barrel, and the other from the left?"

Dr. Frankish: "Exactly."

Human Blood Spots.

Turning to the Thain overalls produced in court, witness said he found on them two spots of human blood. Their location, on the front right, was marked by a red tag as shown in court. Dr. Frankish said the spots were about as big as a pea "and quite fresh."

In Manitoba a number of men identified with the outlawed Communist Party hold office. One is a member of the Legislature, three are Winnipeg aldermen and two are Winnipeg school trustees.

Though he was not named in the order, there is little doubt that Houde's election ambitions were the main cause for it being issued. Houde is still mayor, though he is behind barbed wire, and is still a member of the Quebec Legislature. His $10,000 mayoralty salary goes on to the end of the year, and is now being paid to his wife.

Mrs. Houde and other agents of the portly mayor, who defied authorities by advising Montreal citizens not to register for national service, have been openly gearing the remnants of his political machine for the December campaign.

Trace Shells

death shells, at least that is the Crown's opinion, because they were found close by the old man's body. And the other two were selected from the shells Dr. Frankish fired in his laboratory. He held up one of each pair showing them to the jury and declared that both of them had been discharged in the right barrel of Fred Thain's gun. Then he held up the other two and said he was positive they had been discharged in the left barrel of the Thain gun.

Of each of these pairs, one shell was found in the Wellman barn and the other was bought by the Crown purposely and solely for Dr. Frankish's experiments, or call it investigation.

There were other shells found in Fred Thain's house in a box which police believed to have been hidden. Several looked new and others faded but they did not receive the careful case-building and detail of testimony which C. L. Synder, K.C., Assistant Attorney-General, special Crown prosecutor, gave to the two "spent" shells found in the Wellman barn.

Search For Grist

Dr. Frankish was the star witness of Tuesday afternoon assize of the Supreme Court with Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay presiding. Other evidence sought to trail the ten or eleven bags of chopped grain Arnold Wellman had ground in a mill at Springbrook on Monday, January 29. He had driven it home in a wagon over winter roads. Police could find only a bag or so of grist around the Wellman barn on February 2nd, and approximately three bags of "chop" at Fred Thain's. But police brought to court thirteen empty grain bags from Thain's. Two of them had the name Arnold Wellman stencilled on them, and a few others were identified by David Wellman, Jr., grand nephew of the dead man as bags he felt certain that he had seen when he had worked at times at his grand uncle's place.

Afternoon Evidence

Lieutenant Sam Ervine of the C.A.S.F., former provincial traffic officer on the Belleville-Marmora highway, told at the resumption of the trial Tuesday afternoon of a search for the chopped grain. He was accompanied by Provincial Sergeant Harry Thompson, Constable Beatty of the R.C.M.P. and Inspector Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department, Toronto. At Wellman's they found a peck of grist in the cow stable and about a bag altogether collected in the piggery on February 2.

Then Ervine went to Thain's farm and found thirteen grain bags upstairs in the granary. Provincial Constable Everett Smith was with him. "We brought the bags to Belleville and turned them over to Sergeant Thompson. On one bag was stamped the name "Arnold Wellman." The bags were empty when we found them. There were also three bags of grist in the granary."

Robert McCullough, defense counsel—"Tell us what grist you found at Thain's?"

"We found about half a bag down stairs and three full bags upstairs."

Lieutenant Everett Smith of Petawawa, on leave from the Provincial Police since enlisting in August, was on duty in this district last winter.

His evidence related to a visit to the Thain home on February 1st and 2nd.

"We looked for grist first at Wellman's and found a bag and several pailfulls. At Thain's there were three bags of grist in the granary and a number of empty sacks.

"Did you find anything else on the Thain premises?" Mr. Snyder asked.

"Yes, a gun. It was in Fred Thain's hands in the morning when I first called. I saw it again about six in the evening. I opened it and could smell powder."

"Can you say the gun was in the same condition in the evening that it was in the morning?"

"No. I cannot."

Witness said it was a double barrelled shot gun, and identified it as one of the Crown's exhibits.

To Mr. McCullough witness said the grist at Thain's was in a box, and his opinion of the quantity was that it was about three bags.

Arrested Thain

Sergeant Harry Thompson, Belleville, of the provincial police supplemented the bag evidence, saying Constable Smith had handed him thirteen bags from the Thain premises and a sample bag from Wellman's.

Comparison with the sample showed that one of the Thain bags was identical, both bearing the same stencilled name of Arnold Wellman.

"On February 2, with Inspector Ward and Constables Adair and Smith we placed Thain under arrest on a charge of theft of grain. At Belleville that night we took from his a pair of overalls he was wearing, and rubber boots."

At Thain's on February 3, Sgt. Thompson and several officers searched for gun shells. "We looked in a pig sty and in a barn."

"Was it because of information you had received?"

Sgt. Thompson: "Yes."

Witness said he found under a board and an old cushion a box of shells. Two on top were spent, one was 'live' and new and several others had also not been fired.

Inspector Albert Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department was asigned to the Wellman case on February 1.

Mr. Snyder: "Did you search the Thain premises on February 3?"

Yes, for ammunition. We found a cardboard box that contained three bright colored shells and several that looked dull. The dull ones were stamped Dominion Export and the shiny ones were marked Dominion Canucks. Witness said he turned the shotgun and shells over to Dr. Edgar Frankish.

Mr. Snyder said he wished to postpone reference to several shells fund at Wellman's.

Says Bags Were Uncle's

David Wellman, Jr., a young farmer in soldier's uniform, said Arnold Wellman was his great uncle, and had lived about three miles away. He said he had taken charge of his great uncle's farm for three months several years ago, and had often helped him. By patches and other marks he identified as his uncle's five of the empty grain bags produced in court by the provincial police.

Found Empty Shell

David Wellman, Sr., father of the preceeding witness said he lived four miles north of his uncle's place. "I was there on February 3 with Sam Woodward looking for pails. I came upon one pail and lifted it up. Under it was an empty shell. I called Mr. Woodward's attention to it before touching it. I said 'look what I've found.' I then gave it to Dr. Lorne Wellman."

Dr. Lorne Wellman, Waterloo, son of the murdered couple, added at this stage that he had given the spent shells to the wife of David Wellman, Sr.

"I got there after dark on February 1st and stayed until after the funeral," witness recalled.

Mrs. Wellman said the empty shell was wrapped in a white cloth. She passed it on to Dr. Marvin Wellman of Whitby, who in turn told the court he gave it to Provincial Constable Smith, who finally gave it to Sergt. Thompson.

This tracing of the spent shell was further amplified by Sgt. Thompson who submitted it as an exhibit at the preliminary hearing. Then it was entrusted to Inspector Ward and he took it to Dr. Frankish. It bore the mark and stamp "Dominion Canuck."

Second Shell Found.

Sergeant Thompson was recalled to identify another shell which he said he had found on Monday, February 5.

"David Wellman, Sr., had told us where he found one shell, so I looked in the same place and found a second one, only it was deeper in rubbish. I gave this second one to Inspector Ward, who delivered it to Dr. Frankish.

Sold Five Shells.

Mrs. Mildred Graham, next witness, proprietor of a general store at Wellman's Corners.

Mr. Snyder—"Did you sell Fred Thain any merchanize on January 31 "

Mrs. Graham—"Yes. He came in between 1 and 2 in the afternoon and bought a file, five shells and a chocolate bar."

"What did he say?"

"He said he wanted five shotgun shells. I sold him five Canucks."

"Why did you sell him Canucks?"

"Because that's all I had."

"Why did you sell him only five shells?"

"That's all he asked for."

"What did you charge him?"

"Twenty-five cents. Five cents each."

"Did he tell you what he wanted them for?"

"Yes. To kill foxes."

Mrs. Graham said Constable Smith called at the store later in the week and bought one Canuck shell. She heard of the Wellman murders on February 1, "the day after I sold the shells to Mr. Thain."

Dr. E. R. Frankish.

One of the principal witnesses for the Crown was called next, Dr. Edgar R. Frankish, Toronto, medical adviser to the Attorney-General's Department.

Mr. Snyder—"Do you agree with Dr. Robinson that Arnold Wellman died of gunshot wounds?"

"I do."

"Have you an opinion as to whether there were two shots or one?"

"I think there were two, either simultaneously, or in rapid succession."

Dr. Frankish recounted experiments made with the Thain double-barrelled shotgun and Canuck ammunition. Holding in his hand one of those exploded test shells and the empty shell found by Sgt. Thompson in the Arnold Wellman barn, Dr. Frankish declared: "I am absolutely satisfied both these shells were fired from the right barrel of the gun produced in this court."

Witness produced a group of enlarged photographs of these two exploded shells and pointed out similarities in markings to the jury. He added that the test shells were purchased from the Graham store at Wellman's Corners. The other, an exhibit shell, reached the court from police officers.

Taking another empty test shell and comparing it with the empty shell found by David Wellman, Sr., Dr. Frankish said: "I am positive those two shells were fired from the left barrel of the gun exhibited in this court."

Mr. Snyder: "Your evidence then is that the two empty shells found in Arnold Wellman's barn were fired from Fred Thain's shotgun, one from the right barrel, and the other from the left?"

Dr. Frankish: "Exactly."

Human Blood Spots.

Turning to the Thain overalls produced in court, witness said he found on them two spots of human blood. Their location, on the front right, was marked by a red tag as shown in court. Dr. Frankish said the spots were about as big as a pea "and quite fresh."

EXPENSES PAID.

Several local deer hunters are hopeful they can line their rifle sights up on some of the pesky wolves that are reported to be roaming the wilds of Burleigh and the other northern townships. One wolf, counting the county and sale of the pelt would take care of part of the expenses incurred on a deer hunt for one man.

AT LONG LAST

An employee of the Quaker Oats Company, riding a bicycle south on Water street turned east on Hunter but neglected to keep to the right hand side of the road and had a mishap. His bicycle met a westbound bicycle head-on and the front axle of his bicycle was smashed. Several men are in the habit of doing this and Examiner employees watching it every day have been expecting a smash-up. Fortunately little damage was done in this case.

MEAT ON FRIDAY.

Roman Catholics and other denominations which observe Friday as a day on which no meat is eaten, can digress from the usual rule this Friday. Friday, November 1st, is the feast of All Saints', and being a holy day of obligation is not a fast day. Thursday, however, being the vigil of a feast day becomes a fast day and meat is not allowed on that day, in other words the fast day is moved up one day and it's fish on Thursday instead of on Friday.

Deer Season Opens Next Monday

Charley Kingan, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association voiced an appeal to deer hunters today to co-operate in protecting the elk in the Peterborough County Game Preserve.

About a year ago, 14 animals were set loose in the preserve and now there are 19. The animals roam the country and several have travelled some distance from the preserve boundaries, but are still in this area. It is contrary to law to shoot these animals in this part of the country, and recently a hunter in Northern Ontario who shot two elk was fined $100 for each animal and his hunting equipment confiscated.

Larger Than Deer

On Monday, November 4th, a large army of deer hunters from Peterborough city and district will sally forth in quest of some venison, and it is quite likely that the hunters who scour the Apsley district will run across the elk.

The animals are readily identified as they have a black neck and throat, and a white rump. They gallop like a horse and will only run a short distance before they stop and look back at anyone near. They are much larger than the common red deer and considerably more tame.

Partridge hunting is permitted during the deer season which starts on Monday and lasts two weeks.

It might be of interest to hunters to know that members of the same family may loan guns to each other without the formality of a permit. For instance if the father owns a gun, he can lend it to his son without obtaining a permit from Provincial Constable David Silvester. This privilege in not extended beyond one's immediate family.

A check with Game and Fisheries Inspector I. J. Lyons regarding the law on elk shooting brought forth the statement: "There is no elk shooting in Ontario. And as there have been rumors that some of the boys are gunning for any of the Kingan elk that have strayed off the reserve the wardens will be on the watch for just that thing and it's a costly business getting caught with an elk carcass or meat. Those animals were put up there to restock the country and it would be a shame to have them slaughtered off in the first year."

As a result the hunters can bet there'll be an official eye kept on that district during the hunt.

Internee Freed As Refugee

MONTREAL, Oct. 30 — (CP). — A United States Consular visa has been issued to 20-year-old Herman Bondi, a native of Austria who has been released from a Canadian internment camp it was learned on Tuesday.

Bondi was brought to the United States Consulate here on Tuesday under guard in an army van. It was said he was granted the visa on the strength of British identification papers, although he had no passport.

It was believed his release from the internment camp came after a review of cases ordered in London when complaints were made that many genuine refugees from German-occupied lands had been taken into custody.

Bondi was studying at Cambridge University when the war broke out. He was interned and subsequently sent to Canada. His father is a resident of New York.

Resort Owners Invited To See Film

Resort owners throughout Peterborough County will have an opportunity of learning what work has been done by the Peterborough Tourist Association on November 19, when a dinner will be given in the Empress Hotel.

The association, formed last spring to devise ways and means of attracting more tourist trade to this city and district, has laid the foundation for a long range plan that should pay dividends. They authorized Fred L. Roy to prepare a motion picture in technicolor which would illustrate the natural beauty, recreational facilities and the fishing that exist in the Kawartha district, and they propose to circulate this film in the United States.

The film has now been completed, having been in the making during the summer months and at the height of the tourist season, when the country looked its prettiest.

An invitation is being sent to each of the tourist resort owners in the district asking each to be present. J. Leo. Dolan, Director of Tourist Publicity for Canada from Ottawa, and Douglas Oliver, well known newspaper man and head of the Ontario Travel Bureau, will also be on hand for the dinner meeting.

The association has functioned smoothly under the chairmanship of H. L. Garner, and all the members have shown an enthusiasm that is certain to produce worthwhile results. The scope and success of the venture was limited to some extent by the fact that it did not get underway until Spring, but definite progress has been reported and the district can look for results in 1941.

It is the hope of everyone connected with the tourist industry locally to weld the tourist resort owners in a compact, fighting group who will go out after business and compete successfully with all of the other sections of Ontario and Canada which are vying with each other for a major slice of this money. Undoubtedly the Kawartha district and Rice Lake has much more to offer than any other section in Ontario, and after a lapse of some years, a united effort is being made to attract more people to this district.

Gasoline Tanks Self-Sealing On Nazi Planes

Clayton Montgomery, employed by the Trent Canal as lockmaster at Lock 25, has some interesting souvenirs from England.

A friend in Sussex mailed a postcard showing a German Messerschmitt 109 single seater fighter plane which had been downed in a field near his home. The plane was only slightly damaged, having the undercarriage wiped off by the pancake landing, and the pilot bailed out by parachute and was captured.

The Englishman sent along sample pieces of the various layers of material used by the Germans to make the self-sealing gasoline tanks on the airplanes. The tanks are so constructed that when a machine-gun bullet ripped through the tank, it may pass through both sides of the materials, which immediately seal the hole and little if any gasoline leaks out. The British have perfected a similar combination.

It is difficult to determine the order in which the five sample pieces are placed when forming the outer walls of the tank, but they consist of a piece of 3-16ths hard fibre, a very thin sheet of rubber, a piece of treated horsehide, a piece of specially treated material like rubber that would melt readily, and a piece of semi-solid black rubber with little resiliency.

He also sent along a piece of plastic glass taken from the instrument board of the plane. This glass is being widely used by the Germans, and four inches of it is said to be bullet-proof. It is transparent, but scratches easily. German planes manufactured recently have had a plastic glass cowling which is drawn over the pilot as he sits in the open cockpit, thus giving him considerable protection.

The Germans are also reported to be armour-plating the vital parts of the plane in the hopes of giving them longer life in battle.

Contest Winner

In a field of eight girl contestants and two boys, Vincent Herrington of Hastings last night captured first prize and the Fraser trophy in the annual public speaking contest sponsored by the Northumberland County Trustees and Ratepayers Association. His speech was the story of the Graf Spee incident.

First Division Soldiers Buy Spitfire

"Each boy in the First Division, C.A.S.F., has given one day's pay toward buying a Spitfire." This was told in a letter, received in Peterborough, from Pte. P. J. Tarby, in 'B' Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Private Tarby said that though the bombing is at times terrific, it is not as bad as it sounds, and if people would keep in the shelter during the raids, there would be fewer casualties.

The writer said that bombs had landed within 50 feet of him, and he was just lying on the ground, and the explosion didn't harm him in any way. Unless there is a direct hit, a person is comparatively safe in a hut. Members of the regiment take turn in anti-aircraft duty, and although the Germans fly too high to make good targets, even for the heavy guns, there must always be defence, from low attackers, on the job. In the towns, most of the danger is from buildings falling, there again, Pte. Tarby said, the air-raid shelters give adequate protection.

The regiment went to France at the first of the campaign, the writer said, but was withdrawn before they could see any action. On the trip home across the Channel, they did, however, shoot down an enemy plane.

The writer's confidence in a British victory is stoic. He writes: "We are in the best of physical shape, and to the last man, will give our last ounce of strength in defeating that war-crazed Hitler." He said further, "I hope the people at home in Canada feel the same way, and I know that every true Canadian does."

Singing loud songs of praise to the Y.M.C.A., Pte. Tarby said that free shows are put on for the troops, by the Y.M.C.A., every other night while in town, and twice a week a special car, sent by the Y.M.C.A., visits them with entertainment when in camp. "It sure is good to see their tea car waiting for us, when we have finished a hard day's marching, field manoeuvres or trench digging. They are always there with tea and biscuits, and sometimes they give us free cigarettes."

In appreciation for the effort, on the part of the people at home, he said that the only way he and his comrades could really show their gratitude, is to "Do as good a job in fighting, when we meet the enemy, as the people at home have done in looking after us."

Merchants Plan Smash Hitler Night

The Peterborough Business Men's Association, at its meeting on Tuesday night, decided that this year there would be an opportunity for the association to do a real job in the way of contributing to Canada's war effort.

The members decided to forego the annual Santa Claus parade, and instead have a "Smash Hitler Night." This will be in the form of a theatre night, and the association will pay all the expenses. If the three theatres are available, there will be prizes given to the extent of $2,000. All the prizes will be in the form of War Savings Certificates. There will be two shows at each of the theatres participating, one at seven o'clock and one at nine.

It was also decided that the business places in Peterborough would observe the customary two minutes of silence on Armistice Day.

Peterborough Singers and Players Present Musical Programme

To use that business phrase it was a "Made-in-Peterborough" presentation which was heard in the Collegiate Auditorium Tuesday evening being sponsored by the five local Chapters of the I.O.D.E. Apparently the expenses had been reduced to the vanishing point as the entire proceeds were turned over to the war work being carried on by these organizations.

The fact that it was purely local did not step down the quality. Not a bit. There were no weak spots from start to finish, and there was quite sufficient variety to maintain interest throughout. The Madrigal Singers, conducted by Dorothy Allan Park in the dual role of conductor and soloist; the Northrop Trio; Maurice Park. There one has in brief form the personnel of the entertainers who delighted an audience which left only front row vacancies.

The Madrigal Singers were not singing madrigals. That should be modified to the extent of one number "Everything Has Its Time," unaccompanied, running high, running low, but always running in musical excellence. Rather were they demonstrating the beauty of "airs" gathered here and there in the musical world. They opened with that "West Highland Air," "My Nut-Brown Maiden," and the same qualities of musical goodness were evident there which followed throughout the programme. The singers in this choir of some forty voices are intelligently placed to begin with. That is, the formation is so arranged that no section is able to have its particular contribution reach the audience more impressively than the others. The manner in which the singers could handle those slightly explosive or dynamic word or passages and then gracefully leave them was not at all short of being remarkable.

Under the hand of the conductor there was not at any time evidence of seeking after too great volume. It was as though each singer was giving only the best she possessed, and it was so well carried into effect that shaded portions gave the impression of at times being close at hand and then again as something in the far distance. And that in turn requires good voices and careful tuition.

One is impressed by the manner in which these Madrigal Singers know their numbers; know the words, the music and the interpretation. In all they must have used fifteen numbers on the programme, and there was no musical score present from beginning to end. At times there is that delightful accompaniment of humming against the word voices. This was particularly well developed in a Scottish Air, "Hame, Hame, Hame," where an obligato was sung by Miss Margaret Dickson, Mrs. Thursa Williamson and Mrs. Dorothy Goldie.

Choice Demonstration

The Northrop Trio, Harry Northrop at the piano, Stanley Northrop, violin, and Tom Smith, 'cellist, used rare good judgment in their selections. They were playing good music throughout, but it was not mutilated by too much brilliance. It sang songs and unfolded melodies, and it is not exaggeration to say that these players attained the point of musical saturation and possibly caused the sensitive person to think of the beauty with which the world should be filled, and some day will be filled. The odd rhythm at times coming from pizzicato of the 'cello fairly danced with jubilation. The Northrop Trio indeed gave a choice demonstration of very beautiful chamber music.

Dorothy Allan Park sang, and it must have been the feeling of the audience that she should be more frequently heard in her own city. Singing to her is no effort; no matter what climax is attained there is always that feeling of assurance that there is more in reserve. As so often happens it is the extra number, in response to insistent applause, that reaches out and touches the audience. Then it is that the singer is apt to use something better known and which is actually a favored song of the singer. It was so when Mrs. Park sang Lady Jane Scott's "Think On Me." A beautiful piece of what we prefer to call forthright singing, honest singing which neither evaded nor played too deeply upon the wholesome sentiment of this number. Gwen Craw played accompaniments for Dorothy Allan Park and in that capacity she is so "understanding" that she leaves really nothing to be desired.

Maurice Park is lyric tenor and as a singer he is effective. To an unusual degree he appears to understand why the song was written and on that he bases his interpretation. His rendition of "An Eriskay Love Lilt," from the large collection of available Hebridean airs, was outstandingly beautiful. Those who heard Mendelssohn Choir on its visit to our city will recall that this Hebridean love song was used as the theme of the most effective numbers on their programme. Harry Northrop was accompanist for Mr. Park and also for the Madrigal Singers. The grand piano used during the evening was kindly loaned for the occasion by Mrs. Ford Turner.

Detroit Driver Given 10 Days

When the car he was driving crashed into the southwest base of the C.P. Railway gates on George street late Tuesday night Sanford Sinclair, of Detroit, Mich., received a cut on the nose that required a stitch and sustained chest injuries. On top of that he was arrested by Constables John Stevenson and Gordon Trennum, who investigated the accident, on a charge of drunken driving.

This morning Sinclair pleaded guilty to the charge in police court and was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to ten days in jail. The car the man was driving was not his own and consequently there was no impoundment order made.

Sinclair who arrived here a week ago to visit his mother in Otonabee was driving south on George street and when he reached the C.P.R. tracks his car shot to one side and plowed into the base of the gates, damaging the latter. The vehicle suffered severely from the impact, the steering wheel being broken off and the windshield broken, while fenders and bumper were also damaged. Sinclair had evidently been thrown against the steering wheel as he complained of severe pain in his chest when taken to the police station. Medical aid had to be summoned.

Vincent Harrington Captures Hastings Oratorical Contest

HASTINGS, Oct. 30—(ENS).—Relating the thrilling story of the Graf Spee incident here last night before more than 350 people in the town hall, Vincent Herrington captured the Fraser trophy for public speaking from a field of eight girl contestants and two boys, including himself. In a dramatic and forceful speech, Vincent held the attention of his audience and won the favor of district teachers who were judges in the annual affair sponsored by Northumberland County Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association.

Wins Hastings Trophy.

Dorothy Hubbel won second place and was presented with the Village of Hastings trophy. Anne Walsh was third to be presented with the Hastings schools cup. Presentations were made respectively by R. B. Dawson, president of the county association; Charles Lynch, councillor, representing the Hastings council, and by T. A. Coughlan, president of the Hastings association.

Pupils from both public and separate schools gave a varied musical entertainment between each second speaker and were well received.

A. A. Martin, public schools inspector for the district, and members of both Hastings boards were present on the platform. In addressing the audience, R. B. Dawson urged parents to give their children a chance by coaching them along the ways of public speaking. He told them to try and have their children overcome stage fright, a factor which is most prevalent among children coming on the stage.

Music Festival.

Mr. Dawson drew attention to the annual music festival which is being held this year in Campbellford and which parents should see to that they have their children trained that they might enter at some time.

Following is the list of youthful orators and their topics in the order they came to the stage: Bill Mouncey—"The Origin of Baseball"; Doris Calberry—"The Story of Books"; Ruby Scriver — "Panes Without Pain"; Ingleborg Lunitz—"Red Cross Nurse"; Vince Herrington—"Graf Spee"; Isabel Herrington—"Junior Red Cross"; Rosebud Calberry—"The Romance of Aviation"; Rose Crowley—"Bombing of London"; Anne Walsh—"The First Year of War."

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Mrs. D. MacMillan and Mrs. J. McKercher presided at the lace covered tea table which was centred by bronze baby 'mums, large bronze and yellow 'mums on the mantel and ferns on the platform formed an attractive background for the meeting.

Visual Education Program Outlined

The visual education program in connection with Adult Education was outlined to the Workers' Educational Association, by the general secretary of the Association, Drummond Wren, at the inaugural meeting of the classes last night in the Collegiate Institute.

The president of the local group, Gordon Powell, introduced Mr. Wren who went into detail on the new method of adult education with which the W.E.A. is experimenting. The development of visual education was compared with that of the miscroscope, a means by which the student could comprehend his subject. The speaker said words are not enough. The W.E.A. has prepared film strips dealing with the problems coming out of the development of consumers' co-operation, credit unions, and other such social steps. The pictures, Mr. Wren said, play an important part in helping the student grasp the significance of some of the problems involved.

After the meeting, members of the class were given an opportunity to meet Mr. Wren personally, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Borland, 744 George Street.

Skunk Runs Amok

OMAHA, Oct. 30.—(AP).—A skunk got its head stuck in an empty tin can and ran amok. Complaints swamped the police switchboard. Cruiser officers brought back evidence of a job well done and headquarters doors and windows popped open to waft the evidence away. The cruiser officers went home to change their clothes.

Rambling Reporters

R.C.A.F. SALUTE.

The Examiner reported the airplane over the city on Monday had apparently saluted a wedding party. By way of strange coincidence, the same plane was seen to perform strangely over the Church of the Sacred Heart, and just as Bert Duffus was putting the remains of the late Stephen Shaughnessy into the hearse.

According to the Examiner's information, the stunt flier was a Pilot Instructor, and was apparently having a busman's holiday from his duties at Trenton.

World "Y" Head Is To Be Dinner Speaker

A broad international aspect of the Y.W.C.A., the largest women's organization in the world, will be given by Miss Ruth Rouse, World's President of the Y.W.C.A., when she speaks at a canvassers' dinner to-night in recognition of the opening day of the local organization's financial campaign for $8,000 to carry on regular work extended by war time activities.

In 1912, Miss Rouse, as secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, had travelled 7,300 miles from the Atlantic coast to Winnipeg, visiting schools and colleges, Women's Canadian Clubs, missionary societies and nurses' groups. Immigration was at its height and Miss Rouse did a great deal to awaken in Canadians a sense of international responsibility and a keener appreciation of the strangers within our gates.

Following her graduation from Girton College, Cambridge, and her student volunteer experience, Miss Rouse went to the United States for special student work. When war broke out in 1914, Miss Rouse threw herself with renewed vigor into the work of the World's Student Christian Federation, and in 1915 visited Christian Unions in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, and Russia for the purpose of helping to deepen the spiritual life of these groups.

Vivid sketches of conditions in Northern Europe, in Russia and in other countries were given by Miss Rouse when she returned to Canada in 1915. She addressed the Panama Latin-American Conference, addressing groups en route, and then went to South America. Upon her return to Europe, Miss Rouse went to France to undertake war work, and since 1925 had been Education and Editorial Secretary of the Missionary Council of the Church Assembly in England.

Do You Know?

To keep the air in heated rooms properly humid, there is a new water pan with a long slender neck that is just narrow enough to extend between the radiator pipes, capacity about one and a half quarts of water.

Ammonia is an excellent kitchen agent for cutting grease. Pots and pans and greasy dishes wash much easier if put to soak a few minutes in hot water and a few drops of household ammonia.

Wrap Soldiers' Boxes Up Attractively

To anyone planning parcels and packages of comforts to send to soldier boys overseas, and Christmas in England is likely to be rather cheerless, Brigadier Eric W. Haldenby, M.C., V.D., has offered a suggestion that parcels be wrapped as attractively as possible. "If you could send along a few decorations, such as the Canadian soldier is accustomed to, they would appreciate it immensely," he says.

Speaking to a capacity audience at the Women's Canadian Club in Toronto on Tuesday, Brigadier Haldenby remarked that the whole Canadian Expeditionary Force appreciates what the people of Canada, particularly women and women's organizations, have done to make the lot of the soldier a more comfortable one, and the British people keenly appreciate having the Canadians—soldiers and civilians—beside them in their hour of testing.

Even though there is no food shortage in England, Canadian boys always seem ready to eat, and relish most of the things they get from home. "You've no idea the thrill they get out of a parcel," Brigadier Haldenby said, "mail from home seems to come first in their lives; 'leaves' second. When some one yells 'mail's in' you should see the scramble."

"Anything you can do to send parcels will be immensely appreciated," he assured. 'Soldiers like fruit, candy, socks and cigarettes—there is no limit to the number of cigarettes they can take. Canadian soldiers miss fruit, which is scarce in England," he said. "If you can send canned grapefruit or pineapple juice it will help make up this lack." Canned meats suggest "bully beef" and shouldn't be sent.

DOROTHY DIX

NO MAN AS LOW AS THE ONE WHO PREYS ON YOUNG GIRLS.

Cradle-Robbers Are the Worst Form of Human Parasites and Should Be Shuned by All Teen-Age Youngsters.

Dear Miss Dix,—I have a friend who is in many ways a perfectly wonderful man, but he has a weakness for very young girls and people criticize him sharply for it. He does not seem to realize that aside from the moralities there are certain rules of sportsmanship which govern even the delinquencies. It apparently never occurs to him that the early twenties are the most important years of a girl's life, and that she either makes or breaks her reputation at that time; that her ideals are being formed and that a free-love philosophy would be fatal to the development of her character and her future happiness. When a girl of 20 gets a sentimental interest in a married man of 43 she can, to my way of thinking, have no more disastrous experience. I know this man would not want such a thing for his own daughter. He is too fine to have any sex interest in these juveniles. He merely tries to get them in love with him, and the more innocent and pure they are the more he likes them. I know one girl in particular who is pointed out everywhere as "his girl." I would like to warn my friend about the harm he is doing himself as well as these girls. Do you think I dare do it? J.P.

ANSWER. — Your speaking to this man will do no good. It will only break your friendship. There is nothing you can say to this philanderer that his own conscience hasn't said to him a thousand times, and if he has not heeded that still, small voice, he will not listen to yours.

Men Are Not Ignorant.

No man of 43 is ignorant of the harm that he does a girl when he makes love to her, knowing that he is married and that he has nothing to offer her that it does not degrade her to take, knowing that he is smirching all of her ideals, that he is smearing her name, that he is doing to a helpless and defenceless little creature that which he would shoot any other man for doing to his own daughter.

The man who has affairs with women in his own age class, who are sophisticated and worldly wise, is bad enough, Heaven knows, but at least they know the danger they run and are able to take care of themselves.

But the man who preys upon girls who have no knowledge and experience of life, who have no means of defending themselves, who are as credulous as babes, belongs in the class with the hero of O'Henry's story whose victims were shop girls who were given such little wages that they had to get a gentleman friend to help them pay the rent, and with whom the mere murderers and gangsters refused to associate when he died and went to hell.

Girl Should Beware.

It isn't even sportsmanship for these cradle-robbers to ply their arts on girls in their teens who have not cut their wisdom teeth about men. They are too easy to be fair game. The middle-aged man flatters them to death with his attentions. He makes them feel so grown-up and that they must have IT if they can take a married man away from his wife. And they fall hard for his story about his being misunderstood at home and how he is pining for love.

He is so much more of a man of the world than the boys they have been used to. He has more money to spend, and he can take them places and give them good times, and make them handsome presents. Before they know it the poor little foolish things are caught tight and fast in the net he has woven about them.

The end for the girl is sometimes a broken heart. Sometimes a scandal. Sometimes drifting into a dreary old maidenhood, because the man who was playing with her filled her heart so full of love for him she never had any love to give any other man.

Too bad that there should be men in the world cruel enough to ruin the lives of girls for their own amusement.

ABSENT TREATMENT FOR LOST LOVE.

Dear Miss Dix,—I am going to tell you how I solved the problem of the middle-aged man whose wife has lost all interest in him. My wife and I got along fine until the children came. Then she became so absorbed in them that she forgot that I was living—had no time to talk to me, and when I tried to kiss her she would push me away. Instead, however, of going out and getting drunk or turning philanderer, as I have seen so many other men do when faced with the same conditions, I fixed up two rooms on the third floor and got a radio, and I stay up there out of everybody's way. T.E.L.

ANSWER. — You certainly have found a fine and brave solution for your difficulty and one that in the end will bring you more peace and happiness than you would get out

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Why Does An Apple A Day Keep the Doctor Away?

(By MARY MOORE.)

Peter asked me that. He was passing apples around to six of his playmates out in our garden (and I wonder why the barrel goes down so fast), and one of the youngsters quipped, "Don't you know an apple a day keeps the doctor away?" And Peter being only six, and his Dad being a doctor, wondered if Daddy wasn't going ever to come home from the convention he was currently attending.

Apples are an excellent preventive food. They contain Vitamins A and B and are a good source of the antiscorbutic Vitamin C, although not as much of this latter one as oranges and lemons and tomatoes.

Apples are highly alkaline—and they are Nature's best friend in combating that almost 100 per cent scourge of humanity—hyperacidity.

The apple is composed mostly of the carbohydrates, sugar and dextrin, and being very easily digested it is a good producer of energy. So when we become truly hungry between meals and have more sense than to indulge in sandwiches or cookies—a juicy apple or two or three if we crave them—will almost immediately refresh us and revive our pep. It surprised me to learn that apples have two-thirds the caloric value of potatoes pound for pound. Two good-sized apples contain more food value than does an ordinary glass of milk.

So a sure sign of a wise housewife is a big bowl of polished apples on her buffet—inviting every passerby to "Eat me."

For ways of using apples raw (when they are best) see last week's columns in this space.

Now for some clever cooks' ways of cooking them.

Cleveland Minted Apples.

This dish was invented by a poor but proud little lady who would not let her scanty housekeeping budget deny her the pleasure of having company.

She had a very ordinary roast—done to a turn—but garnished it so beautifully her guests thought the meal quite a banquet.

Six medium-sized apples, 4 cups water, 2 cups sugar, 2 or 3 drops oil of peppermint, green vegetable coloring. Prepare a thin sugar syrup of th water and sugar. Boil for 5 minutes. Then add the peppermint flavoring and green coloring to suit your taste, but be careful not to use too much. Put the six cored and pared apples in this syrup and simmer until tender—turning them gently now and then that the color and flavor will penetrate all surfaces. A large frying pan is a good utensil for this dish. When done carefully skim out and let drain on plate—then lift to plate on which they are to be served. These may be used as an accompaniment to pork or chicken—they are lovely in a border around roast chicken or ham, or ham slices or stuffed shoulder or pork, or roast loin of pork. Or they may be used as a dessert—when they would be served cold with unsweetened whipped cream or topped with Baumert cheese and accompanied with unsweetened fancy crackers.

Take 2—Why does an apple ....

The above idea may be used with pears. You may replace the green coloring and peppermint flavoring with cinnamon candies when you would have red apples or pears. The apples may be baked instead of simmered.

Baked Apple Variations

It is worth your while to buy a basket of Spitzenbergs just to try the New York Central way of serving baked apples.

Nothing less than a Spitzenberg five inches in diameter will do. Wash the apples well, and pare them half way down and remove the core generously. Rub the cut upper half of the apples in coarse granulated sugar, pressing it as firmly as you dare to make it cling and even dint the apple. Fill core with a half and half mixture of Orange Marmalade and sugar, place in individual earthen baking dishes, and bake at 550 deg. Fahr. until apple bursts and until just gold enough to avoid burning. Serve with heavy or Devonshire Cream.

Of course I recognize the drawbacks of this recipe—such a huge apple is almost a complete breakfast—one of the railroads offers one of them, and 3 rashers of bacon and toast and coffee on the 50-cent breakfast. I had it and thought it perfect.

French Chef's Baked Apples

Use medium or small apples for this, for they are baked in ordinary custard cups. Butter custard cups generously. In them place cored and pared apples and in centre of each apples drop 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon sugar and top with ¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind. Bake slowly at 300 deg. Fahr, basting twice with half and half boiling water and butter—2 hours.

The N.Y.C.'s recipe for baking Spitzenbergs, and the following two recipes should be well-marked by you for they are the stars of today's little piece—truly Epicurean dishes, and by discerning cook-readers will be recognized as such.

Mariska's Apple Pancakes.

Two eggs well beaten, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, 1 cup sifted flour, 4 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup milk (additional to the ½ cup), 1 cup freshly finely chopped or grated apples. To the beaten eggs add the sugar and salt then the half cup milk, mix well, and stir in the sifted flour until there are no lumps, then add the remaining 1 cup milk and the butter and apples. (When grating or chopping the apples they will stay white if you drop them immediately into a bowl containing the last cup of milk.) Beat all very well. Cook the pancakes on a greased hot griddle. They are very thin and should be rolled to serve. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and dot with butter and a dash of lemon—they are perfect served for Sunday's breakfast with little link sausages —or if to be used for supper with crumbed pork chops or french tenderloin. (If these pancakes are too thin for you add another ¼ cup flour and 1 teaspoon of baking powder.)

Apple Souffle

This is the answer to your prayer for an apple dessert that can be popped quickly into the oven without going to the bother of making crust for a pie. It requires 6 whites and 3 egg wolks.

Six egg whites stiffly beaten, mix with them 1 cup strained apple sauce, sweetened to taste and flavored with a little vanilla or lemon essence. Turn the mixture into a well buttered baking dish, stand the dish in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes. Serve immediately with the following sauce. Cream 1/3 cup butter with one cup of sugar, add the yolks of 3 eggs slightly beaten, then stir in slowly 1/3 cup of boiling water and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Cook in the supper part of the double boiler, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened and after removing from the stove add 3 tablespoons strained apple sauce. Delicious, light and different.

of taking up wine, women and song and getting into the awful messes that so many men do at your age.

But it is a pathetic thing to think of a man who has worked hard building up a home for his wife and children being relegated to the attic with only a radio for company, instead of being the adored king of the living-room, petted and loved, and around whom all the household activities centre.

Women make no other such terrible mistake as they do in getting so absorbed in their children that they not only lose sight of their duties and obligations to their husbands, but seem to cease to care for them or take any interest in them.

Their husbands only exist to them for the purpose of giving the children everything they want. Their comforts, their pleasures are never considered. All of their tenderness goes to the children.

But they are bitterly repaid for this neglect, for after a while the children are grown and leave them, and when they try to go back to their husbands they find they have lost them, too.

REASONS WHY BOYS ARE UNPOPULAR.

Dear Miss Dix,—Why do I not make a hit with the girls? Other people seem to like me. Can it be because I have an ugly nose owing to an accident I had when I was a child? A.S.

ANSWER. — There is no reason for having an ugly nose in these days when any good plastic surgeon can give you a Greek profile. But I don't imagine that your nose is the reason for your not being popular with the girls, for women don't set the value on personal beauty in men that men do in women.

Maybe your trouble is that you are not neat in your dress, or perhaps you talk too much about yourself, or you may patronize girls, or you may be a vilage cutup. Examine yourself and see if you have not one or other of these faults and then correct it.

Daughters Should No Be Slaves to Their Mothers—After They Marry Their Duty Is To Their Husbands and Own Homes—Firmness If Often Necessary.

Dear Miss Dix—My father died very suddenly two days after my marriage and in order to give my mother a chance to get rehabilitated we invited her to stay with us until she got over the first shock. She owns a very comfortable small home and it was our thought that she would go back to it and we would help her financially to maintain it, but she has made no attempt to go home. Her presence in our home has caused unhappiness, due mostly to the fact that she never gives us any privacy, and when I saw that her being with us was beginning to break up my marriage I made arrangements to have her board with a very nice family living nearby where she would have a beautiful, large, comfortably furnished room and would be treated as a member of the family. This I thought would give her the companionship she sought and which she did not receieve in my home because both my husband and myself are in business. Because of the fact that I insisted on my husband and myself living by ourselves and because I have made arrangements for my mother to board out, I have been condemned by practically all but one or two friends. I have been accaused of being cold and heartless Have I been wrong? Must a sacrifice my happiness so that my mother may have hers. As long as I provide for her so that she has everything for her comfort, am I expected to do anything more when it will wreck my marraige to a man I love so dearly? My mother was never content even when she was with me. She has been spolied all her life. My father was a slave to her. Must I continue on? F. J. D.

ANSWER.—I say "no." When you have provided for your mother's physical comfort and well being, and especially when you have established her in a home so close to you that you can see her several times a day, you have done your full duty to her, and you are certainly not called upon to add to it the costly sacrifice of the wreck of your marriage.

Duty of Children.

This problem of what is the duty of children toward mothers who are breaking up their homes is one that we have regarded heretofore solely from the sentimental point of view. And in it we have given mother the count.

We have sung songs about mother's devotion, and mother's sacrifices for her children, and we have pictured Mother as coming into her children's houses to bless them and the little grandbabes about her knees, and we have berated the sons and daughters who did not welcome mother at their firesides.

But we have said very little about mother being a trouble maker, and we have ignored the fact that in tens of thousands of cases husbands and wives see that mother is the rock on which their homes are going to pieces, and that they have to decide between their husbands and wives and mother.

In such a contingency we have good Biblical authority for husbands and wives cleaving to their mates and foresaking all others, and reason backs up this verdict. It does not make sense for the happiness and the well being of a young man and woman and little children to be sacrificed to the whims of an old woman.

Not Ungrateful.

We hear a lot about ungrateful children and selfish children, but much is to be said about ungrateful and selfish old women who insist upon living with their children when they know that their in-law's loathe them, and who deny their children all privacy because they do not like to spend a moment alone.

Why shouldn't a mother consider her children as much as she expects them to consider her, and after they have provided her with all the comforts of life and made it possible for her to be near them. Why shouldn't she feel that she is in honor obligated to accept the arrangement gratefully and show appreciaton of their affection, instead of complaining because she has had to give up her plan for theirs?.. All children should feel that it is their sacred obligation to their mothers to take care of them to the best of their ability, but it is a fantastic stretch of duty to consider that they have to martyrize themselves for their mothers.

One Way To Treat Divorced Husband

Dear Miss Dix—I am happily married to a wonderful man and have had two years of wedded bliss, but this problem has come up; I have two children, 12 and 8 years old, by a former marriage and my husband is generous and good to them. Once every week their father is allowed to visit them and pay me their support money. Now my husband's business takes him away for five meeks at a time and it irks him to have me entertain my former husband while he is gone. Also, if he happens to be at home when the boys' father comes, he is much displeased if their father corrects the children in any way. I can understand my husband's point of view about disliking having him here when he is away, but the father is in his rights to come to see the children. What shall I do?

ANXIOUS.

ANSWER —Divorce is always a pretty complicated business, isn't it? Especially when there are children. But it seems to me that you can settle your problem easily enough. Have your ex-husband telephone when he is coming to see the children and you get off of the premises. Probably he would like to have the children to himself for a little while without either you or your present husband being around.

Complications In Child Marriage

Dear Miss Dix—A girl got married to a college student when she was 18 and her mother had the marriage annulled, or at least the girl thought so. The couple went their separate ways and the girl married another young man whom she divorced. Now the girl is very much in love with her first husband and wants him to come back and live with her, but he has fallen in love with another girl and is contemplating marrying her, but finds that the supposed school girl and boy marriage hasn't been annulled and that he is still married in the eyes of the law Inasmuch as the girl has been married to another man and in turn divorced he feels that he has grounds for divorce. The question is: Does he? And does the second husband have grounds for a divorce?

JOSEPHINE.

ANSWER—Maybe they know the answer in Reno—but I don't

IF YOU'RE seeing spots this winter, blame it on the leopard and his cousin, the ocelot. These twain are tops in the fur field this season and are being used for accessories as well as for coats and suits. Jaeckel has used ocelot to make a chic jacket in the useful and fashionable thirty-two inch length. The easy fit and loose swinging back make this an excellent choice for general wear and especially for wear over a suit.

The skins are beautifully worked, as witness the pleats and sleeves. High standing collar. Ocelot, too, is used for the trig little bonnet which is combined with brown velvet.

Rangers Planning Battalion Dance

Arrangements have been made for the Prince of Wales Rangers' dance, and the date set is Tuesday, November 12. It will be held in the Market Hall, as the City Trust has granted the battalion permission to use the building on that night.

The dance is to be for the troops and their wives or lady friends only, and all members of the regiment will be in uniform. The expenses will be met by money realized through the battalion tatoo, held at the Exhibition Camp, and the canteen which operated in the men's mess.

Refreshments are to be provided, and all members of the regiment have been invited, and it is expected that the attendance will reach over a thousand. It is the first social function of the regiment since the camp, and both Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., and Lt. Col. M. H. Park are anxious that the dance be a success. It is purely for the troops, Col Dewart said, and all officers of the regiment are co-operating to make it a real night for the men.

MacDonald, official representative from the Institute at Oshawa, commended the local organization on the success of their campaign.

The Stars Say . . .

For Wednesday, October 30.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ANOTHER high-pressure and aggressive day is read from the forceful combination of potent planetary figures. Affairs may be expected to move decisively, strenuously, perhaps belligerently and drastically, toward the great objectives. This probably in coalition with groups, societies or organizations of vast scope and power. Weighty matters of both businesse and private character may be in the balance, which may be swayed by one polarity or the other by the ability to exercise good judgment, sagacity and definite constructive programs. Precaution and tact are enjoined, since there are signs of strength or surprising angles should impulse or personal entanglement complicate or undermine promising circumstances. Love intrigues may be imminent and dangerous.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great activity and stress, in which ultimate issues depend decisively on the use of wisely directed energies and faculties toward constructive and progressive objectives. Powerful groups are involved, whose influence may be for public, humanitarian educational or social welfare, and these should be approached with finesse and practical plans rather than over aggressively or insistently. Enticing complications of a sentimental, romantic or intriguing nature may arise to nullify some very hopeful and promising conditions.

A child born on this day should have an abundance of energy and talents for attaining its highest ambitions, which may lie in practical channels or in great creative expression in cultural lines. It will be sound and dependable although having a subtle, intriguing and captivating personality.

KINGSTON, ONT. — From this city comes the news that tomato juice is made much more flavoursome by adding a little H. P. Sauce. Try this idea yourself and you will enjoy tomato juice with more zest than ever.

H. P. Sauce is a general favourite and has been used in cooking and on the table for many, many years. Being a thick, rich, fruity sort of sauce, H. P. has extraordinary flavouring power. It makes hot and cold dishes of every description taste much nicer. Use this English sauce for adding flavour to soups, stews, meat pies, gravies, macaroni, chops, steaks, cheese dishes and so on.

To Relieve Bad Cough Quickly, Mix This at Home

Does the Work in a Hurry. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

Here's an old home remedy your mother probably used, and, for real results, it is still a very dependable thing for distressing coughs. Try it once, and you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed —a child could do it.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of really splendid cough remedy—more than you could buy for four times the money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

This splendid home mixture has a three-fold action. You can feel it take hold at once. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. This explains why it gives such prompt, pleasing results.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well known for its prompt action on throat membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Learn in New Home Course

What a lot playing the piano can do for a girl! The centre of the fun, she fairly blossoms.

And you can, teach yourself to play. With a guiding chart you soon become familiar with keys and notes and, following a shortcut method, you can quickly learn popular tunes, have quite a repertoire.

Your chart is the exact size of the main part of the keyboard. With each key (numbered) is the note which is its symbol on the music staff. When you place this chart behind your keyboard you see at a glance which key to strike for each note.

Then you learn to play frequently used chords this easy way. The keys for each chord are indicated by numbers, as in our diagram, and you just play the like-numbered keys shown by your chart.

Now to play lively tunes—simply following the melody line with your right hand, playing harmonizing chords with the left!

Entertain on dates and parties by playing the piano. Our new 24-page instruction book includes the keyboard chart and a table of chords. Explains elements of music. Gives three favorite airs for practise.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of QUICK COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING to The Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T HELP THE ENEMY

THERE ARE two cardinal principles of defensive play which underlie all others. The first is to find some course of action, if you can, which definitely contributes to the success of your effort to defeat the contract. If at any stage of the try, you are unable to figure out a lead or play which seems likely to help that cause, then observe the other basic principle, which is this—do not do something which probably will help the declarer. It is like the situation of the youngster treed by the bear who prayed: "At least, if you can't help me, for goodness sake don't help that bear."

West reflected upon the perversity of a world in which he would not have even one heart to lead to the suit bid by his partner. He didn't like to lead a diamond, as that suit had been bid and rebid by the dummy, and his lead of it might prove the worst of all, helping the declarer to set up some winners there before its side entries, if any, were disturbed. He didn't like to lead away from his club tenace, and that left him only one choice, as he figured it—spades.

West therefore led his spade 4, dummy playing the 6, East the Q and South the A. The contract was thus assured at the outset, declarer taking four tricks in spades, three in diamonds and two with the aces of hearts and clubs.

Clearer thinking would have told West that, next to the dummy's suit, the declarer's was the worst lead. He should have led boldly away from his club tenace—not at suit play perhaps, but surely at No Trumps. The declarer then would have had to guess who had the spade Q and probably would have guessed wrong. If he had, he could not have found any way to take nine tricks, and would have been sure to go down one or two, depending on how he went about it.

Some Extra Ships

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 — (AP). — A British broadcast picked up here to-day by National Broadcasting Company said that Great Britain has gained "a total of 1,800,000 tons in additional shipping" because Greece has placed her ships at Britain's disposal.

Republican Win May Change Canada's Treaty

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 — (AP) —Canada's reciprocal trade agreement with the United States may be affected by the outcome of voting in the United States Presidential elections next Tuesday.

A victory for the Republican Party would certainly result in a change of method of negotiating trade agreements and might render it difficult to renew the present agreement with Canada, according to official comment here.

The Republican platform of 1940 declares the party to believe in "tariff protection for agriculture, labor, and industry as essential to our American standard of living."

The platform adds that "the measure of protection shall be determined by scientific methods, with due regard to the interests of the consumer."

But the platform goes on to say that "we shall explore every possibility of re-opening the channels of international trade through negotiations so conducted as to produce genuine reciprocity...."

Republican candidate Wendell L. Willkie has approved in some measure the trade expansion efforts of the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, but his platform roundly condemns the power enjoyed by President Roosevelt to negotiate trade agreements within a 50 per cent. tariff change limit, without the necessity of Congressional approval.

One Power They Will Curb.

This power was renewed during the present congressional session but only after a stiff fight in Congress. The Republicans say they will end it if put in power, and require that all trade agreements must be approved by Congress.

Canada's present trade agreement with the United States runs to the end of 1941 and indefinitely thereafter unless notice of termination is given by either party.

It was negotiated in 1937 at the same time a similar reciprocal agreement was completed with the United Kingdom. Both were for at least three years ending with 1941, and the joint negotiations occupied almost a year.

Republicans are the traditional high-tariff party in the United States, as the Conservative party was in Canada, and they did a fairly good job of tariff wall building 10 years ago.

But when the Liberal Party came into power in Canada in 1935 there was little disposition to tear down what tariff barrier had been erected by the Conservative administration and it is believed here that a Willkie victory would not necessarily mean immediate tariff action in line with Republican ideas of controlling imports.

South Dummer Puts On Supper

COTTESLOE, Oct. 30—(ENS). — The annual chicken pie supper held at South Dummer on Thursday evening was a decided success. The tables decorated in Hallowe'en colors, fairly groaned with good things to eat and many pies and cakes were sold afterwards. The program, which was given in the church, was presided over by the pastor, Rev. M. I. Robinson. Rev. Mr. Glover of Hastings and Rev. Mr. Wilkinson of Warsaw gave addresses and the repartee of the three clergymen caused much merriment. Those assisting in the program were Mrs. James Hawthorne of Warsaw, with a vocal solo; Mrs. (Rev.) Wilkinson, a piano solo; Miss Lela Kirk of Norwood, vocal solo; Mrs. Gerald Andrews, two recitations; Mr. Rutter of Norwood was twice heard in vocal solos; Mr. Cole of Norwood, a vocal solo; Mr. Gunstone of Norwood led in community singing; Mesdames Cuthbertson and Wright of Norwood, two piano duets; Mrs. (Rev.) Glover of Hastings, a vocal solo. The accompanists for the evening were Mrs. Rork Ferguson and Wesley Wildman.

Community Shower.

The community met on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webster to honor their daughter, Mrs. William Hamilton (nee Marguerite Webster). Many beautiful presents were brought by individuals and the community presented her with a chesterfield table and a linen tablecloth. Fife's Orchestra furnished the music for dancing by the younger folk, and music and games were enjoyed by the older ones. Lunch was served and all joined in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton a happy married life and invited them to often come back to Cottesloe.

Y.P.S. Takes Service.

The Sunday morning service was in charge of the Y.P.S. as Mr. Thistlewaite was on the Warsaw charge, leaving Rev. Mr. Wilkinson free to assist Rev. Mr. Lauchlin, who is ill. Donald Clysdale, the president, was in charge. Mrs. Jos. Gallagher read from Acts and gave a most excellent explanation. Madeline Toms read the Scripture lesson from Matthew, and Helen Tedford gave a most excellent discourse on "Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" The choir rendered an anthem. After a hymn and the National Anthem Mrs. McDonald closed with prayer.

Misses Rena and Mary Toms were home for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. William Forsyth were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. McDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kidd spent Sunday afternoon at Nassau.

Everett Toms, who has spent the summer in Western Canada, returned home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Teal were Sunday guests of Mrs. Annie Miles.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Freeburn were supper hour guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Patterson.

Britain Rushing Aid To Invaded Greece

Ruins of the temple of the Olympian Zeus.

A view of Athens from the Acropolis.

Following a three-hour ultimatum from Rome, which was rejected by the Greek government, Italian troops poured from Albania across the Greek border as the latest Axis "grab" got under way. British naval forces were immediately dispatched from Egypt, following an appeal from Athens to the British government for help in resisting the Italian invaders. The strategically important island of Crete will probably now play an important part in British naval operations in the Mediterranean.

Drunken Bandit Takes Couzens For $50 "Ride"

DETROIT, Oct. 30 — (CP). — A drink-crazed colored bandit kidnapped former Mayor Frank Couzens from the driveway of his home last night while his wife looked on helplessly, forced him to drive several miles and then robbed him of $50 and his personal possessions.

During the wild ride which lasted for almost half an hour, the bandit fired a shot into the floor of Couzen's car, which the latter had purchased two hours earlier.

"I was going to take my wife for a ride in the new car," said Couzens. "She had gone back in the house to get something."

Couzens said he heard the door on the right hand side of the car opened, but thought it was his wife.

"A man stuck a gun in my shoulder and said, 'Drive, you ——, drive.' The man had a strong odor of liquor on his breath.

"Just then my wife came out of the door and I yelled, 'Go back, dear. Go back'."

Mrs. Couzens saw the bandit and ran back in the house. She immediately called the police.

Watch, Glasses, Bills

Meanwhile, Couzens was forced to drive down Longfellow Avenue to Third Street. It was at this time that the thug raised the gun and fired into the floor boards. He then took Couzens' watch, glasses and several loose bills.

They turned from Third on to Edison Avenue and proceeded east. At Woodward Avenue Couzens attempted to stop the car to await an opening in traffic before attempting to cross, he said.

"If you stop this car I'll blow your brains out," Couzens quoted the bandit as saying.

During the ride they passed a police scout car and the bandit threatened to kill Couzens if the police stopped him.

The ride finally ended in a side street of Russell, the exact location of which the former mayor could not recall.

Couzens returned home before a broadcast could be put on the air with a description of the car.

Description of the thug given police by Couzens was a brown-skinned negro about 30 years of age, wearing a gray hat and carrying a blue steel gun.

Norwood Group Opens Sessions

NORWOOD, Oct. 30.—(ENS). — The opening fall meeting of Christ Anglican church Women's Auxiliary was held last Friday afternoon in the parish hall, with a good attendance.

The members decided to meet twice monthly, on the second and fourth Fridays, and will assemble on November 8 at the rectory. This meeting is to take the form of a social afternoon.

A variety of games, contests, etc., were conducted under the direction of the program convener, Ken Wright. In addition there was an instrumental duet contributed by Messrs. Garnet Rose and Jake Cavanaugh, on the ukelele and violin.

Prizes for the best costumes were captured by two boys, both of whom were attired in ladies' dress. They were Pte. Joseph Clements and Jack Godfrey of Rice Lake.

Lunch was served at the conclusion of the evening. The next meeting will be held on Monday, November 11.

US Delays Move In Greek Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 — (AP) —President Roosevelt was advised to-day by Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, and Under Secretary Sumner Wells that they still lacked enough official confirmation on Balkan developments to issue neutrality and other documents in connection with the Greek-Italian conflict.

Stephen Early, White House Secretary, said the President and the State Department officials had spent an hour "thoroughly and most completely canvassing the foreign picture in its new light and angles."

Hull and Welles told the President, Early said, that proclamations relating to application of the Neutrality Act or the freezing of Greek funds in the United States must await further information on the actual state of affairs.

The documents are prepared, Early said, but the officials do not wish to take precipitate action which might cause inconvenience to nationals of the countries involved.

The President saw the State officials soon after his return from New York.

We respectfully ask the Government to at once enact and enforce such regulations as will result in such curtailment of the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

Advertising is News too—

WHEN people are given helpful information about merchandise which they want and where it can be obtained, the result is good news for the readers and profitable advertising for the merchants. This newspaper offers the most effective method for business men to tell the news about their merchandise and service to the families in this community.

The extent of this effectiveness depends, of course, upon our circulation. Not necessarily how large, but where, how obtained and other facts that the advertiser has a right to know when he spends money for advertising. To give our advertisers this information we belong to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a national, cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. The Bureau was organized in 1914 and its purpose is to furnish advertisers with verified information about the circulation of the publisher members.

The Bureau has a staff of skilled auditors who make an annual audit of the circulation records of each publisher member. This audited information is then issued in A. B. C. reports which show how many copies of a newspaper are printed, where they go, how the circulation is secured and many other facts advertisers should know.

This newspaper therefore not only offers advertisers a good way to get their news to the right people in the community but also provides protection for advertising investments by giving audited circulation figures.

Wrecks Repaired Docks Many Trapped In London Bombing

LONDON, Oct. 31.—(CP).—The Air Ministry announced to-day that Royal Air Force bombers scored many hits overnight on docks and ship berths in the invasion harbor of Ostend, which the Germans had repaired following earlier bombings.

Pilots reported the targets were bombed "freely" and that there was a heavy explosion after every second bomb burst. Debris was thrown high in the air, the Ministry said.

The R.A.F. squadrons flew straight up the Belgian and Netherlands coast to the German North Sea shore, blasting at docks in Antwerp and Flushing and attacking the big German naval base at Emden, in Germany proper.

Cherbourg was reported to have been attacked in daylight operations yesterday, and the Air Ministry news service said dockside buildings were hit and a heavy salvo of bombs dropped among four torpedo boats cruising about 20 miles offshore.

One German plane was said to have been shot down, and one British plane failed to return.

The R.A.F. also attacked German-held channel ports and communications in Western Germany in the night, the Ministry said, in spite of adverse weather.

Many Trapped

LONDON, Oct. 31.—(CP)—An undetermined number of persons were reported trapped in the basement of a large apartment house hit by a Nazi aerial bomb last night.

There were more than 150 persons in the basements of the building

London, Oct. 31 (CP)

JAN MASARYK, Foreign Minister of the Czech government in Britain, declared today that the Czechs are not carrying out organized sabotage against Germany "for the simple reason that we would be massacred."

Perfect Record

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)

IT'S a great thing to know when to quit. Take the Chief of the General Staff, Maj-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, for instance. He knows the time to stop.

For the first time in his life Gen. Crerar bowled last night. Opening the general staff branch bowling league the General sent the first ball down the alley after protesting he hadn't the "vaguest idea" how to bowl.

All five pins went down for a strike.

"I'm never going to bowl again," announced the chief of staff. "A perfect record is a perfect record."

Moscow Denies 134 Warplanes Sent To Greece

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted a Reuters News Agency dispatch from Salonika today stating that 134 Soviet warplanes have arrived in Greece in the last few days under a recent Soviet-Greek agreement, National Broadcasting Company reported.

The dispatch said the planes, including 45 bombers, were brought by rail through Thrace.

N.B.C. said the B.B.C. also reported the Greek Air Force delivered its first blow at the Italians yesterday. Greek planes, sweeping low, turned their machine-guns on Italian troops and broke up a force brought up as a reinforcement near the Albanian border, B.B.C. said.

Just Imaginary

MOSCOW, Oct. 31—(AP).—Tass, the Soviet news agency, today termed a report that Soviet airplanes had reached Greece "a fantasy."

Tass circulated this communique: "The Reuters agency is circulating a report printed in The New York Time alleged that some 120 or 150 military airplanes have arrived in Greece from the Soviet Union in the past few days. Tass is authorized to state that this Reuter's report is throughout a product of the fantasy of its authors and does not correspond to the facts in any extent whatsoever."

Rare, Amazing Revelation Of Character Presented As Fred Thain Stands Trial

Fate Of Rawdon Man Will Be Decided Late Today By Jury

Theft Of Chop Is Only Motive Offered For Crime

By HARRY THEOBALD
(Examiner Staff Writer.)

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 31.—With the confession of having murdered Arnold Wellman and his wife confronting him in the statement he signed last February 3rd, the trial of Fred Thain, forty-six years old farmer of Rawdon township, ended on a note of sheer hopelessness Wednesday afternoon as his defence reached out blindly for some mitigating evidence to question his sanity, and evoked, instead, expert opinion from two alienists that his mental condition seems normal and he is responsible for his actions.

The end came swiftly after a morning of unavoidable delays, and at 4.45 p.m. Mr. Justice MacKay directed an adjournment until this morning when final argument will be heard and the case left to the verdict of the jury.

Confirmed Suspicion.

Thain's statement to Provincial Police Sergeant Harry Thompson simply confirmed the details of suspicion and fact which were bound about him from the moment former Provincial Constable Everett Smith, now of Petawawa, learned that the prisoner had bought five shotgun shells at Graham's general store at Wellman's Corners.

E. L. Snyder, K.C., Deputy Attorney-General in the role of special Crown Prosecutor, marshalled his evidence to the climax of Thain's confession of the crime. Unexpected evidence called in the prisoner's defense veritably capped that climax.

Robert McCullough, defense counsel, a young Belleville lawyer, announced that he wished to examine two psychiatrists, Dr. Ernest A. Clarke, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital for Mental Cases at Kingston and Dr. George S. Tennant, superintendent of the Ontario Mental Hospital at Brockville. They had previously examined Thain and were present in court from the beginning of the trial. Both of them testified that the prisoner gave no evidence of mental illness.

Mr. McCullough then said: "I regret that I have no other witnesses."

Thain's Statement

Given in the form of questions and answers, Thain's account of his last free days in Rawdon township last winter can be abridged in the third person. He said he took his

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 31. — Theft of $14.30 worth of chopped grain was the only motive alleged by the Crown in accusing Fred Thain of the murder of Arnold Wellman and his wife in Rawdon Township last January in addressing the jury as the trial entered its concluding phase before Mr. Justice MacKay.

Mr. McCullough suggested that men did not go around committing murder for such minor motives and proposed that it was difficult and incredible to "tie that motive of theft into the picture of that crime.

"Some chopped grain was found in Thain's barn, but there was no evidence to show that it did not belong to him."

Court Room Crowded.

The court room was crowded again this morning with men and women from that western section of Rawdon Township between Stirling and Marmora known locally as The Valley. Some of them began arriving an hour and a half before the sittings opened and some with paper bags had come prepared to remain in the court buildings throughout the noon hour.

Idle or morbid curiosity was not the attracting influence that drew these farmers from the Harold Settlement along the Stirling-Marmora Highway. To them it was drama from every day life, rare and amazing revelation of character as the Crown presented it, involving a comparatively young farmer of 46 years whom they had known all their lives.

If all this story pieced together by witnesses was true, then they saw Fred Thain as a split personality, a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde of their rural community in which he had

Ankara Finds Italian Campaign To Date Far From Brilliant

ANKARA, TURKEY, Oct. 31.—(AP).—Semi-official sources in Ankara asserted to-day Greece has informed the Turkish government she can resist Italian pressure alone.

These sources declared Turkey would enter the war only "in case of a Bulgarian attack on Greece or if Turkey's national interests are endangered."

However, Turkey cannot remain disinterested in developments in the Eastern Mediterranean, they said, and has informed the Athens government she will give Greece every help possible, even if she does not enter the war.

The official Turkish radio, in a discussion of the Greek campaign, said Italy is facing an important test of her military prestige and thus far has not "shown up brilliantly."

The announcer declared that the best way for Britain to aid Greece was by bombing Italian air bases, protecting Greece against air attacks and also by "attacking Italian cities, including Rome."

The announcer said the "Italians seem especially sensitive" to air raids.

The radio asserted that Italy apparently had attacked Greece independently of Germany as a matter of prestige.

"While Hitler was trying to mediate between France and Italy," it said, "Italy suddenly attacked Greece in an effort to prove to Germany that Italy can act on her own initiative.

"Italy also wants what territory she can occupy in Greece to make sure she will be rewarded for her efforts in the war at the side of German."

The commentator predicted that the Italians would try to retain Salonika if they were able to seize that vital Aegean port.

REGINA, Oct. 31—(CP).—Red Cross funds were boosted by $45.60 as the result of the auction sale yesterday of the grand champion wether lamb at the Saskatchewan sheep and swine show. The lamb, weighing 76 pounds, was purchased by Lieut.-Gov. A. P. McNab. The purchase price of 60 cents a pound, compares with a market price for lambs of seven and a half cents.

Duce's Generals Blame Floods For Army's Slow Progress Using Albanian Spearhead

Rome Reports Shun Word Of Units Aimed At Salonika

ROME, Oct. 31 (CP)—The Italian high command claimed today that Italian troops fighting through mud and rain have pushed forward to the Kalamas River in Greece, five miles from the Albanian frontier.

The offensive along the Kalamas River, which parallels the southern end of the Albanian frontier with Greece in the Epirus district, appeared aimed at the industrial city of Joannina (Janina), about 30 miles from the border.

(An Athens communique said Greek troops on the Epirus front had held their positions all day yesterday after withdrawing from advance posts according to a pre-arranged plan.)

The Italian communique made no mention of any activity on the northern end of the front, where another Fascist column had been reported aiming in the direction of Salonika, 100 miles away on the Greek east coast.

The communique claimed several Geek planes were shot down during bombing operations from which one Italian plane failed to return.

(The Athens government accused the Italians of bombing and machine-gunning "indiscriminately" at Patras and of attacking "non-military objectives" elsewhere. It said only one Greek plane was lost.)

Claim Troopships Targets.

The Italian communique claimed that objectives bombed included "loaded troopships" at Patras as well as the Lepanto naval base on the Gulf of Corinth, barracks at Metzovo Pass in western Greece aid highway junctions in the Kalamas Valley.

(There was no comment on these claims from Greek sources.)

The correspondent of the Rome newspaper Il Messaggero, in explaining why the Italians are making so little progress, claimed that torrential rains over the first 48 hours of hostilities created in the areas of operations "a vast swamp from which mountain peaks emerge dark and spectral against a background of clouds."

The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma admitted that the Italians themselves thus far have done little fighting, leaving the front line attacking to the Albanian militia.

(An Athens communique noted tha "bands of irregulars are collaborating with the Italians.")

Wants British Defeat

Paris, Oct. 24 (AP)
(Delayed via Berlin)

VICE-PREMIER Pierre Laval before his interview with Hitler told me he believed democracy in the modern world, in all countries, is dead, and that he would try to stake France's future on collaboration with Nazi Germany.

Laval said he based his belief on the passing of democracy on the victories marked up by the totalitarian powers in the last war.

I received the definite impression from Laval that he earnestly desires the defeat of Britain as a correllary to the French-German "collaboration" now agreed upon in principle.

Speaking from behind his desk in the Hotel Matignon, Laval asserted the future of France depended on the friends she made at this time.

Britain Placing Huge U.S. Freighter Order

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—(AP)—Henry Morgenthau, United States secretary of the treasury, disclosed today that the British government has ordered "a large number" of freight ships in the United States.

He said he did not know whether the orders involved construction of a new shipyard in the United States for exclusive British use, but he added:

"They have ordered a large number of one standardized type of freight ship."

(The Washington Post said today that the British and United States Goverment have been discussing plans for construction of a huge ship "assembly plant" which would be "able to handle 28 keels simultaneously" on a mass production basis.)

Morgenthau declined other details explaining that his only part in negotiations had been to refer the British Purchasing Commission to Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, when the commission brought the subject to him.

"The negotiations have been going so well, that I have had no occasion to do anything further," he said.

Border Line Unchanged Major Fighting Between Advance Units

ATHENS, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Greek troops were reported today to have counter-attacked north of the town of Ioannina (Janina), and sources regarded as reliable said they had stormed and recaptured a hill.

The Greeks, rushing the hill under heavy fire, were said to have seized large qauntities of abandoned arms and equipment from the Italian invaders.

The Ionnina sector, on the western frontier with Albania, still was the scene of the four-day-old war, but there had been little change in the line. Along the rest of the front, the Greeks said the action was limited to sporadic firing and skirmishes between advance units of the two armies.

Both Italians and Greeks were bombing lines of communication behind the front.

Last night's Greek general staff communique said one Greek fighter plane was lost Wednesday and a later report said a Italian seaplane was shot down over the coast.

Elsewhere, there were no air raid alarms in Greece today up to noon.

Not to Main Line Yet

LONDON, Oct. 31—(CP). — Authoritiative military circles in London said today Italian troops invading Greece had not yet reached the Greeks' main defensive line.

The main Fascist advance since the attack began Monday has been along the left of the Greek line on the southeastern borders of Albania, they added.

Brisk outpost fighting along the entire front was reported in this capital today, but there was no information of British troop landings in Greece.

The Italians apparently were

Famed Court Scarred By Bomb

LONDON, Oct. 31 (CP)—The famous Centre Court at Wimbledon, where world tennis stars have made sports history, has been damaged by Germain air raiders.

The damage occurred recently but only today did British authorities permit the fact to be disclosed.

Other famous landmarks damaged in recent air attacks, which officials permitted to be identified today, were London's Leicester Square, in the heart of the theatrical district and a short distance from Piccadilly Circus; St. Bartholomew's Medical School; the 17th century Stationers' Hall in Kingsway; and the Dutch Church at Austin Friars.

Leicester Square, dating from the latter half of the 17th century, was the site in time past of homes of such historical personages as George II, Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds and John Hunter.

The Dutch Church, not far from the Bank of England in the heart of the city, dates from 1354. It es-

5 Million A Day For U.S. Goods

Canada and U.K. Would Spend More If Planes Were On Hand

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Canada and Great Britain are spending about $5,000,000 a day in the United States for war materials to aid in their death-struggle with Hitlerism and its allies.

They would spend more if the needed airplanes and other equipment were available in greater quantity—as they soon will be, an official of the British Purchasing Commission here told The Canadian Press today.

Since the war started the contracts entered into with United States producers for munitions and French contracts taken over by the British when France capitulated exceed $2,000,000,000, he said.

This huge spending program is administered by a staff of more than 1,500 made up of members of the commission, experts, technicians, inspectors, accountants and office workers.

Main body of this organization is in New York where the head of the organization, Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal, has his office as director general of British purchases in the United States.

It is through this body that Canadian order for war materials which must be obtained in the United States are handled.

But while the head office is in New York, an important and growing section is located in Washington. More than 100 high officials of the commission and staff occupy the entire ninth floor of the Willard Hotel, and overflow into two nearby office buildings.

Mr. Purvis comes over from New York at frequent intervals, as does Morris Wilson, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, who is head of the aircraft section as personal representative in the United States of Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production.

Naturally only a comparatively small portion of the gigantic expenditure here is on Canada's account. But it represents an import-

Warplane Outlook Brightens

Canada Turning To American Models Air Chief Power Says

OTTAWA, Oct. 31 (CP) — Air Minister Power today described Canada's aircraft supply situation as somewhat more satisfactory than it was recently.

"We will probably never have all we want," he said, speaking particularly of planes for training in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan schools. "But we are getting along. We may be pinched at certain times owing to a shortage of deliveries but we will not have any consistent shortage."

The minister told a press conference attended by a dozen newspaper reporters that the spare parts situation in the air force was distinctly better than it was and is steadily improving. At first, he said, the manufacturers tended to concentrate on turning out complete aircraft rather than the spare parts needed to keep aircraft in operation.

Maj. Power said he had no knowledge of the United States bomb sight or whether any steps were being taken to make it available to the empire forces.

Canada had not enough fighter aircraft for air-tight defence of the two coasts but the squadrons on duty there would be strengthened with additional planes as they became available, subject always to the prior claims of the forces taking part in the battle of Britain.

The Minister said he could not elaborate on the nature of the war scientific research being carried on because it was essentially secret. At a previous conference he invited voluntary contributions for scientific research, said some $2,000,000 had already been received and $10,000,000 could be used.

"We have set up a committee and commandeered the services of some of the best scientists in Canada in a search for superior weapons and developments of existing weapons," he said.

Berliners Sick Of The War

British Raids Shaking Faith In Nazi Air Force

VANCOUVER, Oct. 31.—(CP).—A story of British air raids on Berlin that have made the people of the German capital "sick of war" was told here last night by a young German-Jewish refugee who arrived aboard the Japanese liner Heian Maru.

He was one of 214 passengers, many of them from Nazi Germany en route to relatives in the United States.

The young refugee told of the amazement of Berliners at the first British bombing raid on the city after Nazi Air Marshal Goering had boasted no British plane ever would reach Berlin.

Greeks Take 800 Prisoners As Italian Push Lags Along 100-Mile Warfront

Duce's Bombers Painted In Grecian Colors Kill 110, Wound 300 In Patras As Crowds Pack Streets Ignorant War On

SALONIKA, Greece, Oct. 31—(AP).—Britain, invoking the power of her Mediterranean fleet, was authoritatively reported today to have landed troops on strategic Greek islands as this little kingdom's hardy mountain men fought to stem Italian troops pounding at her northwest.

For military reasons, the islands where the landings were said to have been made under the big guns of British warships could not be identified by name, it was stated. The number of troops involved and the nature of the equipment they brought with them likewise were undisclosed.

Occupation of the islands, however, presumably would give British forces bases from which to launch aid for their newest ally.

Reports from the warfront 100 miles west of her, meanwhile, indicated the Greeks were continuing to hold their own.

A communique said that Greek forces in the Epirus sector on the southern end of the Albanian border had kept the Italians in check all day yesterday after "a slight withdrawal of their advance sections according to pre-arranged plan."

The Italian offensive in this area was reported taking the form of a two pronged drive aimed at the industrial city of Ioannina, 30 miles from the frontier.

Band of irregulars, the high command said, were "collaborating" with the Italians. The nationality of the irregulars was not identified.

Little military activity was reported elsewhere, though unofficial sources estimated the Greeks had captured approximately 800 prisoners on the northern end of the front during the last few days.

The high command accused the Italian air force of bombing Patras "indiscriminately" and machine-gunning the population. Air attacks on "non-military targets" at Rion and Navpactos—across the Gulf of Patras from Patras—in which one person was killed and five wounded also were reported.

The loss of one Greek plane which engaged Italian fighters over Albanian territory was announced.

Reinforcements continued to stream out of this city by every available means of conveyance as the Greeks took advantage of the lack of Italian aerial activity in this area to rush men and equipment to the front.

Thus far Salonika has yet to experience an air raid alarm; except for the blackout, curfew and martial law, life is continuing here much as usual.

Mobilization proceeded at top speed, however. Hundreds of peasants waited to exchange their civilian clothes for military uniforms while others, fully equipped, departed by lorries and taxis gaily singing the National Anthem.

110 Dead in Patras

The Athens News Agency, meanwhile, estimated at 110 dead and more than 300 wounded, the casualties resulting from the bombing Monday of the port of Patras by Italian planes which flew Greek colors.

The news agency said that the time the attack was made the Patras population did not even know their country was at war with Italy and that crowds had gathered in the streets to watch the planes under the impression they were Greek.

About 200 bombs were dropped by the raiders, which passed low over the city, the news agency declared. Forty-five of the dead were children and many women and children were reported among the wounded.

over once or twice a week, doing much damage," he related. "The people were amazed and began to criticise the German air force. When I left the British were coming over almost every night. The people of Berlin are sick of war. They do not care who wins so long as the war will end soon."

When he left Berlin, he added, people were spending nights in what air raid shelters were available. During the day they are tired and could not work well. A lot have lost their homes in the bombings.

Another refugee told of five months he spent in a concentration camp, srrounded by electrically-charged barbed wire fences and six watch towers mounting machine guns.

When a Jewish prisoner escaped all other Jews in the camp were not allowed to sleep until the escaped Jew was recaptured.

Many of the refugees, who left Germany by way of Russia, refused to talk and all asked that their names not be used because of possible reprisals against relatives remaining in the Reich.

ant contribution so far as Canada is concerned and Supply Minister Howe, who is here this week, seldom lets more than a month pass without conferring with the commission here.

In a few weeks Dr. Wilson's entire aircraft section will move here from New York to take up quarters in the old Mellon mansion on Massachusetts avenue, close by the Canadian legation.

New York is the heart of financial America and head office of many great industrial producers, but in Washington the commission can get close to the Bureaus of Standards, government technical branches and the administration itself.

Much interest was aroused in Washington when what appeared to be iron grills were placed in all the windows of the Willard hotel offices of the commission.

velopment in the war so far related to air operations, both offensive and defensive, the war technical and scientific committee which handled research did work for the army and navy as well and included representatives of several government departments.

Maj. Power said Canada's policy of concentrating on the manufacture of aircraft of United States type did not involve abandonment of the manufacture of British type planes now being made in the Dominion. The Anson advanced trainer used in Canadian air schools was a British type plane, the frame for which was produced in Canada.

In embarking on the production of new types, however, the tendency would be to make United States types rather than British types.

Need More Radio Men.

Apparently there are not as many amateur radio men in Canada as the government thought. Major Power said the response to an appeal for such men to offer their services to the Air Force was not satisfactory. He had been informed, he said, that since factory-made radios had become so cheap the number of young men who made their own sets and experimented with sending and receiving sets had fallen off.

The Air Force wants men who can repair, operate and maintain sending and receiving sets. As some skilled radio men may already be serving in the forces an effort will be made to locate them in the army, the navy and the air force, and arrange for transfers where possible.

Many requests had been received for establishment of units of the air cadet corps for 'teen-age boys, the Minister said. Local organizations had been set up in Westmount, Que., Vancouver, and other centres but as yet they had not been co-ordinated on a nation-wide basis.

Major Power said he had no information as to whether Great Britain was gaining air supremacy in relation to the enemy. He did not know how many aircraft Great Britain was manufacturing nor how many pilots were being turned out of British training schools.

"I think that is quite reasonable," he said, when asked to comment on President Roosevelt's statement last night that the Royal Air Force was stronger now than when German air attacks on Great Britain started.

Apparently, he said, the British had not lost a great number of planes and they were getting quite a number of new planes.

Some graduates of the British Commonwealth air training schools had left for overseas, Major Power said, but he declined to elaborate.

Robert Greenly Second Victim Hit and Runners

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 31 (ENS).—Robert Greenly, 35, of Percy township, victim of a hit-and-run driver one-quarter of a mile east of Warkworth on Saturday evening, died in Belleville Hospital late Wednesday afternoon. He was the second to die as the result of the accident which occurred while he was walking to his home from Warkworth late in the evening. His father, William Greenly, with whom he was walking along the country roadside, was found some five hours after the accident, for which three men are being held in Cobourg jail.

Robert Greenly suffered a broken shoulder and several fractured ribs, one of which was said to have punctured the lung, causing his death. After lying by the roadside for nearly an hour and walking nine-tenths of a mile still unconscious he was picked up by his two brothers, Lorne and David, at 1.30 on Sunday morning last, and after a preliminary examination by Dr. C. Armstrong of Warkworth he was removed to Belleville Hospital in the afternoon. The double tragedy marks the first of its kind on record in this county.

long been regarded as a helpful neighbor, one of those men who turned out readily to do his part in assisting farmers of his immediate area just as they helped him.

And so these rural people crowded into the sessions of the court wondering in continuing amazement and almost in doubt of the things they heard, whether this neighbor of a generation since childhood and school days was the ordinary citizen as they regarded him or the monster of the Crown's portrayal and if all the Crown's evidence was to be believed. Even Fred Thain's own confession as it was produced over his signature by the police, then all the more incredible to them was this man sitting with folded arms before them in the prisoner's box to them the central spot of the court room.

Also Knew Wellmans.

These Rawdon Township people had not only known Fred Thain, but also had they known with a great deal of affection the old couple whose lives were blasted by shot gun explosions in the house in which they had lived out their lives, remaining there after their children had left the old nest. Because of that community regard for the elderly victims, of whom Fred Thain was a next door neighbor, people from the same vicinity found it almost beyond normal understanding to associate Fred Thain with that role the Crown presented as the trigger-man of that "dreadful tragedy," as Mr. McCullough spoke of it.

C. L. Snyder, K.C., Crown Prosecutor, in reviewing the evidence before the jury, declared that this was the first of the twenty-three murder trials in which he was engaged as Prosecutor in which he had not shown photographs to the jury. "An old man and his wife horribly murdered," Mr. Snyder intimated as his reasons for withholding the pictures of the victims of this crime in Rawdon Township.

"Somebody committed murder," he continued, and, standing in front of the prisoner's box he pointed to Thain, and speaking to the jury, he asked, "Did this man commit the murder? I have never heard of a case of a man confessing a crime he didn't commit.

"A neighbor stole a neighbor's cattle feed. That neighbor was afraid he would be found out, and committed this crime to get rid of his accuser—he murdered."

Mr. Snyder said only two defence witnesses were called, two doctors who declared Thain was sane and mentally responsible for his acts. Without reviewing the evidence, Mr. Snyder said it pointed to the accused man. "Gentlemen, I ask you to do your duty."

Mr. Justice MacKay, reviewing the evidence in his charge to the jury, spoke of the "irresistible statement" of Dr. Elgar Frankish that two empty shells found in Arnold Welman's barn were fired by the gun found by police at Fred Thain's home, also the purchase of five shells by the accused on the day of the murder; the disappearance of chopped grain and the finding of some bags at Thain's similar to those once owned by Wellman, one of them stamped with his name. Dr. Frankish expressed the belief from his post-mortem examination that Wellman was killed by the firing of both barrels of a gun simultaneously and Thain told the witness Lingham Martin in the County Jail that "I gave him both barrels. I did a good job."

His Lordship referred to Thain's confession to Sergeant Harry Thompson and pointed to the care taken by police that it should be freely and voluntarily given by the accused.

The Crown says it was wilful murder. Have defence witnesses explained away this formidable array of evidence? Well, two witnesses were called by the defence for the purpose of showing that the accused was not of sound mind. At the risk of being criticized I am going to present that defence to you .... Two men, eminent in their profession as alienists said Thain showed no evidence of mental illness and was responsible for his actions."

His Lordship spoke for an hour and a half, and the jury retired at 1.30.

Mr. Justice MacKay said that "three verdicts could be brought in, guilty, not guilty and not guilty through insanity."

His Lordship pointed out "that neither the Crown nor the defence has produced any evidence showing the accused was insane at the time the murder was committed."

He also told the jury "that a verdict of manslaughter could not be entertained in this case."

Thain maintained his smile throughout the addresses. He looked steadily at the Bench while the charge was being delivered. When he entered the courtroom, he smiled and nodded at acquaintances in the crowded room. He was well-dressed and freshly shaven.

When Assistant Attorney-General C. L. Snyder indicate him as the alleged perpetrator of a ruthless, horrible crime, Thain smiled and turned toward a press-desk.

finding the going extremely hard and war correspondents for Rome newspapers sought excuses in the weather for their army's lack of progress. The correspondent of Il Messagero wrote that rains had transformed the battlefield into a vast swamp from which the mountain peaks emerge dark and spectral."

Italian troops were reported to have lost 800 prisoners to the Greeks and to be falling for Greek strategy which herds them into deep valleys where they became targets for marksmen on the hillsides.

Italian Ship Van.

Apparently seeking to spare themselves as much as possible, the Italians were reported using Albanian irregulars as the spearhead of their effort to break through the Greek defences. The Greek line gave slightly in accordance with a pre-arranged plan and then stiffened far in front of the Metaxas fortifications.

Mussolini's men were regarded as unfortunate in their choice of an invasion springboard. Operating from Albania they were handicapped by scarcity of highways and the ruggedness of the country.

Deprived by the nature of the country of the opportunity of making extensive use of mechanized equipment they were faced with the necessity of hand-to-hand fighting with the tough Greek mountain soldiers, something the Italian army as a whole appears not to relish.

The Greeks said they had an additional advantage in the islands with which the deeply-indented coast of their country is dotted. These islands, they said, made certain that ports would always be available for landing troops and war materials.

Elsewhere the war appeared slowed down. Bad weather handicapped air pilots, although the Royal Air Force flew through heavy snow to bomb selected objectives in Germany and some German craft appeared over Britain. The latter did comparatively minor damage.

With Italy bogged down in its African campaign and facing difficulties in the Italo-Greek war, some observers expected to see German troops employed in the Mediterranean theatre. Italian sources threw out hints to-day that a new country would join the Axis soon. It was suggested this might refer to Bulgarian cooperation against Greece.

However, it was considered doubtful if the Sofia government would be anxious to court a war with Turkey—an almost certain consequence of its involvment.

28 Feared Lost As Freighter St. Malo Sinks

OTTAWA, Oct. 31—(P).—Sixteen survivors of the former French freighter St. Malo, sunk by enemy action while flying the Canadian flag, have been landed in the United Kingdom.

Believed lost when the 5,770-ton ship went down are 28 other members of her mostly-Canadian crew, the Transport Department disclosed yesterday.

Names of the 16 men rescued were released at Montreal last night by R. B. Teakle, general manager of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine which was operating the freighter.

Officials here said next-of-kin of the missing men have been notified, but Mr. Teakle did not issue a list of those believed lost when he gave out the survivors' names.

However, a few hours later shipping officials at Halifax disclosed the names of 17 seamen—at least 12 of them Canadians—who signed on the St. Malo last month and were not listed as rescued by Mr. Teakle.

It was pointed out that some of the men who joined the freighter's crew September 17 before she started for Britain for the last time before her loss may not have sailed with the ship.

Twenty-one names were included in the Halifax list. Only four of them appeared in the survivors' list released at Montreal. Relatives of 3 others—one Newfoundland man and two Nova Scotians—are known to have been notified they are missing.

Natural Forts May Save Greeks Weeks

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 31.—(AP)—Greece pins her initial hopes of resisting Italian invasion from Albania on natural fortresses of her mountainous northwest augmented by the extensive system of "The Mextaxas Line."

The Metaxas Line named after Premier John Metaxas, runs the length of the Albanian-Greek frontier from the Ionian coast to Lake Ventrok—about 100 miles as the crow flies—and stretches on along the Yugoslav and Bulgarian frontiers to the Turkish border.

The original Metaxas Line was directed chiefly against Bulgaria.

But when Italy seized Albania in April, 1939, the Greek Government built new fortifications, at a reported cost of more than $6,000,000, to defend her northwest frontier against the new threat.

Details of the line are secret but it is believed to consist of strategically-placed concrete fortifications, earthworks, pillboxes and barbed wire tank traps—all designed to supplement the natural defences afforded by the rugged upland country.

Special attention is said to have been devoted to the old fortified town of Ioannina, which commands two of the four principal routes from Southern Albania and which already has emerged as a key Italian objective in the very opening of the invasion.

Bottle-Neck Passes

The mountains make northwestern Greece a natural walled fortress and apparently the Greek army's general plan is to force attackers into narrow mountainous bottlenecks.

Invaders pushing into Greece would find these four more or less favorable attacking routes through the mountains:

1. Around Lake Ventrok along the railway line leading to the strategic port of Salonika.
2. From Corizza, Albania, to Kastoria.
3. From Vojusav to Ioannina.
4. Along the coastline to a lower range of mountains to the west of Ioannina.

So, once again, the Greeks are defending their mountain passes, as did Leonidas at the Irmopylae, where 300 Spartans held the narrow defile against Xerxes' "innumerable" Persians.

Natural experts call the modern Greek army "happy and willing" but point out that modern warfare is a thing of machines and that holding mountain passes is no longer a matter of hand-to-hand encounters.

These experts say the Greek army badly lacks airplanes and other modern equipment. The air force is reported to have perhaps 150 serviceable planes and the Greek navy is weak.

Greece can muster about 600,000 soldiers, these observers report, but part of the army must watch other frontiers besides that with Albania.

The possibility that Bulgaria might attack has complicated the Greek defence system, since the dominating heights of the Greek-Bulgarian frontier are held by the Bulgars.

The Greek who knew about Trojan horses long before the blitzkreig theory developed, have no fears of fifth columnists. The minority groups in Greece, chiefly Turks and Albanians, are not large.

The minority problem was solved nearly two decades ago by a mass population transfer in which nearly 1,000,000 Greeks were repatriated from Asia Minor and Bulgaria in excange for Bulgarian and Turkish Nationals.

Small Greek Army Endeavoring To Stop Il Duce's Might

Made during recent Greek army manoeuvres, these pictures give an idea of the types of modern soldiers making up the small army of Greece which is battling the numerically-superior Italian invaders. Experts in mountain fighting, the Greek soldiers are reported to be successfully holding up the advance of the Italian forces from Albania. Reports that Germany was preparing to send a force through Bulgaria against Greece led to grave doubts as to how long the Greeks could hold out against the combined forces of Italy and Germany.

Greek Troopers Take Taxis To Front Lines

By J. WES. GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

SALONIKA, Greece, Oct. 31.—(CP)—I have been watching at first hand the Greek army moving up swiftly to meet Italy's attack.

All regular traffic was blocked when I crossed the Yugoslav border, but I managed to get on by railway handcar and freight, arriving in this ancient port in time to see one phase of Greece's determined preparations to hold the country from the invaders.

Since I arrived here there has been continual activity as troops are moved to the northwest to strengthen the defences there. All motor transport has been requisitioned. Even taxicabs are being used to carry soldiers to the front where, the Greeks say, the Italians are making no headway in their attemps to break the Metaxas Line.

An unofficial report here said 500 Italians were captured in fighting along the frontier mountain passes.

There have been no air or sea attacks on Salonika. The public is calm and orderly, despite the closeness of the war.

Everywhere in the streets, in the shops and cafes there seems to be unlimited resolution to keep the Italians checked. Enthusiasm for Britain is high.

The people of Salonika looked out to sea today for the possible approach of protecting British warships, and at the skies for a glimpse of Italian bombers.

The first Greeks wounded at the front were reported to have reached base hospitals here, but casualties so far are considered to be surprisingly few.

The Greeks are using artillery emplacements blasted out of the mountain precipices. The rocky surroundings protect the gun crew from aerial bombings.

Huns Ask Greece To Quit Fighting

SOFIA, BULGARIA, Oct. 31. —(BUP).—Germany was reported last night to be demanding that Greece, under threat of thousands of Nazi troops moving deeper into the Balkans, reach an immediate armistice with Italy and end the war on Greek soil.

Adolf Hitler's reported pressure on the Greeks, through Turkey and other neighbors, coincided with Balkan warnings that Italy and Germany are preparing a drive against the British Empire outposts in the Pacific and Near East.

The pro-German newspaper Curentul in Bucharest, in a Rome despatch, said the vast Axis drive would be aimed through Turkey at seizing the Iraq oil fields and limiting United States aid to Britain.

In Istanbul a high Bulgarian source was quoted as saying that five German divisions, numbering about 75,000 troops, were in Italian Albania ready to attack Greece if the Athens Government refused to submit to Premier Benito Mussolini's demands.

London reports said that German troops were moving down the Danube in barges from the Bratislava area of German's Slovakia protectorate where 240,000 Nazi troops are massed and that Hitler has concentrated about 1,000,000 troops in Southeastern Europe to aid Italy if necessary.

Persistent but unconfirmed reports circulated in Sofia to-night that an Italo-Greek armistice might be imminent, as result of Hitler's pressure upon the Greeks. Heavy fighting in Greece at this time does not fit into the Fuehrer's broader plans for Axis conquest, it was said.

If the Greeks can be persuaded to give in, it was reported, the Axis would insist that several vital Greek naval bases such as Salonika be turned over to Italy.

Large-scale Greek troop movements in Northwestern Greece, protecting the northern flank of Salonika, meanwhile caused alarm in Sofia.

Aid For Finns

Jersey Election Fraud Case Hot Subject

NEWARK, N.J., Oct. 31—(AP). —A United States Senate subcommittee's investigation of election fraud charges in Jersey city and other parts of New Jersey, was denounced and ridiculed by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City yesterday as a "10 cent, Picayune Political" inquiry intended to deprive President Roosevelt of the State's 16 electoral votes.

Recriminations flew between Hague and Senator Charles Tobey (Rep.-New Hampshire), consuming so much of the two-hour session that little time was left to the question of fraud. After the turbulent hearing, to which Hague was subpoenaed when he refused to appear voluntarily, the committee adjourned until after election.

Hague repeatedly asked Tobey about conditions in New Hampshire when the Senator quizzed him concerning his Democratic stronghold of Hudson County.

Asked what was the debt of Jersey City, Hague retorted:

"What's the debt of New Hampshire?" Then pointing to Tobey's son and secretary he said, "Look at Willie whispering in his ear."

Angered, Tobey jumped up and said the youth's name was not "Willie" but Charles, and that he wasn't whispering. He then pointed to Hague's nephew and secretary, Frank Hague Eggers, and said:

"How about that bird prompting you?"

This time Hague arose, shaking a finger at Tobey, and yelled:

"Don't call my nephew a bird. Don't act like a loafer." I want to say to you, Senator, you are very insulting. I didn't come here to be insulted. I resent your attitude. Senator (Guy) Gillette (Dem.-Iowa), chairman of the Campaign Expenditures committee, should be ashamed at putting you on this committee."

See 700 Million Income JumpFor Canada

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Official estimates place Canada's national income for the current fiscal year at not less than $4,500,000,000, an increase of $700,000,000 over 1939, G. W. Spinney of Montreal, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, told the Bond Club of Philadelphia in a talk Wednesday.

"While this is a lot of money for Canada, I am fully satisfied that it can be raised." He pointed out that of $700,000,000 borrowed by the government since the outbreak of war, only $200,000,000 had been taken by banks, with the remainder going to other hands.

The June crisis with the fall of France, said Mr. Spinney, "compelled a revision" of Canada's financial plans and "made it necessary to accelerate and extend them in every possible way." These circumstances were reflected in the last Dominion budget, which provided $900,000,000 for war purposes, an increase of $400,000,000 over earlier expectations.

A Question Mark In It

It does look as though there was a nigger in the woodpile in that attack which Italy is making upon Greece. It does not bear resemblance to war as it is carried on today. There's nothing of the blitzkrieg about it, and Italy has not been bringing her air force into action as might have been expected.

There are intelligent observers who see in the whole thing a move to try and shove Stalin out into the open so it will be known how he looks upon the Axis designs for operations in the Balkans and a move toward the Dardanelles.

So far Stalin has said nothing, but he has moved a great many troops into positions where they are not far removed from the German lines. But there has been nothing to show what he is going to do in case Turkey decides to fight and needs assistance to protect her position against the Axis powers.

That is the unanswered riddle of today, and that is why there is speculation mixed with suspicion regarding the bona fides of the present movement in the Balkans.

Dealing With Mr. Houde

Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal is in an internment camp, and he was put there for good and sufficient reason because he openly advised that people have nothing whatever to do with National Registration. By doing so he was plainly defying the Federal Government.

Within recent weeks he has announced several times that he was going to again be a candidate for the office of Chief Magistrate of Montreal. He would run for Mayor and he would conduct his campaign from behind the enclosure. If elected he would play his part in governing the metropolis of the Dominion by some form of remote control, and we would have the spectacle of a man in an internment camp because he had defied law placed in a position where he would be called upon in some way or other to administer it in our largest Canadian city.

The thing was ridiculous, and that is the view which the Federal Cabinet has taken of the situation. It has applied the remedy and it was done by amending the Defence of Canada regulations so that no internee shall be eligible for public office. It went farther and ruled that a person who is a member of an organization now declared illegal shall automatically become ineligible for office.

That is, a communist could not now run for office in Canada. Our previous rule is that such an individual could run, and some of them have been elected. Admittedly the ruling is drastic when viewed in the light of what we have done in this country in times of peace, but we consider it the only way to do business when a nation is at war and where anything and everything which we have and hold dear is at stake.

The Thirty Days' Training

Those who can see little advantage in thirty days of military training have stated their case fully. They admit the camps are well conducted, but they wind up always with the claim that in thirty days there can be at best but a smattering of military instruction imparted. And in that claim there is undoubtedly accuracy. In fact we have never found any authority who would argue that in such a limited period it would be possible to turn out a soldier.

But it is a start, and when one looks at the entire situation it does appear that there is wisdom in the method. Canada never has been what could possibly be termed a military nation. For years in times of peace it is well known there was effort enough required to keep existing regiments up to strength; it was necessary here and there to effect consolidations to keep numerical strength up to requirements.

During that period we were not manufacturing weapons of war. We were not piling up reserves against the day when we might be called upon to use them, and we were exactly in that position when the war broke.

It is at this point that we have to consider our position today. War today is not merely equipping a soldier and providing him with a good rifle. The war of today is mechanized to the last detail. It is fought with machines in the air; it is carried on by tanks; it is a matter of anti-aircraft guns and of other guns of a newer and more effective kind for offensive purposes.

We possessed virtually none of these when the war started; we have regiments training today not provided with the needed equipment. So the only thing left for us is to equip ourselves to a great extent, and that is what we are doing. Not only that but we are sending increasingly large amounts of munitions and equipment to Britain. We have in this country the largest air-training scheme which was ever deevloped and it will keep on expanding.

We are bringing into existence war plants of an enormous size and capacity and these plants are going to call for a large number of trained men to operate them, and they will have to operate at capacity because there is urgent need of the material they are going to produce.

When one looks at the whole picture we believe a reasonable conclusion is that the present system of starting with thirty days of military training has within it a good deal of wisdom. We must take into consideration the entire situation because we need not only trained men but the equipment which is needed in the warfare of today.

An Exodus To Woodstock

It is a strange story which comes out of Woodstock, telling that the head offices of twenty-seven corporations have been moved to that city from Toronto, and they are housed in one building.

They have not removed their factories or places of business to Woodstock, but just the head office. They could not well move anything else because in one case at least the company is engaged in the mining business.

Within quite recent times the assessment commissioner of Woodstock attended a gathering of the Municipal Association in Toronto, and the man kept his ears open. He found there was the possibility of collecting the municipal corporation income tax from such companies, and we suspect the reason for the exodus in the direction of Woodstock has been for the explicit purpose of avoiding this tax. Perhaps it has become rumored around that Woodstock has not been any too urgent in making such collections.

Woodstock City Council now has a committee making a study of the situation and action is likely to start when the report has been received. If Woodstock finds it can go ahead and collect the tax from these incoming head offices then it will be nice, easy going. Not even much foot work in it as the report states twenty-seven of them are housed under one roof.

It looks like a repeat case of the manner in which the personal municipal income tax was overlooked in certain communities in the years when it was considered as a source of revenue, and before it was taken over by the province. There were communities—plenty of them—which did not collect it because they considered it was a good drawing card—"Come, live with us and forget the income tax." If Woodstock now moves to do the assessing and collecting, will the twenty-seven new-comers remain?

Pedestrians Have Faults

Most of the criticism gets levelled at the people who drive cars, but there is some past due for those who walk. Crown Attorney Newton of London used a phrase which seems apt when he referred to the "popper outers" who persist in coming out on the road from between parked cars on business streets. They appear to take it for granted that car drivers would be looking out for them.

If one cares to spend the time to watch a street intersection where traffic lights are in operation it will be found that mighty few pedestrians pay attention to the lights. They look up and down to size up the coming traffic and figure out their chances of getting across. They break into a little trot at times when they see a car coming. They could quite well afford to spend the 35 seconds needed at the most for the light to turn green for their safe crossing.

There are pedestrians who positively glare at car drivers who go ahead on a green light when they desire to walk the other way smack against a red light. But how under the sun is a community going to train its pedestrians?

It Was a Wild Night

We watched for the paper from home this week, and there it was—a notice saying that special police had been engaged for Hallowe'en and warning that disorderly conduct would be promptly and effectively dealt with. More years ago than we care to think about at times we stood in front of the case in that village printing office and set up that same notice word for word.

But it never scared any person. When the young life of the village swept out on the last night of October it had already forgotten the warning. A whiff of night air seemed to do something to those boys and it sent them in many directions and on various errands. Every last one of them knew who the special policemen were who had been sworn in for the occasion. They knew well enough there was no speed in their feet and no distance in their legs.

Strange things used to happen on that night. Indeed awful things. In the village things had not gone modern; by that we mean that all the conveniences of a present-day home were not contained under the one roof. There were apt to be other lesser structures out in the back yard. There might be a chicken coop, a shed or something else. And generally it was this "something else" which attracted the forces bent on destruction. That little building which in normal times stood firm and in a vertical position changed its structural bearing during the night. The dim dawn of next morning revealed it in a horizontal and reclining attitude, in which position its utilitarian facilities were sadly interrupted. It remained for the elders of the tribe and the strong men from the tents to go forth and restore next day and immediately that little building so that it once more stood fairly upright as though to face the world unafraid.

Where were the special constables? Possibly their intentions were good and their zeal might have been abundant, but when came that peculiar period of destructive effort on the night when October gave way to November their numbers were insufficient and their powers of scenting danger afar off were insufficient.

Perhaps the lads of that village are better today; it may be they are content to duck for apples and tap upon doors and shout for contributions, and in them there may be no mischief and no energy which seeks outlet in slight damage. Wrong, vicious and evil as the feeling may be, we find it difficult now and then to suppress the urge to turn back the years and go once again and whiff the mischievous night air of Hallowe'en in the village.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Man in Windsor was arrested because he was taking down the numbers of railway cars containing war equipment. He was sent to jail for 21 days. But after that is he going to be turned loose?

It is reported that Western Durum wheat of 1940 is specially good for the making of macaroni. As we understand it they are now growing it with the holes in it.

One attache to the U.S. office in Vichy was held under arrest for two hours because he spoke English. Possibly it is hard to learn the official language there, which is French with a strong German accent.

During the last six weeks there has been $23,000,00 of gold bullion shipped from Russia to United States, so there is apparently one dictator who considers it safe to keep on doing business with a democracy.

One man who has been in prison and jail many times, has been locked up again at Auburn, N.Y. He is always easy to identify because there is tattooed on his arm the words: "Death Before Dishonor."

Crow Indians look for a mild winter because field mice are still around and muskrats are swimming in open water. We wonder if any of the wise men ever observed the wrinkles on a pine when forecasting winter weather.

SPECKLED HEN

¶ My speckled hen won't lay at all, she started moulting in the fall, and she just moped around; nor has she struck her pace since then, she's just a plain dejected hen, a worse one can't be found.

¶ And folk who know their chickens well, they have a heap of things to tell, about what I should do; they tell me that my system's wrong, and has been that way right along, I've muddled things all through.

¶ My speckled hen's too fat they say, a bird like that will never lay, I'm feeding too much corn; I should shut down and let her scratch, and find for her some handy patch, and put her there each morn.

¶ Her comb had faded that I know, the color just seemed all to go, new feathers won't come in; and when I cut her diet down, she gazed upon me with a frown, and started looking thin.

¶ When eggs are far too cheap I know, it beats the band the way she'll go, for then she'll up and lay; my speckled hen made records then, I boasted to the chicken men, got most three eggs a day.

¶ But now with prices running good, she's not behaving like she should, she's fading on her feet; I am discouraged in a way, nor do I hesitate to say — she looks too poor to eat.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

HALLOWE'EN was originally called All-Hallow Eve, for it is the day before All-Hallow Day, or the Feast of All Saints. The legend that it is a day particularly given over to the carousing of evil spirits is much older than this supposed Christian origin, however, for by the old Celtic calendar October 31 was the last day in the year, and a day of license and magical happenings. The Feast of All Saints was instituted by Pope Boniface IV in the seventh century; the Celtic festival of demons antedates it by several hundred years. Many customs, such as that of bobbing for apples, are older than Christianity, and a child born on this day is thought to have the doubtful gift of second sight.

C & B

Hallowe'en is an excellent time for casting spells and working magic generally; it is no part of the duty of this column to advise its readers as to how they may best destroy their enemies or change them into animal shapes, but there are several Hallowe'en spells which are innocent and even beneficial in their effect. For instance every girl wants to know whom she will marry; here is an old Hallowe'en spell which tells how she may find this out. It is called The Witches' Chain and is copied direct from a seventeenth century book of magic in the possession of the writer: "Let three young women join in making a long chain, a yard long, of Juniper & Mistletoe berries, and at the end of every link put an oak Acorn. Exactly before midnight let them assemble in a room by themselves where no one can disturb them; leave a window open, and take the key out of the key-hole and hang it over the chimney-piece; have a good fire, and place in the midst of it a long thinnish log of wood, well sprinkled with oil, salt, and fresh mould, then wrap the chain round it, each maiden having an equal share in the business; then sit down, and on your left knee let each fair one have a prayer book opened at the matrimonial service. Just as the last acorn is burnt, the future husband will cross the room; each will see her own proper spouse, but he will be invisible to the other virgins. Those that are not to wed will see a coffin, or some horrid form, cross the room; go to bed and you will have remarkable dreams. This must be done between eleven of the clock and midnight."

Here is another spell from the same old book; it is a love-charm: "Take three hairs from your head, roll them up in a small compact form, and anoint them with three drops of blood from the left hand fourth finger, choosing this because anatomists say a vein goes from that finger to the heart; do this on All-Hallows Eve and wear it in your bosom (taking care that none knows the secret) for nine days and nights; then enclose the hair in a secret cavity of a ring or a brooch, and present it to your lover. While it is in his possession it will have the effect of preserving his love, and leading his mind to dwell on you. Never reveal to him the nature of the present you made him, or it may have the effect of turning Love to Hate."

IT IS generally assumed that belief in witch craft has died out, and that we are not so credulous as our forbears. Every now and again, however, there appears in the papers some evidence of the persistence of this belief. For instance, in 1864, at the Chelmsford Assizes Emma Smith and Samuel Stammers were convicted of having thrown a ninety years old deaf mute into a pond; Smith said he had bewitched her. It was commonly believed that a witch would float if thrown into water. The deaf mute floated, but subsequently died of exposure. In the Irish Times of June 14, 1911 is the account of the trial of a woman who killed a supposed witch, whom she said had driven her mad by tormenting her with an enchanted rat. In July, 1929, a taxi-driver named Eugene Burgess, in Kalamazoo, Michigan, murdered seventy-five years old Etta Fairchild, whom he said had bewitched his wife and daughter; the old woman had often boasted of her power to kill by enchantment. At the trial Mrs. Burgess said: "I stagger lots of times and have pains and aches and trouble in breathing. It was either her life or ours." In 1934 a man in Dorset, England, died of witchcraft although there seemed to be nothing the matter with him, and in 1935 a man in Taunton committed suicide because he had been "overlooked" by a witch.

Not only does belief in witchcraft in this crude form occasionally manifest itself, but from time to time, in cities such as New York, London and Paris, the police have to deal with groups of strange people who meet for the Black Mass; this is a ceremony which parodies the Christian Mass, substituting the worship of Satan for the worship of God. In its performance the Lord's Prayer is recited backward, black candles are burned, and there is usually a good deal of obscene symbolism employed. It would hardly merit attention from the police if the Black Mass were not so frequently connected with the narcotic and white-slave traffic, but it has often been used to cloak both of these nefarious trades.

There are many people in the world today who are firm believers in the existence of witchcraft and who attribute many of our modern ills to it. Chief among these is Mr. Aleister Crowley, who probably knows more about magic and its history than any man living. Another expert on this subject is the Rev. Montague Summers, who has written voluminously about it. Unfortunately his reputation as a scholar has suffered somewhat in competition with his fertile imagination and his statements must be accepted with many reservations. His identification of the Communist International with the Black International of Satan is interesting; they are certainly alike in that a person who has once joined one or the other finds it hard to get out again. Any reader who happens to see a witch tonight might ask her what Russia is going to do next. If she answers it may settle the question.

WHAT A MEMORY!

"Oh, Robert, promise me you'll never forget this glorious evening."
"I swear, dear. I'll make a note of it right away."
—Humorist.

• Home Lessons: An Anachronism

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—I am surprised to find that many schools still follow the antiquated custom of prescribing home lessons for their pupils, a custom which is condemned by the best authorities as unscientific and contrary to modern ideas of genuine education. Not least of the offenders in this matter is the Collegiate itself. It is preposterous that such a great school should do anything to perpetuate this out-moded and reactionary custom.

The teacher's job is never an easy one but he should never forget that his business is to teach. What happens, all too often, under the present system, is that the teacher "explores" a subject and sends the pupil home to complete the task. Personally, I think it is wrong, even iniquitous, to prescribe fresh work for home study. The child-mind can only take in so much, and the teacher has ample time during school hours to instil truth to the measure of the child's capacity, and to "draw out" what God has put within.

The very word education means to "lead out," to develop what is innate in the child, not to cram the mind with facts and dates which are seldom digested. To educate is to teach the pupil to think, to reason, to make wise choices and so be fitted for the business of living. Home-lessons are often a way of escape for the teacher, but it is a mean one. He is paid to teach not to prescribe lessons or to degrade the pupil who fails to overtake the work that the teacher has left undone. And if the teacher protests that home-lessons are necessary because there is so much ground to cover, the answer is, "cover less ground, and do it thoroughly, educationally," not as a matter of cramming which is not education. Quality not quantity should be the criterion in the school.

Lest I be misunderstood let me say that I believe in home-work, of a kind: memory-work, for example, and revision. Also it is good to encourage the habit of home-reading and to supervise the same. By all means let the scholar commit to memory great poems and passages from great literature, including the Bible. These become life-long treasures, and should be stored in memory not as a task, but as recreation.

I have special sympathy for young people from the country. Often they lack home comforts and convenience, and must spend long hours on wintry nights wrestling with problems till their brains are in a whirl and health itself endangered. I protest against the spoliation of young life! I am sure I speak for many parents, and friends of children in writing as I do. Youth is not only the time to learn. It is the time to be care-free and happy. The child must not be robbed of his birthright. Piled-up home lessons (such as I have seen) are a real menace to the well-being of many a timid child.

The present system of education is destined to pass. A better system will be evolved in which young people will be trained, morally and intellectually, for the business of life as a whole. I gladly acknowledge the good features of modern school life but it is plain to many, that big changes are on the way. Home-lessons have been "going" for many years. It is high time we said "gone" to this antiquated custom.

• Ontario and Its Violent Crimes

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—At least twenty-five cases involving charges of murder, attempted murder, manslaughter, (none of these due to highway fatalities), and assault killings have been or are before the courts of Ontario this fall.

Liquor, love and property disputes figure as chief causes, but liquor far outruns all other causes. It is definitely present in at least fourteen of these cases. In how many others it was a factor is not clear. Besides these twenty-five killings there were cases of stabbing, wounding causing bodily harm and indecent assaults, in the great majority of which liquor was a factor.

Four of the murder cases involve Indians which indicates the looseness with which the Ontario liquor law which prohibits sale of liquor to Indians, is enforced.

A number of the brawls and killings have occurred in connection with beverage rooms and other legalized drinking places. Evidently, the regulation that an intoxicated person is not to be served with liquor is for the trade 'a counsel of perfection,' the attainment of which is out of the question.

Ontario has probably never had such a holocaust of violent crime as that experienced in the present year. At the end of August when somewhere about a dozen murder cases appeared on the docket for the fall assizes, an article in the Toronto press stated, "Never in recent history have there been eleven murder trials docketed."

So great is the pressure on the courts that the Attorney-General of the province has sent out a special message to the officials to expedite trials in order to impede as little as possible war work and other necessary functions. That itself is sufficient to indicate the unusual and serious extensions of crime.

Social conditions invariably involve a variety of casual factors. As a rule no one cause completely accounts for the facts. No person, however, who is closely associated with the existing facts and has given them careful study can come to any other conclusion than that our present liquor customs are a prime factor in the alarming release of criminal instincts. To the person aware of the action of alcohol this is recognized as the natural and inevitable result of extensive use of liquor. Nor can it be gainsaid for a moment that the liquor policy advocated and adopted by our two major political parties has directly and enormously stimulated this recession to the life of the jungle. Jungle is scarcely the word. No animals could fall so low.

DON'T SHOOT FIRST

THE Air Ministry states:— During air battles over this country our fighter pilots often have to land by parachute after bailing out of a damaged aircraft. This is happening almost every day.

While the necessity for public vigilance continues, it is emphasized that force should not be used unless parachutists adopt a threatening attitude or attempt hostile acts. The parachutist may be a British fighter pilot, or one of our Polish, Czech, French, Belgian, or Dutch Allies who cannot speak English. The pilot, moreover, may be wounded, injured by a bad landing, or exhausted, and unable to answer questions quickly or clearly.

The greatest care and discretion should be shown before assuming that a parachutist is an enemy. If he is identified as an enemy or if his identity cannot be established at once—e.g. by production of his R.A.F. identity card—he should be made prisoner and handed over to the police or military authorities.—London Times.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And the angel of the Lord came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; because the journey is too great for thee. And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that meat forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God. And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the Lord came to him, and he said unto him, What doest thou here, Elijah? And he said, I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.—I Kings, 18.

A traveller was walking along a country road when he came across an old man. Addressing him, he asked how long it would take him to get to the next village. But the man went on with his work, neither speaking nor looking up. The traveller went on his way.

He had not gone far when he heard a call: "Hey, mister! Come back!"

The traveller returned, when the old man said: "It'll take you twenty minutes."

"Why did you not tell me that when I asked you?" said the traveller.

"How did I know how fast you was going to walk?" retorted the old man.

Doctor Admits Selling Drugs To Police

WHITBY, Oct. 31—(Special).—Dr. H. C. Pearson, former Collingwood physician and suspended Dunbarton coroner, Tuesday pleaded guilty on three charges of illegally selling diacetyl-morphine to Corp. G. R. Johnston of the Narcotics Division, R.C.M.P.

Although remanded one week for sentence, Dr Pearson was allowed a renewal of $3,00 bail after Crown Prosecutor Trevors Sweetman stated he would accept the onus for such action.

Arrested on October 7, Dr. Pearson had been remanded for trial on three occasions. In a scarcely audible voice he pleaded guilty to the three counts. He made no reference to his actions while giving character evidence on his own behalf, although he admitted, in answer to a question from the prosecution, that a phial of diacetyl-morphine sold to Corporal Johnson for $60 had cost him between $1.50 and $2.

Only Witness Called

The R.C.M.P. officer, only witness called by the prosecution, gave detailed accounts of his three transactions with Dr. Pearson on the nights of September 9 and 10, and October 7.

"At 9:45 on the night of September 9 I visited Dr. Pearson at Dunbarton. I went down a flight of stars at the back of his house into his office. He asked: 'How much do you want?' I said two grams," related Corporal Johnson. Dr. Pearson had then taken him into the dispensary, where he scraped the labels off two small bottles containing the drug, Corporal Johnson testified.

"He asked me: 'How much do you usually pay?' and I told him, 'Seventeen dollars for twelve grains'," the officer stated. On his second visit he had paid $12 for a quantity of the drug and had introduced Dr. Pearson to Corporal Payzant of the R.C.M.P., who waited outside in a car, Corporal Johnson said. Sixty dollars was the price paid for two grams of the drug on October 7, it was revealed.

"Other R.C.M.P. men watched me mark the bills beforehand. I asked Dr. Pearson why he scraped off the labels from the bottles and he said: 'If you get caught, they can trace where you got it.' He also said, "The narcotics squad is pretty busy these days'." Johnson testified.

U.S. Code Office Swept By Fire

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(AP).—The wing of the United States war department building which police said housed a message centre from which the signal corps sends coded messages was swept by fire Wednesday.

Massed fire equipment of the District of Columbia brought the flames under control after a fight of more than an hour. The cause of the fire and exact portions of the damage were not established immediately.

A cordon of 15 regular army sentries was posted about the building as soon as possible and General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, himself appeared on the scene, arriving in the darkness from his home in nearby Fort Myer.

All war department officials available refused to comment on the fire, but it appeared to have started on the top of the three-storey wing. Construction was underway there on a fourth floor to provide more room for the expanded war department.

Police said that although coded messages were sent from that section of the building, no secret codes were kept there.

However, one building guard declared: "It is the most important wing of the war department."

The building was constructed during first Great War days to be used temporarily, but had never been abandoned and with the expansion of defence activities recently it was decided to enlarge it.

Award Parents $420 Cash For Bitten Child

WELLAND, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP)—Mr. Justice H. T. Kelly Tuesday found that sufficient evidence had been produced to show that "Togo" Chinese Chow dog, belonging to the household of J. J. Fleming of Niagara Falls "had a propensity for attacking humans and children and was unsafe to be at large in the presence of children." His Worship awarded Edward Robertson and his daughter Norma $420. The plaintiff sought $15,000.

The suit was brought by Robertson for injuries inflicted on Norma Robertson, then four years old on May 5, 1939, when the dog, according to the witnesses "leaped on the child and chewed at her face." The injuries consisted of a puncture wound above the right eye and a torn upper lip, which left scars.

Mr. Justice Kelly accompanied counsel to Niagara Falls last night to see the girl who was unable to be present because of illness. Today in his judgment, he declared the scars were "magnified beyond reason."

"Togo" was the last "witness" brought in by the defence "as evidence the dog was not unfriendly and had no vicious propensities." "Togo" followed Mr. Fleming into the courtroom and seeing Mrs. Fleming and her two sons, pattered over to them placing his paws on Mrs. Fleming's lap, then followed Mr. Fleming to the court enclosure.

An order for execution of the dog under provisions of the Vicious Dogs' Act was given by a Niagara Falls court in the summer of 1939. Fleming appealed the order but hearing of the appeal was put off until the damage action had been settled.

Fairview Ladies Sponsor Supper

FAIRVIEW, Oct. 31 — (ENS). — The Women's Association of Fairview United Church sponsored a very delightful chicken supper on Monday night in the vestry of the church. Decorations were carried out in Hallowe'en colors and a large crowd enjoyed to the full the bountiful hot supper. The Sunday School superintendent, Mrs. Austin Poast, gave a splendid illustrated address to the Sunday School on Temperance, showing the difference between a drinker and a thinker, at the regular service on Sunday afternoon.

Hallowe'en Party Staged By A.Y.P.A.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 31. — (ENS). — With orange and black streamers as decorations and large yellow pumpkins forming the principal source of light, members of St. John's Young People's Union staged a gala Hallowe'en party in place of their regular meeting on Monday. Met at the door and escorted to their seats by ghosts the proverbial atmosphere was well maintained and later the whole assembly was led in a procession by a half-dozen white-sheeted ghosts. During the evening games and contests were played and later prizes were presented for the best costume to Leila Mitchell who was garbed as a Chinese laundryman; and for the funniest costume to C. Howie, who came as a negro. The contest prize winners were Pat Cryderman and Mrs. Ted Cryderman.

The refreshment committee comprised Harold Outingdyke, Mrs. H. Outingdyke, Miss Jean Tubbs, Clara Lucy, Mrs. Ruth Holmes, Arnold Bates, Cecil Stephens, and Leonard Smith.

Bomb Sufferers Appreciate Aid

LONDON, Oct. 31—(CP).—"Very generous assistance" of the Canadian Red Cross in helping relieve distress amongst London's bomb sufferers is acknowledged by the general secretary of the Charity Organization Society in a letter to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner.

Gifts from the Dominion body, the letter said, "included many thousands of blankets, several tons of food and at least a quarter of a million new garments for women and children."

Distributed to emergency rest centres established by voluntary agencies at key points in London, the supplies made it possible to keep these centres going for 48 hours until they could be taken over by the local authority.

The letter added that the generosity of the Canadian Red Cross enabled the C.O.S. together with social workers "to tide over thousands of London's homeless until the official machine began to work effectively."

It expressed hope the high commissioner would convey to Canadians the thanks of bomb sufferers in the metropolis "for the very timely aid which your Dominion has rendered."

Bombed Hospitals Meet Emergencies

LONDON, Oct. 31—(CP).—London's hospitals carry on though more than a score of them have been damaged by bombs.

An emergency scheme, known as the "sector system," put in operation as soon as the Luftwaffe launched its heavy attacks on the Empire's capital has enabled the hospitals to handle all the raid casualties and also to continue treatment of other patients.

The sector system established a "pool" of thousands of beds in scores of institutions within a radius of 40 or 50 miles from the heart of London. In addition there are vast reserves of beds in areas further away from the metropolis.

Many of the capital's hospitals act party as clearing centres. Few of them in inner London use upper floors.

HARVEY PULFORD ONE OF CANADA'S ALL-TIME GREATS PASSES

Defence Star Of Famous Silver Seven

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—(CP).— Harvey Pulford, native of Toronto, who came to Ottawa as a small boy and became one of Canada's all-time athletic greats, died to-day. He was 65.

Death came to the one-time defence star of Ottawa's famous Silver Seven hockey team and winner of championships in virtually every field of sport, as a result of a weakened heart condition. He suffered from heart trouble for some years past.

He was termed the greatest all-round athlete ever produced in the Ottawa Valley.

Pulford started at the age of 13 in the championship field when he became all-round champion of the Ottawa Model school. He stopped only when he was nearly 50 and had won the Ottawa city squash championships in 1923-24.

Big In Stature.

A giant in stature, he was a giant at all sports he attempted. Added to that he was every man's friend, a quiet spoken, modest and kindly person.

Pulford was an active business man in the capital, for many years representing an importing firm and later worked in the insurance field.

Pulford's fame as an oarsman rivalled his hockey play. Rowing was his favorite sport and his greatest thrill came at the English Henley in 1911 when he stroked the Ottawa Rowing Club to victory over the Thames and Belgian crews.

Pulford is survived by his second wife and one son, Harvey, Jr., of Quebec City.

His Career.

Pulford's sports career, in brief, was:

All-round champion, Ottawa Model School—1888.

Hockey: Ottawa Hockey Club, 1892-1909. Dated Canada's greatest defence player on the famous old Silver Seven, world champions and Stanley Cup holders, 1902, 1904. 1905.

Football: Ottawa Rough Riders, 1893-1909. Champions of Canada, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1902.

Lacrosse: Ottawas, 1892-1896; Capitals, 1896-1900, champions of Canada from 1897-1900.

Paddling: With Britannia Boating Club, Eastern Canada double and single blade champion, 1898; Eastern Canada war canoe championship, 1900.

Rowing: Ottawa Rowing Club, stroke, 1905 to 1912; Canadian junior fours championship, 1905; Canadian intermediate fours championship, 1906; middle States senior fours championship at Washington, 1906; Canadian Henley, senior fours championship, 1909; Canadian Henley, Henley memorial eight-oar championship, 1910; United States national eight-oar championship, 1910; English Henley, 1911, stroke Ottawa eight to victories over Thames, London, and Belgian Rowing Clubs in preliminary heats of Grand Challenge Cup; beaten in the semi-finals by Magdalen College, Oxford, in record time.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 31.—Newspapers arriving from Australia tell of a sensational performance turned in at the famous Flemington race course last month, Sept. 7, to keep the records straight, in which a horse named Aurie's Star, a 7-year-old gelding, picked up 142 pounds and ran six furlongs over a turf course in 1:08¼. The horse is owned by one G. W. Badman and was ridden by Jockey N. Creighton.

While the three-quarters course at Flemington is a straightaway, it was nevertheless a brilliant achievement, considering the time and the impost of 142, which was listed on the official program as "10 stone 2." A stone is 14 pounds.

Previous to this record-breaking flight, Aurie's Star, three years ago, set a five-and-one-half furlong record of 1:04½ at Caulfield, Victoria, a mark that still stands.

While the new six-furlong mark is not a world's record, it does compare favorably with Artful's American record over a straight course, the daughter of Hamburg and Martha II having run the three-quarters at the old Morris Park track in 1:08, which mark has endured since 1904. Artful on that occasion packed 126 pounds, which, for a 2-year-old filly, was little short of phenomenal.

In England the fastest time on record was that made by an unnamed gelding by Broken Tendril, that, in 1929, ran six furlongs over the Brighton straightaway in 1:06 1-5, while carrying 123 pounds—19 pounds less than Aurie's Star carried in his Flemington performance.

Arrest Boomerangs

TORONTO, Oct. 31 — (CP). — A Greek restaurant manager and his chef, a compatriot, were marched at gun point from their North Toronto cafe eary today and were being covered by a man who said he thought they were Germans when police arrived. Police arrested the zealot, John R. Croft of Toronto, and said he had been drinking. They also said Croft, who told the police he was a member of the Legion of Frontiersmen, had a permit to have a gun in his possession. The cafe manager was Nick Barootes and the chef was Samuel Pappas.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

An item in the "How Time Flies" column today should make older sporting enthusiasts feel still more ancient. It tells of Albert Smoke, the Chemong Indian runner capturing The Examiner's road race in 1910. It is a bit difficult to convince one's self that it was just thirty years ago today that the smooth-running Indian ambled down George street with his easy bounding gait to set a new record for the Lakefield to Peterborough race. Smoke who covered the distance, ten miles, in the remarkably fast time of 55 mins. 15 2-5 seconds, won as he pleased that day. He was half a mile ahead of his nearest rival and the form that he showed won him a chance to race at Hamilton, Detroit, Toronto and other cities and finally earned him a place on the Canadian Olympic team at Antwerp in 1920. Smoke got mixed up with a Belgian cyclist a few days before the Olympic Marathon and his injuries kept him out of the big race, a disappointing finale to a fine career as a runner.

* * * * * *

There is a good story in connection with Smoke and The Examiner race that can be told now. After he had won the contest a couple of times it was announced that he would not be a contender the next year. It happened that a local runner had persistently ran in the Lakefield-Peterborough classic for a number of years and his competition had helped to make the affair a race. Without Smoke out of the running it was a cinch that this competitor would win so The Examiner management decided to reward him for his determination and gameness by providing an especially valuable watch as a first prize. That was all right until the night before the race when Smoke put in his entry to upset the applecart. There was no ground for refusing it so the Indian went out the next day, won the race in easy fashion and trotted home with the costly watch.

* * * * * *

Smoke was not the only Olympic contender that was developed by The Examiner road race. The other was also an Indian, Fred Simpson, now living in Alderville, although he was a resident of Hiawatha when he entered The Examiner race and attracted attention to himself as a long distance runner of great promise. Eventually Simpson was selected as a marathoner with the Canadian Olympic team that went to London, England, in 1908, the year that Tom Longboat collapsed and Dorando, the Italian runner who finished in first place was disqualified for receiving outside assistance. Simpson was sixth in the London marathon, the first of the Canadian runners to finish. Later he turned professional and ran long distance races against Dorando, Alfie Shrubb and other famous runners at New York and other centres. He was picked up by Tom Eck, the famous trainer, who predicted great things for him as a runner. However Simpson's health broke down and he had to give up the running game.

It's An Idea Anyway

Comes to bat Bunny Morganson of the Telegram with the last smile of a ball season that contained all too few openings for merriment so far as Peterborough was concerned. Says he. We quote: "Peterborough and Oshawa should join up with an Inter-City League of their own. There are enough ball players of the native type in both centres for two teams in each city." Mister Morganson's intelligence staff has let him down. The simple truth is that there are not enough players in Peterborough for one club. We had them all out during the season just closed except Eddie Starr and at that the Petes were a nine-man club in four or five games. If there is to be senior baseball next season the goddess of baseball luck will have to ship us a few appleknockers before one club could be fielded. Two senior outfits couldn't materialize here even in a dream and Oshawa would have a lot of fun trying to build up a second team with the material at hand.

* * * * * *

While on the baseball subject, the Inter-City League management has established a precedent in awarding "Moose" Matthews of Oshawa the Highfield trophy, emblematic of the league batting championship, although the Oshawa outfielder finished with an average of .413 as against .429 for Art Upper of the Riverdale Grads. The official explanation is that Matthews participated in more complete games than Upper. The averages show that Matthews took part in 18 games and Upper in 15, although he did not play the full string in some of those contests. "Matty" is one of our favorite ball players, except when he ambles out to the plate in a close game against the Petes with a couple of runners on the sacks. We are glad to see the veteran honored. And yet to pass over Upper who figured in only three fewer games may pave the way for lot of argument in other seasons. The league should adopt a rule that a player to be eligible for the batting championship must have been at bat a certain number of times. That would get away from any heart burning over the award.

Calladine Makes His Debut

Bill Calladine had his professional debut last night when he played for Herb Gardiner's Philadelphia Ramblers against Eddie Shore's Springfield Indians in the American League opener. The Peterborough boy did not amass any scoring points but in view of the fact that the Ramblers were whitewashed by Springfield to the tune of 4 to 0 that is not surprising. The American League got away to a flying start last night with six clubs engaged. The highly touted Cleveland club, regarded as one of the strongest gathered together for a minor loop scored eight goals to tuck the Hershey Bears away, the latter scoring four times. In the other game Providence Reds scored a 2-1 win over the New Haven Eagles, when Max Bentley, a Black Hawk rookie playing his first pro game, scored the winning counter with only twelve seconds left to go.

* * * * * *

There was plenty of scoring at St. Catharines Wednesday night when Toronto Maple Leafs hooked up with three senior O.H.A. squads playing a period against each and defeating the amateurs 12 to 0. The best showing was made by the St. Catharines squad who played the middle period and held the National Leaguers to a scoreless tie. Leafs scored three goals in the first session against Niagara Falls and really went to town in the last twenty minutes when they ran in nine goals in a row against Port Colborne. The McCreedy-Kowcinak-Bellinger line from Kirkland Lake figured in two Leaf goals and we still hold to the opinion that the flashing trio could easily make good as a line in the N.H.L. Right now they are better than half a dozen combinations that are functioning under the big top.

* * * * * *

If some one were to shout this list of names at you we imagine you would have some difficulty in giving the name of the club involved: Adams, Demers, Lache, Reardon, Singbush, Benoit, Quilty, Graboski. Those are all Montreal Canadiens and the fact that you don't recall them as N.H.L. performers shows that Dick Irvin is really putting the accent on youth this season. It is going to take the fans a few weeks to get acquainted with all the new comers in the N.H.L. circuit this season.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The Petes led the Inter-City loop in base stealing with 32 thefts for the season. Considering the fact that the boys didn't get on as often as some of the others that's moving along the basepaths...."That loud crash down Peterborough way," writes Bunny Morganson, "was Secretary Jim Dorris of the Peterborough club fainting away when he received his bond from Inter-City League headquarters"....Joe Louis' draft number is 2,611. Many folk will be surprised to learn he can count that high....Joe Medwick has signed his 1941 contract with Brooklyn already. He must feel he's slipping....The Galt senior hockey team is reverting to intermediate A hockey this season. The Petes may see those fellows later on....It's to be hoped some of those Cleveland Indians are drafted. They would not be able to complain that the top sergeant was too temperamental.

Lou Brouillard Once Boxer Now A Grappler

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Lou Brouillard, a little flabbier here and there, has launched a comeback—not in the boxing ring he knew so well, but as a grunt-and-groan artist.

The 29-year-old French-Canadian who was born at St. Eugene, Que., and now lives at Worcester, Mass., ended his colorful boxing career about two years ago after more than 10 years in the ring.

He was a brilliant fighter, and in his rise to the top captured the welterweight and middleweight titles. He won the welterweight crown in 1931 by whipping Jack Thompson in a 15-round bout at Boston. Then he tackled battling Joe Gans and thep air fought a gruelling 10-round draw at Montreal.

Early in 1932 he lost the title when Jackie Fields beat him in a 10-rounder in Chicago. The same year he met and defeated Jimmy McLarnin of Vancouver. McLarnin later became ruler of the welterweights.

Brouillard finally graduated to the middleweight and won the title when he knocked out Ben Jeby in the seventh round at the Polo Grounds in New York. He held the title about three months, and then was trounced by Vince Dundee in the fall of 1933.

During 1935, 1936 and 1937 he fought in Paris, where he lost three bouts to Marcel Thil, the last two on fouls.

The last Thil-Brouillard tilt caused a stir in boxing circles. Thil was declared the winner in the sixth round, amid the boos from 12,000 fans.

The International Boxing Union later suspended Brouillard for a year over the foul and disqualified his manager, Johnny Buckley, for life. The National Boxing Association in the United States, however, refused to recognize the suspension.

Brouillard so far hasn't gained a reputation as a grappler. He had his first match the other night, throwing Gus Johnson of Minneapolis before a Worcester crowd.

To Aid British If He Wins Race

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 31.—Albert Robertson, the boy who will ride Can't Wait in the Pimlico Special on Friday, is a generous Scotsman. If he wins this Special he will donate half of his own bonus to the British War Relief Fund.

Alfred was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, 30 years ago, and came to America as a youngster and was raised in Toronto, Canada. Despite the fact he has not seen Scotland for many years, this rider of numerous great thoroughbreds on the American turf still has many relatives there. He is certain that some of his uncles and cousins are now participating in the great defense of the British Isles.

When Robertson heard that the Maryland Jockey Club will donate the revenue from the pari-mutuel wagering to the British War Relief, he announced his own intention of contributing 50 per cent of whatever he makes should Can't Wait win.

It is the custom for the jockey of an important stake winner to receive 10 per cent of the money won. In the case of the Pimlico Special, which is $10,000, winner-take-all, Robertson, if he wins, should receive a bonus of $1,000, of which $500 will go to the British War Relief Fund.

Vince Dundee defeated Lou Brouillard, French-Canadian boxer, in a 15-round bout for the world's middleweight title at Boston seven year ago to-night. Brouillard had won the title two months earlier with a knockout decision over Ben Jeby in seven rounds at New York.

Mike Sullivan, who held the world welterweight boxing championship for three years after his 1907 win from Honey Melody, then went up to fight in the middleweight class, died three years ago today after 24 years in retirement. Sullivan fought in 41 bouts and was defeated only twice in 12 years of boxing.

The Drunk Got It

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C., Oct. 31—(AP)—A patrolman's report on an automobile accident upset precedent. He said evidence at the scene indicated that a drunken driver was proceeding correctly on the right side of the road when a sober driver came along and crashed into him, head-on.

Bit Too Early

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 31—(AP)—William Jordan, a messenger boy, was just getting around to congratulating the police department for recovering his bicycle so promptly—even if it was stolen from in front of police headquarters—when it was stolen again, from in front of the headquarters, too.

New Mark Set By McBride With Fine Score

Stan McBride moved into first place for both the season's high three and high single games at Duffus Alleys last night when he rolled in the Westclox Men's Shop League. A lusty 389 single, which included ten successive strikes, in the first game of his 823 total enabled him to put Leo Martyn's City League 817 into discard. George Walton's 356 game was likewise shattered and "Slim" Breadman's 350 of Monday night didn't last the week.

The score-boards for the night showed three other fancy totals and five good singles. Ira Williamson of Ackerman's was next to McBride with a 349 in 778. Walter Crary and Clarence Simpson of Raybestos counted 751 and 706 each with a 306 game for Crary while Harry Davis of Sealrights dumped a 307, Bill Ralph of the Motor League 302 and Ken Roberts of the Westclox an even 300.

Good league scores were as follows:

Westclox Office League: Miss D. Ackford 607 (248) Miss W. Saunders 509, O. Martin 680, G. Millen 667, R. Rogow 642, A. Delahaye 622 and M. Starr 622.

Raybestos-Nashua-Sealright: W. Crary 751 (306), C. Simpson 706, D. Hunt 694, R. Lewis 698, R. Martyn 690, H. Davis 687 (307), S. Gilmour 659, H. Miller 619 and J. Freeman 614.

Westclox Shop League: S. McBride 823 (389), M. Murdock 669, W. Sharpe 654, A. Rightmyer 651, F. Johnson 649 and K. Roberts 605 (300).

Ackerman's League: I. Williamson 778 (349), H. Waddell 632 and F. Saunders 603.

Automobile League: E. Nickson 665, M. J. Duffus 654, W. Pinn 648, T. Ashmore 629, K. McPherson 612, O. Sugden 607, C. McIntyre 607 and K Ralph 601 (302).

MAPLE LEAFS SHUT OUT THREE NIAGARA DISTRICT SENIOR TEAMS

4,500 Attended Hockey Game In Garden City

Garden City Arena, St. Catharines, Oct. 31.—(Special.)—Toronto Maple Leafs swung into action with a real vengeance here last night with over 4,500 fans cheering them on to a 12-0 victory over three Niagara District Senior O.H.A. clubs. If the tempo of training they secured here and unleashed against the trio of amateur clubs is any criterion, Toronto's N.H.L. rivals are in for a strenuous season.

Against Niagara Falls Brights, who started, the Leafs were content to collect but three goals, all of which came from the stick of Billy Taylor, with Nick Metz getting two assists and Don Metz one.

Against St. Catharines Saints, in the middle period, the Leafs were held goalless, when a penalty apiece gave the capacity crowd thrills as Leafs and Saints staged power plays. Saints were beset when they were short and only escaped a score by sterling back-checking of their flyers from Sudbury Miners, Heximer and Rossini.

Tables were turned when Reg. Hamilton was benched and Saints kept Bastien on the hop, as they fired five shots at him, but some equally fancy defence work by Church and Stanowski and Kampman held the Leaf rookie goal intact.

Against Port Colborne Sailors in the last period, the Leafs uncorked what they had pent up in the second chapter. Starting in the first minute, they rattled in nine goals, the longest lapse being one of four minutes as Hamilton drew his second penalty of the night. Once Leafs were at full strength, the lines of Langelle, Marker and Heron alternated with the trio of Kowcinak, Bellinger, McCreedy and the sparkling on of Schriner, Chisholm and Goldup. The Blue Devils did the back-checking to stall off Sailor thrusts and the other two did most of the scoring.

Four of the concluding five goals were solo efforts by Marker, Goldup and a pair to Schriner, who also laid a perfect pass for Red Heron to flash the red light with 20 seconds to go. Ports tried every trick to work past the Leaf rearwall and were in a few times, but Broda smothered their best efforts.

Leafs were given a tremendous ovation by the biggest crowd in the Garden City Arena since it was opened two seasons ago by Leafs.

Conacher Hits Great Pace For The Amerks

TORONTO, Oct. 31 — (CP). — Charlie Conacher is going great guns for New York Americans in the pre-season training games. Conacher, once known as the Big Bomber in his days with the Toronto Maple Leafs, scored two goals last night although his team lost 5-3 to New York Rangers. Conacher duplicated this feat in another of the exhibition games between the two clubs. The six-game series between the two teams ended with each side getting three victories.

Montreal Canadiens had an easy time winning 5-0 over the amateur Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League last night. Right Winger Tony Demers, rated with Charlie Conacher as having one of the hardest shots in the league, tallied two of the goals for the National Hockey League club. It was Goalie Bert Gardiner's second shutout in six exhibition games. Gardiner and the Canadiens hold a 1-0 decision over New Haven Eagles of the American League.

Last night was quite a night for "doubles" among National League Hockey League players. For besides Demers and Conacher, little Clint Smith of New York Rangers also turned in a two-goal effort. Smith scored both goals in the second period of the game, one unassisted and the other on a pass from Kilby Macdonald.

Chicago Black Hawks had the day off yesterday. Manager Paul Thompson gave them respite from practice and said there would be no further exercise for the team until tonight when an exhibition game is played at St. Paul, Minn., against the St. Paul Saints of the American Association. The Hawks already hold a 7-2 decision over the Saints in a best-of-three series. The third game will be played Sunday night.

Hughes Hoping To Trim Rough Riders

TORONTO, Oct. 31.—(CP)—One of the curious things about Coach Bill Hughes of Montreal's Big Four football team is that he still has a hope that his club will defeat Ottawa Rough Riders this Saturday, despite the fact the Montreal team has won only one game in four and the Riders have won three of their contests.

Hughes doesn't exactly go around telling everyone that the Montreal team is going to win, for it would be pretty hard to discover a football fan in the East who thinks this will happen.

The Montreal coach plans to make a few changes in the line-up for the game Saturday but so far has kept mum on his proposed shifts. From the way the Montrealers have been working out, however, it seems apparent that Doug Stewart, a member of the Ontario Agricultural College team last year, may get the call to go in at quarterback.

Stewart, stationed with the Royal Canadian Air Force here, is small but shifty and has impressed in drills. Another newcomer is likely to be 230-pound Tom Glenn, who started out drilling this season with Riders but obtained employment in Montreal.

Another recent addition to the Montreal team, Norm Bertrand, is likely to see plenty of action in the backfield. Bertrand has only been working out with the team for a short while. He was used sparingly in the game against Hamilton Tigers last week, showing up well.

In the other Big Four contest this Saturday Tigers play Toronto Argonauts. Like the Montrealers, the Tigers are faced with the problem of winning both remaining games, and must count on a Montreal victory over either Riders or Argonauts, to gain a place in the two-team playoffs.

Louis Is Ready When Wanted

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31 — (AP). — Heavyweight champion Joe Louis, wearing a tan overcoat about the color of army khaki, said today he is ready to trade it for the uniform of a private or "whatever they want me to be that's best for the United States."

When he arrived here from Pittsburg, Louis was informed he had drawn Order No, 2,611 in the draft lottery. His first comment was: "I wonder what number Max Baer drew?"

Baer is scheduled to be one of Louis' future ring opponents.

The negro fighter was asked if he would prefer to be a physical instructor or teach boxing to army recruits. He replied: "Whatever they think best. I want to do what would help the country most."

He said he has no reason to seek exemption and is ready to serve as soon as he was called.

Discussing his boxing plans, Louis said his tentative program calls for bouts with Tommy Farr in December, "if they can bring him over from England in time"; Lou Nova in February; Billy Conn in June, and Baer next September.

Feller Got One

Cleveland, Oct. 31 (CP).

CLEVELAND INDIANS did not worry today over the fact that their ace pitcher, Bob Feller, had drawn a number in the United States great conscription lottery.

Bob's serial number, 3,585, came out 7,486th in a total of 9,000 drawn, far enough back to make it problematical if he ever will reach the army.

Williams Favors East-West Game

CALGARY, Oct. 31—(CP). — Alf Williams, president of the Calgary Bronks football club, said here last night he is "all for" the East-West football game proposed in Toronto for December 7, under auspices of the Sports Service League.

Williams endorsed a suggestion by John Bannerman, president of the Canadian Rugby Union, that two games be played, one under Western rules.

"Bronks will be willing to go East if they win the Western championship," said Williams, "but as we expect to lose the services of several players who are members of the Canadian Active Service Force, I would suggest that if we win, an All-star Western team be picked to represent the West. That would give the East the best possible brand of football whether played under Eastern or Western rules."

Mr. Williams said the East would pass up a chance to make the event "outstanding" if no opportunity is given the Western team to show its "modern, wide-open, thrilling type of play as compared with the antiquated Eastern rules."

Use The Same Chair

OTTAWA, Oct. 31 — (CP). — Parliament will have another physical link with its past when it reassembles next week. The Clerk of the House of Commons, Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, will sit on the floor of the House in a chair used by Sir John Bourinot, Clerk of the Commons from 1880 until his death in 1903. The old Parliament Buildings were destroyed by fire in 1916, but this massive oak chair, heavily carved, was not.

First Aid In London Street

First aid treatment is being given this Londoner after a Nazi bomb had landed in the street some distance from him. Bomb fragments and hurtling debris injured him painfully, but fortunately not seriously.

Hun Lands Plane As Friend Of UK

LONDON, Oct. 31—(CP).—Bomb splinters from the Battle of Britain:

When a German plane came down on a farm in Southeast England, the farmer, armed with a revolver and pitchfork, ran to capture him. "You want no revolver for me," the pilot said in good English. "They shot my brother for refusing to raid England."

With his haversack full of blanket pins a Boy Scout makes a nightly round of one of London's tube shelters where he folds and pins the children's blankets Scout fashion. They call him "Big Chief Blanket Pin."

Shelter eye is Britain's newest wartime ailment. Oculists explained many people complain their eyes feel hot and strained. Main cause is the amount of reading done while lying under shelter lights.

A Royal Air Force pilot had no ammunition left after downing a Messerschmidt 109 over the English channel but bagged a second German plane just the same. He drew alongside Nazi fighter and sheared off the Messerschmitt's tail with his starboard wing, sending the enemy craft plummeting seawards. The R.A.F. pilot pancaked his Hurricane to a safe landing although more than a foot of the wing had been ripped off.

A naval commander walking along a London street when German raiders dropped an incendiary bomb near a bomb-shattered building had no trouble smothering the sizzler. Scooping dust from the wreckage, he piled it on the bomb and placed his gold-braided cap on top.

A Raid Sweep.

War workers in an East London factory run a six-penny sweep on the starting time of every air raid warning. First prize is often as much as £4 (about $18). Whenever the "all clear" sounds after a warning, a man goes around collecting the six-pences and the slips of paper bearing the time the next raid is fancied.

Rescue workers found "Nellie" and her family of five pups deep under the debris five days after her master's home had been bombed. The whole family survived.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Canadian Prime Minister, told Norwich citizens when he inaugurated their campaign to raise £500,000 ($2,225,000) for war weapons that England has every reason to be proud of the way the sons of Empire came thousands of miles to defend Britain. He was confident the Empire would achieve victory.

One Bond street store, left windowless after a bomb fell, decided merely boarding up the front was not in keeping with the store's pre-raid policy of crowd-attracting window displays. It hired an artist to paint on the boards replicas of the goods sold.

Mrs. W. Buckler Is Laid To Rest

An irreparable loss came to St. James' United Church, Peterborough, and its many organizations in the passing of Margaret Walker Anderson Buckler, widow of the late Rev. W. H. Buckler, at Nicholls Hospital.

Born in Hastings, Ontario, in the year 1864, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson, she received her early education in Hastings and at Norwood High School and on April 10, 1889, was united in marriage to the Rev .W. H. Buckler.

In his early itinerary, Mrs. Buckler ably assisted her husband in all his work in the ministry in the following charges, Demorestville, Yarker, Plainfield, Hilton, Scugog, Mountain Grove, and at St. James' United Church, Peterborough, where Rev. Mr. Buckler served as assistant for eight years.

One cannot refrain from turning back the pages of the history of so consecrated a woman and finding there many interesting things, amongst these the fact that she was converted as a child of seven years. At the age of twelve, so imbued was she with Christian ideals, that she gathered together a Sunday School class of girls and obtained permission to teach them. such early spirituality made the firm foundation on which was built her fine character and service for the Master.

One possessing so many rare gifts was often sought for work, filling every office with Christian faithfulness and integrity. The last years of her church life were full of activity, since she was the teacher of the Treasure Seekers' Bible Class of St. James' Sunday School, and an honorary president and ardent supporter of the W.M.S. in all its branches. Throughout her life these had been paramount interests, as well as her deep concern for the work of the Young People's Union and of the W.C.T.U. To all these she gave lavishly of herself, her time, her talents, her money and her energy.

Mrs. Buckler's work was not confined only to St. James' Church, but she was known and gave of her fine Christian qualities to the whole community, having spoken in five of the six United Churches of the city. It is of interest to note that at the Week of Prayer service in 1933, she was the only woman chosen to represent her church and to lead the large congregation in prayer. In her own church, Mrs. Buckler always upheld the weekly prayer service by her presence and influence.

Being possessed of high intellectual, moral and spiritual gifts, and an affectionate disposition, the influence of her life has been gracious and far-reaching and her loss keenly felt by all who knew her.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Buckler was held from the family residence, Princess Street, to St. James' United Church, thence to Trent Valley Cemetery, Hastings, where interment took place.

She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Lillian, Mrs. J. T. McBride of Chicago, and Anneta at home; also one sister Agnes of San Francisco, and four brothers, Charles, William and Joseph Anderson (formerly manager of the Royal Bank), all of Toronto, and Ashworth of Vancouver, B.C.

Among the friends from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Horsley of Toronto and Rev. W. R. Tanton of Smith's Falls, and her two brothers from Toronto, Joseph and Charles Anderson.

The impressive service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. F. W. Craik, assisted by Rev. E. W. Rowland of Mark Street United Church who offered prayer, Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt of Knox United Church, who read for the Scripture lesson Psalm 23 and John 14, 1-14, and Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, who sang the appropriate solo, "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love." The hymns by request were "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me."

In his brief message of comfort, Rev. Mr. Craik chose for his text the one used for the late Mr. Buckler, II. Timothy 4, 7-8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," which was also chosen by the deceased as a fitting close to a long and happy Christian life. The minister paid high tribute to her many sterling qualities and life-long Christian service.

The pall-bearers, who bore her to her last resting-place, included the members of the Session of St. James' United Church: A. E. Prest, E. R. Frost, E. Kitney, A. E. Saunders, J. Arthur, and W. M. Wood.

Many beautiful floral tributes attested to the high esteem and love in which Mrs. Buckler was held.

JUST DOUBLED IT

LONDON—(CP).—Lewis Kramer's appeal to London Sessions Appeals Committee against being fined $22.25 for a blackout offence was a mistake, the judge increasing it to $44.50, saying the first fine was "inadequate."

Greece's Big Three

Houde's Initial Rally Folds Up

MONTREAL¼ Oct. 31 — (CP).—A rally intended to open Camillien Houde's campaign for re-election as mayor of Montreal ended abruptly last night when the crowd jamming an east end school hall was told that Houde's internment made him ineligible.

A few among the 800 persons at the meeting shouted "We won't go home" after Leonard Trepanier, a young lawyer announced that "under the circumstances it is impossible for us to carry on." However, the hall was soon empty.

Trepanier told the noisy crowd of Prime Minister King's announcement on Tuesday that under an amendment to the Defence of Canada Regulations interned persons are not permitted to offer themselves as candidates for municipal or other public office.

Madame Houde, wife of the mayor, and Aldermen J. H. Delisle and Oscar Bellsle attended the rally called about 10 days ago when Houde organizers revealed that the mayor intended to seek re-election despite his internment Aug. 6 for a statement opposing national registration. The election for the mayoralty will be in December.

Trepanier who said he spoke in the name of the Houde organization described the prime minister's announcement as "incredible news."

"We regret the profound deception this decision has created in this immense crowd which has gathered no doubt to acclaim the valiant and courageous candidate of the people, Camillien Houde," he said.

With Houde out of the running six men already announced as candidates were left in the running for the mayoralty. The group is headed by C. A. Gascn who was beaten by Houde in the last municipal election.

Thinks Creation Unfolding On Planet Venus

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—(AP).—One of the world's outstanding scientists thinks the story of creation may be unfolding anew on the planet Venus.

Dr. H. Spencer Jones, astronomer royal of Great Britain, says in a review published by the Smithsonian Institution there is strong evidence that rudimentary forms of life, such as tiny plants and sea animals, are developing on the earth's nearest neighbor in the heavens.

From visual observations, studies of photographs and analysis with the spectrograph, the instrument which breaks up light into its rainbow of colors and photographs them, it appears that conditions on Venus today are approximately those which prevailed on the earth about 1,000,000,000 years ago when geologists say the first living things were beginning to appear in the slime of the sea shores.

Dr. Jones adds that there is some evidence also that life might exist in some form on the satellites of stars similar to our sun. But they are in distant galaxies of space and no telescope exists which could give even approximate proof.

Life might also be assumed to exist on other planets near the 60,000,000,000 stars of earth's own milky way galaxy, he added, but the chances are remote because the formation of a blanket by the possible eruption of a giant mass of gas from the parent sun and its gradual development into an earth-like body happens only once in about 5,000,000,000 years.

The spectrographic studies show that there is little water on the cloud-shrouded planet Venus and very little oxygen but much more carbon dioxide than exists on earth. Carbon dioxide is absorbed by plants and, with the aid of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter, and sunlight, is converted into energy, giving off oxygen into the air.

team and sleigh to Arnold Wellman's about 7.30 o'clock Tuesday evening, January 30, and stole eleven or twelve bags of chop from a wagon in the barn and took it home.

"I got home around 8 o'clock. I left the grain on a sideroad where I left my sleigh. I went south on a side road between the eighth and seventh concessions, past the school of S.S. No. 17. I took the team home but left the sleigh and grain. Next day on Wednesday 31 I took the team right after dinner, around 1 o'clock to 1.30. Then I went home. I then went to Graham's store at Wellman's Corner and bought five shells, a file and a couple of chocolate bars. Then I turned around and started back. I stopped to load the grain, tying the team at an elm bush on the side road west of Charlie Dunbarn's bush. I had a twelve guage shotgun on the sleigh. I drove across the field toward Wellman's and saw some people chopping wood. I hollered at them. I don't know what for. I turned back to the side road and went up it and crossed the 8th line into Pollock's field, then east to Wellman's field. That took me to the rear of Wellman's barn. I had the gun.

"I went in the cow stable. Mr. Wellman was standing up beside a cow. He was looking at the wall. I was all excited. I started hollering and shot off the gun. I didn't know what I was doing."

The next question was: "Did you shoot it at him?"

Answer: "Yes."

Question: "And he dropped?"

Answer: "I expect so. I went out and stood beside the stack for a long time. And I cried. Then I went to the house. I went in the back door, and went to the door of the room."

That was Mrs. Wellman's bedroom.

Mr. Snyder finished his reading, leaving Thain at the door to the bedroom—which he is accused of entering and shooting Mrs. Wellman, who was confined to her bed with a heart condition, and was sitting up, writing a letter to her daughter, Dr. Victoria Ioan Wellman of Chicago.

Mr. Snyder paused briefly and concluded: "That's the case for the Crown."

When Thain Talked

Returning to the stand as a witness, Lieutenant Everett Smith related the circumstances of receiving a statement from Thain at the court house on February 3, after murder charges had been laid against the accused.

"Constable Adair and Thain sat on a bench in the corridor of the county building while I went to get a remand on the charges. Thain motioned to me to come to him. I went out and he said, "Will you be square?" I told him I could not promise him anything and warned him that anything he said could be used against him. He said, "I done it." I asked him what he had done, and he replied, "I stole the grain." I asked him if he killed the old people, and he said 'No'."

Witness said he later talked to Thain after getting the remand.

"He again asked me if I would be square with him, and I told him again I could not make any promises. Then he said: 'It was a terrible thing to do.' I asked him what wa sterrible, and he said 'I done it'."

"I said, 'What are you talking about?' He answered, 'I murdered the old people.' I asked him which one he shot first, and Thain said, 'The old man,' and then he said he went to the house and shot Mrs. Wellman'."

Mr. Snyder: "With the shotgun produced in court?"

"Yes. The gun we got from Thain's house. He said he would have told me before but there were too many people around."

Witness identified the Thain statement. He was present with Sergeant Thompson when it was written and Thain signed it.

Provincial Constable David Adair, who was with Lieut. Smith when Thain talked in the court house, testified that after the accused admitted theft of Wellman grain he also confessed murdering Mr. and Mrs. Wellman.

Sergeant Thompson, re-examined, said the livestock at the Thain farm comprised four mature horses, two colts, three brood sows and one with a litter and eleven head of cattle. Witness amplified the recital of the writing of Thain's statement after reading to him the customary caution that Thain was not obliged to say anything, but, if he did, it might be used against him. As produced by witness it was twelve pages of typewriting, foolscap size.

Doctors Called.

Dr. Ernest A. Clarke, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital, Kingston, first witness for the defense, said he could be termed an alienist. He said he first saw Fred Thain on February 8, 1940, also on the 10th, May 7, July 30 and September 22. "I have observed him during this trial.

Mr. McCullough—"Have you been able to come to a conclusion from your observation as to his sanity?"

Dr. Carke—"I have, sir."

Mr. McCullough—"That raises the question of sanity."

Mr. Justice MacKay—"You mean of legal sanity. There is no evidence this prisoner is not able to stand trail. The time to have raised that issue was when he was asked to plead'."

Mr. McCullough quoted from the criminal code to the effect that if before a verdict was given there appeared to be reason to doubt the capability of the accused in conducting the defense the question could become an issue before the court.

Dr. Clarke said that in a brief interview on February 8 Thain seemed to be quite clear. Then on February 10, witness said he had a longer interview, especially about his medical and occupational history and a complete story of his life, and found nothing suspicious.

The next meeting on May 7 produced nothing particular.

"On July 30 I found him in bed in jail. He had been in the Belleville General Hospital. He did not appear to be physically ill. He was supposed to have heart trouble, requiring him to go to the hospital. I saw no mental change in him at all that day."

In September Thain was still in bed and could give a clear account of how he had been.

"Did you notice any change in his mental condition?" Mr. McCullough asked.

"None whatever."

Mr. McCullough finally asked Dr. Clarke to express his opinion of Thain's present mental condition.

Dr. Clarke—"My opinion is unchanged. I feel that there is no evidence of mental illness in Mr. Thain, and that he is responsible for his actions."

Witness added—"I think he is a normal individual to the point that he is at all times in touch with his surroundings and is quite responsible."

Dr. George S. Tennant said he examined Thain twice in February, and observed him during the course of the present trial.

"I have not been able to observe anything to warrant the belief that he is mentally ill," Dr. Tennant replied to Mr. McCullough.

Chrysler Strike Vote Is Held Up

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP).—Although refusing to reveal how many voted, officials of the Chrysler Division, Local 195, United Automobile Workers of America, issued a statement today claiming 87 per cent of its members approved the calling of a strike at the Windsor Chrysler automobile plants.

Indicating that the number to cast votes was very low, Union officials intimate that no action will be taken on the vote, "because of the number of workers who did not vote due to intimidation."

The vote result was revealed at a closed meeting of the Union last night. The meeting then decided to demand that the Dominion Department of Labor conduct a strike vote in the Chrysler plants.

Another resolution, passed by the meeting, also requests the government to investigate the "intimidation" the Union officials allege. They charge the parading of soldiers from the St. Luke Road barracks through the Chrysle plant, "as serious intimidation and misuse of troops."

In reply, Lt.-Col. George Y. Masson, barracks' commandant, today denied any connection between the visit to the plant of his troops and the strike vote.

"We didn't even know there was a vote being taken," Col. Masson said. "Our visit to Chrysler was similar to those we have made at Fords and other industrial plants. We have outlined a program of industrial education for the soldiers, so that they may appreciate the warwork being done by the men in the factories," he added.

The management of each of the three theatres is in complete co-operation with the Association.

THINK IT OVER.

Alderman Herb Bradburn, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, urged the members Wednesday night to give considerable thought to the question of appointing an industrial commissioner for the City of Peterborough. The point may be dealt with at the next Council meeting but some of the members felt it was a question which should be left to the incoming council.

GUN LICENSES

A well known Peterborough man, an American citizen, but one that has been in this city for a number of years, has had particular difficulty in procuring a gun license, but finally he was fortunate enough to obtain one. This is an encouraging indication that the regulations in this connection are being enforced, and the citizens of Canada are doing all in their power to keep the fifth column an inactive element in the Dominion.

Ivan Fletcher from Keene reports that ducks are very plentiful on the protected stretches of water east of Keene in Rice Lake. One hunter is said to have noticed a flock of more than fifty black ducks among his decoys.

As curate of St. John's Church, he was in charge of the South Ward Mission. When it was made a separate parish he chose the name for the church and called it All Saints' and he was appointed to be the first rector, taking charge on January 1st, 1902.

AN OBJECTION

A letter read at a meeting of the Legal Committee Wednesday night from Dr. H. R. H. Kenner objected to the no parking rule for the south side of McDonnel street. The aldermen discussing this pointed out that fire hydrants were on the south side, it was a provincial highway, troops needed an approach to the training ground on the south side, and that cars parked on the north side took up little space as there were driveways which extended a few feet out on the street. At that point the committee suddenly discovered they had no quorum and the letter was shelved for the time being.

"I used to be a coal miner in Scotland," he declared, adding that he had not worked at his trade since coming to this country.

The accused said that he had lived out West for some time.

Bradburn Urges Enforcement Contract Terms

Alderman Herb Bradburn insisted on lot owners living up to the terms of their contracts with the city at a meeting of the Property Committee Wednesday night.

It was learned at the meeting that five citizens who purchased lots during the past ten months had not as yet started to build houses on the properties, in spite of a condition of sale which said they must build within a year. Some of the aldermen were of the opinion the council might be lenient with these people, but Mr. Bradburn took a different stand.

He pointed out during the argument that most of the city lots had been sold at reduced prices as a gesture toward prospective home builders so that more revenue would be coming in the form of taxes. He suggested that the reduced price was unfair to other citizens who had lots for sale, and therefore the City Council should insist that the terms of the contract be fulfilled. On motion it was decided to have the city solicitor take the necessary steps to enforce the terms.

Unusual Request

An unusual request was heard during the meeting when Stuart Bros., local builders complained in a letter that they had to move a cellar back from the street line on the corner of Stewart and Aberdeen. The contractors had started to build a house for Lemuel Pammett after obtaining a permit from the City Engineer, and when the cellar was dug and the forms in, a highway engineer had ordered that the house be built 15 feet further back from the highway lines. The Stuart Bros. argued that as the City Engineer had failed to give this information in the first place, the city should assume some of the extra cost involved. The members refused the request, pointing out that it was the contractor's responsibility to determine where the house should be built, seeing that it fronted a provincial highway.

"They are lucky they didn't have any cement poured," was Alderman Stocker's only comment.

Several lots that reverted to the city in the recent sale of city property for taxes, will be assessed and priced for sale at once.

Alderman McCannan, chairman of the Property Committee told the meeting that he had a few enquiries for building lots on the old Barnardo Home property in the end. He was authorized to have this property surveyed and broken up into a residential subdivision.

Five Boys Appear In Juvenile Court

Three twelve-year boys appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in juvenile court this morning and pleaded guilty to breaking and entering St. Paul's Church last Sunday night with intent to commit theft. The youngsters had been discovered by Constable Gordon Trennum hiding under the pews in the gallery of the church. They had entered by a window on the east side.

Two of the boys were allowed to go on suspended sentence but the third, who had been in trouble before over the theft of a quantity of clothing, was remanded to the Children's Aid Society Shelter for a week.

Two other boys were charged with stealing bicycles. The elder of the two brothers, 15 years old, was acquitted. The younger, 11, was allowed to go on suspended sentance. W. B. Gordon looked after their interests.

Moose Noticed At Catchecoma But 'No Shootng'

Moose are becoming more common in Peterborough's northern townships and several during the past season have been seen up in Galway and Cavendish, others down in Harvey and some farther east well down in the settlements. The majority however are in the Lake Catchecoma district.

Many hunters heading up into that area may be given quite a start some bright and early morning to see one of the 'lords of the forest' stalk out before him as he holds down a deer watch—others may not be so startled, having previous knowledge of fact moose are in the area and be all set to bag a fine pair of antlers—and it would be a fine idea except for the fact no moose may be shot south of the French and Mattawa Rivers.

Game Inspector I. J. Lyons tipped The Examiner off to the fact this morning in the hope it may spare some unwary nimrod a hefty fine for toting home a moose he "didn't know were protected or one potted in mistake for a cow"— or any one of some dozen explanations all plausible to the hunter but which the Inspector says the department refuses to take in lieu of the preferred cash the court demands in the form of a fine.

"If the boys leave them alone for a few years and give them a chance to multiply a bit, which it seems they have been doing more rapidly lately, there's a chance we may get an open season in the not too distant future," said the Inspector. "Those big boys are a mighty fine asset to this part of the province and can attract real revenue here through the tourist trade and U.S. hunters when the time is ripe. So I think we'll find the boys will be able to keep their sights off the moose for a few years yet in their own interests without the added threat of the law."

Two Cars Collide On Canal Bridge

Two automobiles were damaged to the extent of $400 when they met in collision on the bridge over the Trent Canal on the Warsaw Road Wednesday afternoon.

According to the report made to the police, G. F. Curtis, 523 Armour Road, claimed that he was approaching the bridge at a speed of 15 miles an hour, travelling east, when he noticed another car coming from the east. Mr. Curtis informed the police that he had applied his brake and pulled over until his car touched the side of the bridge. He says that when the other driver, Thomas Cooper of Warsaw, applied his brakes his car skidded into the Curtis machine and then hit the other side of the bridge.

Neither driver was hurt but both machines were very badly damaged by the impact, the estimate being $200 damages to each automobile.

Students Ask Shorter Luncheon Hour

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 31. — (ENS).—For the second time within a month the hours at the Campbellford High School are to be changed. Last month when the town reverted to fast time, something of a furore was caused in neighboring townships who supply nearly fifty per cent of the High School students. As a result the opening hour was advanced to 9.30 and school was dismissed at 4.30 in the afternoon. Pupils, feeling that the school day lasted too long under the present plan circulated a petition on which 80 per cent signified their willingness to return to school at 1.10 in the afternoon in order to be dismissed at the proverbial four o'clock. Though the petition didn't actaully reach the board it was brought to the attention of one of its members, F. C. Bonnycastle, who presented the pupils' side of the cast to other members at their monthly session. And to prove that pupils still had voice in affairs which concern them most it was unanimously agreed that the new hour for reconvening the afternoon session should be instituted.

Caretaker J. C. Massie, who claimed he had been supplying a wheelbarrow for the public school during the past thirty years, asked the Board to purchase one for future use, and this they agreed to do. The Board was also advised that new grates were needed for fire boxes in the Public School and an additional stove for the basement was also recommended. On motion of A. J. Armour and Dr. H. O. Richardson the matter of purchasing a stove was left with the property committee.

The property committee was also authorized to go into the matter of setting appropriate fees to be charged the Badminton club for use of one room in the old High School building as a club room.

The secretary read a letter from H. B. Wood of the Northumberland Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association requesting use of the High School auditorium for the annual public speaking competitions, and, on motion, authority for granting the auditorium was given.

A start is to be made in the direction of forming a manual training class in the public school. Harold Dunk brought to the board's attention a recommendation made by School Inspector A. A. Martin who suggested that a coping saw, clamps and other small items could be purchased to institute the class. Cost of the supplies, according to Mr. Dunk, would be in the neighborhood of $10. It was decided the recommendation should be acted upon.

Following their tradition the purchase of a miniature of the Board of Education Cup presented to the winner of the oratorical contest on October 25, was authorized.

It was with some surprise members learned the council had based the Board's requisition for the year on the 1939 estimates rather than on 1940 requisition, which meant the trustees would fall $900.00 short on the year's accounts. Since the Board has no way of raising money except through the council, the matter was left with the Finance committee, who will refer it back to the council.

Winning The War Canadian Writes

Recent letters from England point to the fact that the troops are having a comparatively quiet time, and all are satisfied, but for one thing, the price and quality of the cigarettes.

Tobacco is selling for $5.50 a pound in England, and cigarettes 17 cents for 10. Brass storm lighters are much in demand, and some of the boys have been asking for them.

A letter from Jimmy Welsh, a member of the Toronto Scottish, to Peter Gosselin, is one of the most optimistic to date, and the writer doesn't say "We'll win," he says, "We are winning the war." His regiment was over in France, but didn't see much action. All members of the regiment hope that spring will bring another opportunity in this direction.

Who Stole City's Coal, Wails Alderman As Janitor Points To Empty Fuel Bin

There's 15 tons of Red Jacket coal missing from the cellar of the City Hall and Alderman Herb McCannan is figuring he may send a bill to the chairman of the Board of Works. It all happened very quietly and it's strange that someone could lift fifteen tons of coal from a cellar under the police station without the law being aware of it.

During the war of 1914-18 the council purchased about 25 tons of coal that contained so much slate it wouldn't burn. The coal reposed in the cellar under the City Hall since then. Finally Alderman McCannan said he needed the space and the Board of Works volunteered to bag the coal and place it on the road someplace as fill. That was fine, a nice friendly gesture of cooperation between civic departments. When the men started removing the slate, there were 15 tons of red jacket alongside. When they finished both quantities of coal had disappeared, and strange as it may seem, the Board of Works now has plenty of good coal to fire a boiler being used in the city yard.

Alderman Bradburn suggests there's skullduggery afoot and would like to see Alderman Stocker commissioned as a detective to clear up the mystery, but Alderman Stocker with a look at Alderman Wilson, chairman of the Board of Works....a look of sympathy perhaps, for Walter once directed the Board of Works, said so long as the coal is being used for city business they had better leave the thing alone. The Board of Works appropriataion never did take care of the many things that were supposed to be done by this department, and if they needed coal for the city yard ....well they just borrowed it from the City Hall cellar.

Brothers In Same Unit

Thomas E. Fenn, LEFT, and John H. Fenn, RIGHT, are brothers and sons of Mrs. Kathleen Fenn, 226 Edinburgh Street, Peterborough. Both were employed in the local plant of Canada Packers when they enlisted with the 4th Anti-Tank Unit.

Fortune Smiles On Nimrods; Hunting Ground At Back Door

Residents of Peterborough are in a favored position according to a Toronto deer hunter who engaged two reporters in conversation at a local restaurant on Thursday.

"I don't know of another city in Ontario where one can motor out twenty miles over good highway, and shoot a deer, then be back home the same night," said the visitor.

He explained without mentioning any names that he and two companions had occupied a cottage on Cedar Lake last fall and in one day had downed a buck, a doe and a fawn. This would be within twenty-five miles of the city of Peterborough, and accessible over highway 28, to the lake a few miles north of Burleigh.

Many local hunters still cling to the old idea that faraway fields are the greenest, whereas the majority of the deer hunters find a likely spot in the Apsley district, avoid most of the hardships and come home with a deer.

In recent years there has been several cottages outfitted for the cooler autumn weather and some local men take their hunt in two day stretches, slipping back to the city to tend to business between hunting periods.

Few people will dispute the fact that the northern sections of Burleigh township and the area west of Apsley up toward the Ketchecum chain of lakes is a fine deer country. Location of the Crown Game Preserve a few years ago has done considerable in giving more protection to the deer, with the result that they are plentiful throughout the entire northern portion of he county.

Depredations by wolf packs, and the occasional settler who has little respect for the laws, has accounted for several deer every season, but the natural increase in a protected area has been great. Apsley village and the settlers themselves are beginning to feel the benefit of this increase in that it has attracted many more hunters into the section, with a greater sale of groceries, provisions, ammunition and other commodities. It has been said that a hunter who likes comfort can live at one of the hotels in Apsley and drive out to a likely deer spot during the day, with good chances of bringing home his quota of venison.

Hunters are urged this year to protect the elk which were placed on the Crown Game Preserve a year ago, and also to be on the alert for a shot at any of the wolves which are known to be in the district.

Last fall two deer hunters from Toronto motored to Apsley early in the morning, went out on the hunt with a guide, shot a buck and a doe and were back in Toronto before midnight of the same day with the two deer carcasses packed on the side of their car.

Famed Artist Heming Passes

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP). —Arthur Heming, well-known Canadian artist, died Wednesday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Robert B. Acres, Hamilton.

Heming was 70 years of age.

He gained his greatest fame as an artist for portraying wild life and the early Canadian voyageurs. He was 60 before he began to paint with colors and his announcement last January that he was putting aside his brush shocked the Canadian art world.

As a youth he studied in New York and London and he was only 16 when he took his first trip into the bush to see first-hand the life he was to portray so well on book and canvas.

Heming was an illustrator in the early part of his career. He was sent into the woods more than 30 years ago to make illustrations for a writer who accompanied him. When the writer failed to do the story, Heming wrote so that his illustrations would not be wasted.

The result was "Spirit Lake," an immensely popular book which was followed by "The Drama of the Forest," and "The Living Forest," both tales of the woodlands which won universal applause.

Mr. Heming, who was an art instructor in Hamilton in the 1890's, had lived here since his retirement last January.

Native of Paris, Ont., he was prominent in athletics as a youth. At one time he was captain of a Hamilton Tigers intermediate football team and was a leading player with the Hamilton Lacrosse Club. He also was an oarsman, a marathon runner and a wrestler.

While studying pioneer and frontier life, he made many trips into the Canadian north and travelled by canoe, oxcart, prairie schooner, dogteam, horseback and snowshoes.

Mr. Heming contributed to leading magazines and newspapers in England, France, Canada, the United States, Germany and other countries. He was a fellow of the Society of American Illustrators, honorary life member of the Canadian Club of Hamilton, member of the Authors' Club of London, of the Canadian Authors Association and of the Arts and Letters Club of Toronto. Before moving here he maintained a residence in Toronto.

Heming's health began to fail more than a year ago and became worse recently although his condition was not considered critical.

He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. E. A. Harris, Mrs. Robert B. M. Acres, and Mrs. James Noxon, Hamilton, and two brothers, George E. Heming, Whitby, Ont., and Charles W. Heming, Hamilton.

Old Pumper Destined For Scrap Heap

A decision by the Fire, Water and Light Committee authorising the chairman and the Fire Chief to sell the old pumper for scrap at the best price possible was recommended at a committee meeting on Wednesday night.

Centre of activity at many city blazes a quarter of a century ago, where it served with efficiency and splendor, the old pumper has now fallen upon evil days. For several months the Fire Chief has been wanting the space occupied by the old pumper, now obsolete. Members of the City Council had hoped some small municipality would see fit to purchase it, as a fire fighting unit, but so far they haven't received a bidder.

The old pumper was purchased in 1905 at a cost of $5,500 and weighs 10,940 pounds. It was drawn by three powerful horses and firemen would start a fire under the boiler and have steam up before the horses could be at the fire. Then a short length of hose was thrown into a creek or a nearby well and the pumper went to work to supply the water for fighting the blaze.

It is the last relic left at the Fire Hall of the days when fire fighters had horse-drawn equipment, and the clanging bells, galloping horses and shouting fire fighters gave the small boys and adults alike a thrill as they rushed past. Those days of glamor are gone, and to-day the fire truck swishes by with a shriek of the siren and a gust of wind, just another auto truck.

Several years ago when a large pile of pulpwood was ablaze at Campbellford, the Fire Chief engineered a fast job loading the pumper on a flat car, and rushed it to the fire, where it was used to advantage. Since that time it has been idle.

Smith Farmer Given 7 Days

William Elliott, Smith township farmer, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to seven days in jail after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving.

Elliott was arrested by Constable John Moyes last Thursday night after the automobile which he was driving crashed into a parked car owned by Ted Moher, 510 Water Street.

"My tire went flat or the accident would not have happened," Elliott told Magistrate Langley this morning, after pleading guilty to the charge.

No evidence was heard but Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., gave a brief statement in regard to the accident. "No one was hurt," he said, "and the damage is being paid for."

Magistrate Langley issued an order to the police in regard to the impounding of Elliott's car for three months.

Japan will ban the cultivation of tobacco for cigars.

Maretta Graham Heads Junior Girls' Society

MILLBROOK, Oct. 31 ENS)—The junior girls' club prepared for its new season's work by an adoption of the war-time project: "The Club Girl Stands on Guard," the meeting being at the home of Mrs. W. C. Thorndyke, with twelve members present, and the leader, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, in the chair.

Under the project, headings for study will include: health and health habits; posture; nutrition; economy in meal planning, and first aid. The election of officers resulted in the following slate: President, Maretta Graham; vice-president, Luella Kennedy; secretary-treasurer, Martha Belch; club reporter, Ruby Fallis.

Seven meetings during the year are an official requirement, and the girls will meet every Saturday afternoon, a demonstration on incorrect and correct posture to feature the next gathering. A collection will be taken at each meeting to help the club funds, and a fruit cake will be made and tickets sold as another means of having sufficient money on hand for current expenses and other claims.

A name for the club will be chosen at the next gathering, the girls to bring suggestions, and the leader, Mrs. Armstrong gave an interesting talk on "Why the club girl needs to stand on guard," noting that she must do her best to guard her personal health; to look after the welfare of the family and of the community; to keep mentally fit; and to be willing to do hard things every day as they should be done; to help her to recognize the rights of others, and see that she does not infringe upon them; to do things for other people, and to dream worthwhile things, and then do her best to make these dreams come true.

As a home assignment, the girls were asked to interview suitable people regarding the best books to read, and to begin preparations for making their record books. Martha Belch and Ruby Fallis sponsored the hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Thorndyke for her hospitality previous to dispersal for the day.

Handicap To UK If U.S. Fights Says Kennedy

NEW YORK, Oct 31 — (AP). — Fresh from Britain Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy urged Tuesday the re-election of President Roosevelt because "events move so quickly —the man of experience is our man of the hour."

The envoy took occasion on a $20,000 nationwide broadcast, sponsored by Mrs. Kennedy and their nine children, to declare flatly that "from the day I went to the Court of St. James until this minute I have never given to one single individual in the world any hope whatsoever that at any stage or under any conditions could the United States be drawn into the war."

He asserted that statements saying President Roosevelt was leading America into war were "false," as the President has said, and added that "the truth of the matter is that there is no more harmful step which could be taken from the viewpoint of Great Britain than our declaration of war."

To declare war, he continued, would handicap efforts to give aid to Great Britain. The problems of transporting an army to England alone would be "staggering."

"To suggest, yes, I say even to suggest, that our boys will soon be on transports is completely absurd," he said.

"If President Roosevelt were as wicked as his opponents charge, which he is not, and even if he had undisclosed commitments, which he has not, the facts are against our participation in this war."

The cost of the broadcast was $14,486, with an additional $6,200 paid to radio actors on a program normally broadcast at that time.

CHAPTER 50

ANOTHER sleepless night ahead. A night when Blair would think of nothing but Janet, and how he could find her...a night when he would make plans; only discard them in the morning when the light of day showed him how absurb they were.

He walked by the clerk's desk, but was stopped by a sudden call.

"A telephone message for you, Mr. Rodman," the clerk said. "Just came a minute or so ago. A Mrs. O'Malley..."

Without waiting to hear more, Rodman dashed for the door, leaving the astounded clerk convinced he had suddenly lost his mind. Rodman dashed to his car, and leaped in, bound for Mrs. O'Malley's home again.

He violated a dozen traffic rules in his wild ride, and drew up at the curb in front of the old house within 20 minutes.

"Oh, Mr. Rodman," the woman greeted him when she came to the door. "My, how fast you got here. I just this minute got back from next door, where I was phoning you. Of course I stopped to talk a second...but then....

"You told me to call if I heard from O'Malley. Well, no sooner had you gone than a special delivery letter came. It's from Seattle! And the queerest letter! On my word, I'm worried about O'Malley....I never did get such a letter before! Maybe you'd like to read it...seeing you are interested in the Wanderer, too. I declare!" She took the letter from her apron pocket, and handed it to him. Her habitual smile was gone from her face, now. Indeed her features were quite grave, and she looked worried.

Blair took the letter and glanced at it quickly.

"Dear Grace, here we are in Seattle, laid up for repairs. Only for a day, though, and I don't know how we are going to make it that quick. Engines damaged, though I don't know how, and me a captain...unless one of the boys jammed them up because he wanted to get off the ship.

"Ten of the boys jumped ship as soon as we made port...and I dont know whether the rest'll stay or not... Damned funny ship ...gives me the creeps, too.

"What with getting together a new crew and nobody wanting to join up with us, because the rumors got around...and fixing the engines, I'm busy...but not too busy to drop you a line as I promised.

"Mr. Able told me there was only a woman aboard...Miss Boardeaux. But there's another passenger, too, a man, though none of us has seen him yet. The boys call him the ghost man, and they're pretty scared.

"Outside the straits, two days ago, I married Miss Boardeaux to the ghost man....she pale as a flower, and him, I never did see though I heard him plain enough, answering my questions. She fainted dead away after the ceremony, so she didn't like it much, either. This ghost man....he gave me orders as soon as we started to sail ...though as I said, I never saw him.

"I can't be too hard on the boys ...because I know how they feel. I feel the same, only I can't quit.

"So long, now. I got to get to work. If I don't get a crew together by tonight, we got to sail without a crew! God help me! Say some prayers for me, Grace, because I need 'em. Love.

"Your Angus."

"I'm that worried, Mr. Rodman ...seems like I ought to phone Mr. Able...."

"Let's see the envelope!" Blair tried to make out the date on the postmark, but it was blurred. The letter itself was not dated.

"I'm leaving right away for Seattle, Mrs. O'Malley...the Wanderer may still be there!"

"Thank God!"

Without waiting to say good-by to the woman, without even stopping to pick up his hat from the hall table, Blair raced to his car, started the engine and was down the street before Mrs. O'Malley had time to get to the door. The clock on the dash showed seven o'clock. Four hours to get to Seattle, less if he had luck.

At the border he paced the ground nervously, pulling out his watch and putting it back in his pocket, while officials examined his car. The five minutes he had to wait there seemed hours to him....Five minutes lost! And he was in such a hurry!

Blaine, then Bellingham! Once he got off the road and lost 15 minutes before he found the right highway again....

Once he had to stop for gas and oil, and this too, seemed wasted time to him.

Everett....then, in 25 minutes, Seattle!

When he saw the miles of waterfront and the docks built along it, as far as he could see, the lights of ships twinkling all over the bay, his heart sank within him. How could he ever find the Wanderer here, when he did not know where to look? It might take him hours to find the yacht. It might be gone!

Three o'clock in the morning. Although he had asked every place on the waterfront, Blair Rodman had found no trace of the Wanderer.

He was at Smith Cove, now.... and suddenly realized he was very hungry. His last meal had been just a sandwich in Vancouver. Seeing an all night restaurant near by, he went in and wearily climbed up on a stool at the counter. His head throbbed a little. The bandage had been off for a day...but the wound still ached a bit when he was tired.

The restaurant was at the end of a long pier...and a sleepy waiter shambled up, at last, to see what he would have.

The food was greasy and poorly cooked, but Blair bolted it down nevertheless. Hungry as he was, it didn't taste so badly.

Drinking his second cup of coffee, he called the waiter to him again.

"Is there a yacht around here laid up for repairs...the Wanderer?"

The waiter, stifling a yawn, perked up at the question.

"Why, yes, I heard that name tonight some time...."

"From whom?"

"One of the boys from the ship was in here eatin'."

"Is the boat in harbor now?"

"Couldn't say....only know I heard a guy talkin' about it. Fierce ship, he said."

"Is the man around now?"

"Couldn't say."

Blair was exasperated, and showed his impatience.

"I've been hunting the yacht since midnight. I'll pay you well if you can tell me anything about it, or where I can find the man who talked to you."

At the mention of money, the waiter awakened completely.

"Man's name is Charlie. Why'nt you try across the street in the flop house? He ast me at dinner where he could get some corn, an' I told him."

Blair handed the waiter a $10 bill, and hurried from the restaurant. There was a lodging house across the street...a tall, top heavy frame building, set back from the street, and approached by a shaky, wooden runway. The place, he saw, was set on piles.

A light was burning on the lower floor. He entered, finding himself in a big room, furnished with rickety chairs, and well supplied with cuspidors. The room was unoccupied, and after a moment, seeing a bell on the desk, he walked over and rang it several times.

A man, with a green shade over his eyes, appeared at a door back of the desk.

"What do you want?"

"I'm looking for someone," Blair answered.

The man came slowly to the desk. He was fat, and his small eyes looked at his visitor suspiciously. Blair laughed at his concern.

"I'm not a prohibition officer. Don't worry. I'm looking for a man named Charlie, a man who was aboard the Wanderer, a yacht in the harbor somewhere for repairs."

"Don't know him."

Sighing, Blair pulled a bill from his pocket and placed it on the counter.

"You don't know him?"

"Well I might, now I think back, He's a young feller, with sandy hair, ain't he?"

"I don't know. I've never seen him."

"What you want him fer?"

"I want him to take me out to the ship...or if he doesn't want to do that, to point it out to me."

The man took the bill, carefully put it in a greasy wallet, and then opened a little gate in the counter.

"Charlie's in here."

Blair followed the man through the door. At first he could see nothing, as the room was cloudy with smoke. Finally, he made out a group of men sitting at a table, evidently playing poker. Blue, red and white chips were piled in little stacks in front of each man. In a corner, several other men sat around a table, a bottle of whiskey in the center.

Plant In Quebec To Make Aerial Bombs

OTTAWA, Oct. 31—(CP).—Production of 500-pound aerial bombs will be started next February in a huge plant now being completed "somewhere in Quebec," Munitions Minister Howe announced last night.

"Normal output of the plant will be well over 100,000 bombs a year," Mr. Howe said in a statement.

"This will be the first time that aerial bombs of any kind, other than a comparatively few practice bombs, have been made in a Canadian factory."

The long-range program of the Munitions Department will eventually embrace all sizes and types of bombs for which there is a demand. They will range in weight from 40 to 1,000 pounds, and from the common high-explosive bombs to aerial projectiles capable of piercing heavy armor plate.

The Minister's statement said Canadian plants will be ready "within a very short time" to begin manufacture of a large quantity of two-inch and three-inch trench mortar bombs and .303 rifle grenades.

Plans are also under consideration for the production in Canada of anti-tank mines and depth charges. This type of munition has never before been made in Canada.

Only last Sunday the Munitions Minister said Canada now is shipping motor vehicles to the United Kingdom at the rate of 400 a day, and said some gun barrels for Bofors guns are being made in Canadian plants, with a few already going overseas.

He said "great quantities" of shells are being shipped to the United Kingdom.

Life In Prison For Husband Who Killed Wife

SWEETSBURG, Que., Oct. 31. — (CP).—Clarence Hebert, formerly of St. Albans, Vt., was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday, after he had been convicted on a manslaughter charge arising out of the death of his wife, the former Phyllis Upton of Guelph, Ont.

The jury reduced the charge from one of murder to manslaughter, after addresses by the defence and the prosecution brought the three-week trial to a close.

The jury deliberated 50 minutes before returning its verdict. Mr. Justice Cousineau, in his address to the jury, paraphrased a Biblical quotation by saying: "He who gives death by choking shall die the same way."

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Cousineau said: "Even with the verdict that was rendered I have no sympathy with you. I do not want you to meet again the members of your family, sisters and brothers, and even your two children."

Crown Counsel Paul Provost, in his final address to the jury, said that "the cord which might be placed around his (Hebert's) neck would not harm him more than his fingers around the neck of the wife whom he choked."

Before the final addresses to the jury, Defence Counsel Patrick Delaney put Hebert on the stand to testify on his own behalf. Hebert, who is 27, told of how he had made a trip to fetch his wife from an Ontario mental hospital last June, and had hitch-hiked with her back to their home at Granby, Que.

The body of Mrs. Hebert, partially burned, was found last December in a wood not far from Granby. Hebert testified that in the wood "everything happened very quickly, for when I came to my senses her eyes were popping out, and I lifted her and sat her down. Then I went to the road for help, but there was no one there.

"I came back to her and her eyes were glassy. She was dead. I took her clothes, set them afire and left. A month later I went back to the scene. The body was in a decomposed state. I set fire to it, removed the wedding ring and kept it for a souvenir."

Seven meetings during the year are an official requirement, and the girls will meet every Saturday afternoon, a demonstration on incorrect and correct posture to feature the next gathering. A collection will be taken at each meeting to help the club funds, and a fruit cake will be made and tickets sold as another means of having sufficient money on hand for current expenses and other claims.

A name for the club will be chosen at the next gathering, the girls to bring suggestions, and the leader, Mrs. Armstrong gave an interesting talk on "Why the club girl needs to stand on guard," noting that she must do her best to guard her personal health; to look after the welfare of the family and of the community; to keep mentally fit; and to be willing to do hard things every day as they should be done; to help her to recognize the rights of others, and see that she does not infringe upon them; to do things for other people, and to dream worthwhile things, and then do her best to make these dreams come true.

As a home assignment, the girls were asked to interview suitable people regarding the best books to read, and to begin preparations for making their record books. Martha Belch and Ruby Fallis sponsored the hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Thorndyke for her hospitality previous to dispersal for the day.

Handicap To UK If U.S. Fights Says Kennedy

NEW YORK, Oct 31 — (AP). — Fresh from Britain Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy urged Tuesday the re-election of President Roosevelt because "events move so quickly —the man of experience is our man of the hour."

The envoy took occasion on a $20,000 nationwide broadcast, sponsored by Mrs. Kennedy and their nine children, to declare flatly that "from the day I went to the Court of St. James until this minute I have never given to one single individual in the world any hope whatsoever that at any stage or under any conditions could the United States be drawn into the war."

He asserted that statements saying President Roosevelt was leading America into war were "false," as the President has said, and added that "the truth of the matter is that there is no more harmful step which could be taken from the viewpoint of Great Britain than our declaration of war."

To declare war, he continued, would handicap efforts to give aid to Great Britain. The problems of transporting an army to England alone would be "staggering."

"To suggest, yes, I say even to suggest, that our boys will soon be on transports is completely absurd," he said.

"If President Roosevelt were as wicked as his opponents charge, which he is not, and even if he had undisclosed commitments, which he has not, the facts are against our participation in this war."

The cost of the broadcast was $14,486, with an additional $6,200 paid to radio actors on a program normally broadcast at that time.

CHAPTER 50

ANOTHER sleepless night ahead. A night when Blair would think of nothing but Janet, and how he could find her...a night when he would make plans; only discard them in the morning when the light of day showed him how absurd they were.

He walked by the clerk's desk, but was stopped by a sudden call.

"A telephone message for you, Mr. Rodman," the clerk said. "Just came a minute or so ago. A Mrs. O'Malley..."

Without waiting to hear more, Rodman dashed for the door, leaving the astounded clerk convinced he had suddenly lost his mind. Rodman dashed to his car, and leaped in, bound for Mrs. O'Malley's home again.

He violated a dozen traffic rules in his wild ride, and drew up at the curb in front of the old house within 20 minutes.

"Oh, Mr. Rodman," the woman greeted him when she came to the door. "My, how fast you got here. I just this minute got back from next door, where I was phoning you. Of course I stopped to talk a second...but then....

"You told me to call if I heard from O'Malley. Well, no sooner had you gone than a special delivery letter came. It's from Seattle! And the queerest letter! On my word, I'm worried about O'Malley....I never did get such a letter before! Maybe you'd like to read it...seeing you are interested in the Wanderer, too. I declare!" She took the letter from her apron pocket, and handed it to him. Her habitual smile was gone from her face, now. Indeed her features were quite grave, and she looked worried.

Blair took the letter and glanced at it quickly.

"Dear Grace, here we are in Seattle, laid up for repairs. Only for a day, though, and I don't know how we are going to make it that quick. Engines damaged, though I don't know how, and me a captain...unless one of the boys jammed them up because he wanted to get off the ship.

"Ten of the boys jumped ship as soon as we made port...and I dont know whether the rest'll stay or not... Damned funny ship ...gives me the creeps, too.

"What with getting together a new crew and nobody wanting to join up with us; because the rumors got around...and fixing the engines, I'm busy...but not too busy to drop you a line as I promised.

"Mr. Able told me there was only a woman aboard...Miss Boardeaux. But there's another passenger, too, a man, though none of us has seen him yet. The boys call him the ghost man, and they're pretty scared.

"Outside the straits, two days ago, I married Miss Boardeaux to the ghost man...she pale as a flower, and him, I never did see though I heard him plain enough, answering my questions. She fainted dead away after the ceremony, so she didn't like it much, either. This ghost man...he gave me orders as soon as we started to sail ...though as I said, I never saw him.

"I can't be too hard on the boys ...because I know how they feel. I feel the same, only I can't quit.

"So long, now, I got to get to work. If I don't get a crew together by tonight, we got to sail without a crew! God help me! Say some prayers for me, Grace, because I need 'em. Love.

"Your Angus."

"I'm that worried, Mr. Rodman ...seems like I ought to phone Mr. Able..."

"Let's see the envelope!" Blair tried to make out the date on the postmark, but it was blurred. The letter itself was not dated.

"I'm leaving right away for Seattle, Mrs. O'Malley...the Wanderer may still be there!"

"Thank God!"

Without waiting to say good-by to the woman, without even stopping to pick up his hat from the hall table, Blair raced to his car, started the engine and was down the street before Mrs. O'Malley had time to get to the door. The clock on the dash showed seven o'clock. Four hours to get to Seattle, less if he had luck.

At the border he paced the ground nervously, pulling out his watch and putting it back in his pocket, while officials examined his car. The five minutes he had to wait there seemed hours to him....Five minutes lost! And he was in such a hurry!

Blaine, then Bellingham! Once he got off the road and lost 15 minutes before he found the right highway again....

Once he had to stop for gas and oil, and this too, seemed wasted time to him.

Everett....then, in 25 minutes, Seattle!

When he saw the miles of waterfront and the docks built along it, as far as he could see, the lights of ships twinkling all over the bay, his heart sank within him. How could he ever find the Wanderer here, when he did not know where to look? It might take him hours to find the yacht. It might be gone!

Three o'clock in the morning. Although he had asked every place on the waterfront, Blair Rodman had found no trace of the Wanderer.

He was at Smith Cove, now.... and suddenly realized he was very hungry. His last meal had been just a sandwich in Vancouver. Seeing an all night restaurant near by, he went in and wearily climbed up on a stool at the counter. His head throbbed a little. The bandage had been off for a day...but the wound still ached a bit when he was tired.

The restaurant was at the end of a long pier...and a sleepy waiter shambled up, at last, to see what he would have.

The food was greasy and poorly cooked, but Blair bolted it down nevertheless. Hungry as he was, it didn't taste so badly.

Drinking his second cup of coffee, he called the waiter to him again.

"Is there a yacht around here laid up for repairs...the Wanderer?"

The waiter, stifling a yawn, perked up at the question.

"Why, yes, I heard that name tonight some time...."

"From whom?"

"One of the boys from the ship was in here eatin'."

"Is the boat in harbor now?"

"Couldn't say....only know I heard a guy talkin' about it. Fierce ship, he said."

"Is the man around now?"

"Couldn't say."

Blair was exasperated, and showed his impatience.

"I've been hunting the yacht since midnight. I'll pay you well if you can tell me anything about it, or where I can find the man who talked to you."

At the mention of money, the waiter awakened completely.

"Man's name is Charlie. Why'nt you try across the street in the flop house? He ast me at dinner where he could get some corn, an' I told him."

Blair handed the waiter a $10 bill, and hurried from the restaurant. There was a lodging house across the street...a tall, top heavy frame building, set back from the street, and approached by a shaky, wooden runway. The place, he saw, was set on piles.

A light was burning on the lower floor. He entered, finding himself in a big room, furnished with rickety chairs, and well supplied with cuspidors. The room was unoccupied, and after a moment, seeing a bell on the desk, he walked over and rang it several times.

A man, with a green shade over his eyes, appeared at a door back of the desk.

"What do you want?"

"I'm looking for someone," Blair answered.

The man came slowly to the desk. He was fat, and his small eyes looked at his visitor suspiciously. Blair laughed at his concern.

"I'm not a prohibition officer. Don't worry. I'm looking for a man named Charlie, a man who was aboard the Wanderer, a yacht in the harbor somewhere for repairs."

"Don't know him."

Sighing, Blair pulled a bill from his pocket and placed it on the counter.

"You don't know him?"

"Well I might, now I think back, He's a young feller, with sandy hair, ain't he?"

"I don't know. I've never seen him."

"What you want him fer?"

"I want him to take me out to the ship...or if he doesn't want to do that, to point it out to me."

The man took the bill, carefully put it in a greasy wallet, and then opened a little gate in the counter.

"Charlie's in here."

Blair followed the man through the door. At first he could see nothing, as the room was cloudy with smoke. Finally, he made out a group of men sitting at a table, evidently playing poker. Blue, red and white chips were piled in little stacks in front of each man. In a corner, several other men sat around a table, a bottle of whiskey in the center.

Plant In Quebec To Make Aerial Bombs

OTTAWA, Oct. 31—(CP).—Production of 500-pound aerial bombs will be started next February in a huge plant now being completed "somewhere in Quebec," Munitions Minister Howe announced last night.

"Normal output of the plant will be well over 100,000 bombs a year," Mr. Howe said in a statement.

"This will be the first time that aerial bombs of any kind, other than a comparatively few practice bombs, have been made in a Canadian factory."

The long-range program of the Munitions Department will eventually embrace all sizes and types of bombs for which there is a demand. They will range in weight from 40 to 1,000 pounds, and from the common high-explosive bombs to aerial projectiles capable of piercing heavy armor plate.

The Minister's statement said Canadian plants will be ready "within a very short time" to begin manufacture of a large quantity of two-inch and three-inch trench mortar bombs and .303 rifle grenades.

Plans are also under consideration for the production in Canada of anti-tank mines and depth charges. This type of munition has never before been made in Canada.

Only last Sunday the Munitions Minister said Canada now is shipping motor vehicles to the United Kingdom at the rate of 400 a day, and said some gun barrels for Bofors guns are being made in Canadian plants, with a few already going overseas.

He said "great quantities" of shells are being shipped to the United Kingdom.

Life In Prison For Husband Who Killed Wife

SWEETSBURG, Que., Oct. 31. — (CP).—Clarence Hebert, formerly of St. Albans, Vt., was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday, after he had been convicted on a manslaughter charge arising out of the death of his wife, the former Phyllis Upton of Guelph, Ont.

The jury reduced the charge from one of murder to manslaughter, after addresses by the defence and the prosecution brought the three-week trial to a close.

The jury deliberated 50 minutes before returning its verdict. Mr. Justice Cousineau, in his address to the jury, paraphrased a Biblical quotation by saying: "He who gives death by choking shall die the same way."

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Cousineau said: "Even with the verdict that was rendered I have no sympathy with you. I do not want you to meet again the members of your family, sisters and brothers, and even your two children."

Crown Counsel Paul Provost, in his final address to the jury, said that "the cord which might be placed around his (Hebert's) neck would not harm him more than his fingers around the neck of the wife whom he choked."

Before the final addresses to the jury, Defence Counsel Patrick Delaney put Hebert on the stand to testify on his own behalf. Hebert, who is 27, told of how he had made a trip to fetch his wife from an Ontario mental hospital last June, and had hitch-hiked with her back to their home at Granby, Que.

The body of Mrs. Hebert, partially burned, was found last December in a wood not far from Granby. Hebert testified that in the wood "everything happened very quickly, for when I came to my senses her eyes were popping out, and I lifted her and sat her down. Then I went to the road for help, but there was no one there.

"I came back to her and her eyes were glassy. She was dead. I took her clothes, set them afire and left. A month later I went back to the scene. The body was in a decomposed state. I set fire to it, removed the wedding ring and kept it for a souvenir."

Royal Navy Guns Give Greeks Spur To Battle

(By JOHN A. STEVENSON.)

The apparent decision of the Fascist Government of Spain to preserve, in face of heavy pressure from its creditors, the two Axis powers, an attitude of non-belligerency was a hopeful sign that it was dubious about their ultimate victory, but even more encouraging is the resolute refusal of the Greek Government to bow to Italo-German demands.

General John Metaxas, who has ruled Greece as a dictator since 1936, is no zealot for parliamentary democracy or even human freedom, but he is also a perfervid patriot, who wants to save his country from vassalage to the international gangsters, and he must have reached the conclusion that his country, although in the near future it may have to undergo desperate trials, will in the long run benefit by making common cause with the defenders of the decencies of civilization.

In rallying the Greek people around him and winning the support of hi senemies, the Venizelists, he has doubtless been greatly helped by his compatriots' pride in the fact that their country was the cradle of the idea of individual liberty and democracy, and their grateful recollection that the British Navy, by destroying the Turkish fleet at Navarino in 1827, made sure of their emancipation from the hated Turkish yoke, and that Byron, the greatest English poet of his day, gave his life in the same cause.

So the Greeks have nerved themselves to resist the invasion of their northwestern territory by the Italian legions mustered in Albania, and their troops are making the most of the defensive advantages conferred by the rugged mountainous ramparts of this frontier. The Greeks are short of modern artillery and mechanized equipment, but they have natural aptitudes for guerrilla warfare in rough country and with the help of the insurrection which is reported to have developed among the hardy mountaineers of Albania, no lovers of their Italian masters, they may be able to fend off the direct Italian assault for some time. But if the reports are true that the Germans are transporting southward through the Balkans with the acquiescence of Bulgaria 75,000 picked troops with full mechanized equipment and supporting planes, then it is difficult to see how the Greeks can indefinitely withstand the sort of carefully prepared blitzkreig which the Germans will launch.

What the British Navy Can Do

The British are unlikely to land any expeditionary force on the mainland of Greece, when they have scarcely sufficient troops to cope with the Italian attack upon Egypt, but the topography of Greece, indented as it is with numerous gulfs and bays, already mined by the British Navy, give the latter peculiar scope for hampering and harassing an invading army from the sea. Many of the main highways run close along the coast and will be exposed to continual bombardment by ships and aircraft of the fleet arm. Moreover, the British can also easily seize the Ionian Islands lying off the west coast of Greece, which, while under the British flag from 1815 to 1864, were ruled at different times by Lord Seaton, the founder of Upper Canada College, and the great W. E. Gladstone, and also the Isle of Crete, famed in classical lore. By establishing submarine and aerial bases on these islands, they can tighten their blockade of the Adriatic Sea and render immensely more complicated and hazardous for the Italians the problem of keeping their army in Libya supplied with reinforcement, munitions and foodstuffs. However, we must be prepared to see German and Italian forces overrun Greece, seize the principal cities, and force yet another sullen people to conform to their ruthless decrees.

By such a conquest they might acquire bases for checking a vicious aerial attack upon Egypt, and particularly upon the British Army defending it, but, although they might thereby cause the latter much trouble and inconvenience, they could not win by such tactics alone the sort of decision which would give them complete mastery of the Mediterranean, and they have very slim chances of achieving it as long as the British Navy controls that sea.

The Fruits Of Its Influence

Undoubtedly, it is the British naval supremacy in the Mediterranean that has emboldened General Metaxas to his courageous resistance, and is keeping Spain from active partnership with the Axis powers; it is also preventing Marshal Graziani from making any rapid progress eastward from the Libyan frontier, and was undoubtedy a large factor in impelling M. Puaux, the French High Commissioner in Syria, to repect the demands of the so-called Italian Disarmament Commission, which has reached his bailiwick. Furthermore, it is confidence in the British Navy which is making the Turks stand firm and participate in consultations with the Greeks about military co-operation against Italy. The cold reality of the situation is that, as long as the British Fleet can range the Mediterranean at will, we have a freedom of action which is denied our enemies; we can reinforce our troops at any threatened point with comparative ease, and any enemy troops or supplies sent from the mainland of Europe will go at their grave peril.

It was left to a great American naval historian, the late Admiral A. T. Mahan, to show convincingly by his writings the tremendous part which naval power had played in the making of history, and he would today find support for his favorite thesis that the American people should never be jealous of British naval strength, because it might prove a mighty bulwark of their liberties.

Secret Italian Torpedo Flops

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 31.— The first apparent use of a "secret weapon" by Italian naval officers was reported yesterday.

British naval authorities announced that the Italians had tried unsuccessfully to torpedo a ship in the harbor here "with a special device." The statement said:

"This morning an abortive attempt was made by Italian naval officers to torpedo a ship in the harbor with a special device. One torpedo exploded harmlessly at the harbor entrance, and another ran ashore in Spanish territory."

MADRID, Oct. 31 — The Mencheta News Agency reported that a strange craft looking like the hybrid offspring of a torpedo and a launch was washed up on the beach near La Linea yesterday.

Observers believed that the object was a piloted torpedo, often called a "suicide" torpedo. It was about ten feet long and had space at a steering gear for one man.

Equipped with a propeller and hand brake, the craft carried a quantity of gasoline. The motor still was running when it was found. A military guard was posted about the device.

NonPartisanRule Rejected By Social Credit

WINNIPEG, Oct. 31—(CP)—Proposals of Premier John Bracken of Manitoba for a non-partisan government have been rejected by the Manitoba Social Credit League.

The rejection of the proposals followed an address by Hon. W. A. Fallow, the Alberta Minister of Public Works.

He voiced opposition to Premier Bracken's proposals, and said:

"For the life of me, I can't see what they hope to accomplish by it, or how this will aid the war effort."

Mr. Fallow said that a good business executive never looks for a partner when prospects are good.

"When principle has to be sacrificed for political expediency, decay has already begun to set in."

An amendment to the resolution urging coalition in matters pertaining to the war effort, was ruled out of order by the convention chairman.

S. E. Rogers, leader of the Social Credit group in the Legislature, told the convention that the party's identity would be retained if the invitation to join the government was accepted.

School Age Coat

By ALICE ALDEN

LET THE youngest deb pick her own winter coat. This will make her feel pleasantly grown-up and help develop her style sense. But if it is her first shopping tour, guide her to a coat like the one above.

Gloria Jean, young Hollywood starlet, chose this model and it should delight the heart of any school girl. It is made of water repellent fabric which is as soft and furry as a teddybear. Its styling is that of a princess flared reefer with double-breasted fastening of blue buttons to match the Bermuda blue material.

The convertible neckline has a collar that is faced in a darker shade of blue velvet. With this is worn a perky Scotch hat of matching blue with a navy blue grosgrain band and a gay feather. This is the sort of coat that will go to the head of the class during school hours and will be a real protection on long winter afternoons when younger sister forgets her dignity and reverts to childhood and starts playing in the snow just like the "little kids."

They See World In Dining Room

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31—(CP).—"Wait table and see the world" might be the motto of many a young woman who does a great deal of travelling without a great deal of money.

Side by side with the well-to-do who move to mountain or seashore in the summer and to Florida or Southern California in the winter, there moves another stream of traffic. It consists of the waitresses in the resort hotel trade.

Vivian Berg likes the circuit so well that she gave up a school-teaching career for it. With her friend, Ruth Willis, she puts in the season at swell hotels just as she wishes. And she believes she has just as good a time as the paying guests.

Jane Walker told how they spend every afternoon on the beach, and if they had to go back to the hotel for dinner—well, didn't everybody else also? A resort hotel waitress, she reports, seldom is detained after nine o'clock and is able to go out and have a good time like anybody else.

Some of the national parks employ college girls as waitresses for the summer vacations and encourage them to mingle with the guests when they are off shift.

It's not surprising that you're constipated!

If you suffer from constipation to the point that you feel weary, depressed and worn out — it is time to question yourself!

What have you eaten lately? Meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? It is not surprising then that you're constipated. Your diet lacks "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean quantity, but a kind of food that is not completely assimilated and leaves a soft "mass" in the bowels that helps the bowel movement.

If this is your case, the solution is tasty Kellogg's All-Bran, every morning for breakfast. It contains the necessary "bulk" and Vitamin B_1, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink lots of water and get back your zest for life! All-Bran is made in London, Canada by Kellogg. At all grocers.

Mrs. Sheldon Huffman of 192 Parkhill Road was hostess, and receiving with her were Mrs. J. W. Pierce, president of the W.M.S., and Mrs. V. W. Skitch, president of the Baby Band. Vases of bronze chrysanthemums and bittersweet were used throughout the rooms, and the table arranged with a black and orange glass bowl filled with fruit, and black candles in pumpkin face holders, was a reminder of the festivity of the occasion.

Tea was poured by Mrs. G. S. Easton and Mrs. S. D. Carver. Mrs. J. Lynch was general convener, and assisting to serve were Mrs. F. W. Horton, Mrs. J. Krogh, Mrs. W. H. Magee, Mrs. R. Walton. Mrs. S. Peryer was hostess in the living room. Miss Barbara Huffman was the pretty little door attendant. Tea cups were read by Mrs. L. Groombridge.

Ladies' Aid Tea Is Well Attended

Yellow and bronze chrysanthemums were delightfully arranged throughout the rooms at the home of Mrs. J. H. Jamison, Monaghan Road, for a well-attended tea on Wednesday afternoon of the West-end Group of St. Paul's Church Ladies' Aid. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. H. G. McKenzie, president, and Mrs. Charles Lacheur, group leader.

Presiding at the tea table, which was attractively arranged with a Scotch ecru lace cloth, a bowl of chrysanthemums, and green and yellow tapers in crystal candelabra, were Mrs. A. T. Barr and Mrs. D. W. Clark. Mrs. W. A. Burrell was tea convener, and tea room hostesses were Mrs. T. F. McArthur, Mrs. O. A. Moore, Mrs. W. J. Gordon and Mrs. H. C. Sherwood. Mrs. David Miller was treasurer for the afternoon.

Fine Feathers Raise Rumors

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—(CP).—American women have to take care what feathers they wear on their hats, if they want to avoid trouble.

The plumage on fall headgear, the American bald eagle and the Audubon Society, protector of bird life, are all mixed up in the scrap.

This is how it started:

One evening in the fall of '39 a pretty, blue-eyed New Yorker opened the box containing her smart new hat, speared with a beautiful long feather—dark and mottled at the tip, white at the base. She put it on carefully and showed it to her husband, expecting applause. That wasn't what she got.

Her husband, Richard H. Pough, member of the Audubon Society staff, took one horrified look and said: "That looks like an eagle feather. Please take it off."

What he was thinking of was not the way his wife's hat looked, but of the pitched battle the Audubon Society had waged at the turn of the century against killing non-game birds.

It was a battle that resulted in a tariff on imported wild bird plumage for millinery and a flock of state laws protecting wild birds.

Battle Renewed.

The battle died down after that because such fancy plumage virtually disappeared from women's hats. Now Mrs. Pough's feather has started it all over again.

The society has started a campaign urging women to ask their milliners for assurance the feathers they buy are within the law. These are the barnyard feathers—coque, turkey, pigeon, guinea hen, ostrich and the like.

Protected birds, besides the eagle, include condors, birds of paradise, snowy and barn owls, crested screamers, great bustards, storks, certain pheasants and herons (which yield egrets).

Northern Ireland may turn all golf courses into sheep pastures.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Work of Y.W. In 53 Lands Outlined by Miss Rouse

Miss Ruth Rouse, World President of the Y.W.C.A., who launched the drive for $8,000 by the local Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday night.

How the World Y.W.C.A., operative in fifty-three countries, is meeting the present war emergency was told by Miss Ruth Rouse, World President, when she spoke before a large campaign dinner Wednesday night in the Y.W.C.A. She pointed out the glorious opportunities Canadian women have to serve, and said that there was a personal responsibility for all—a service which could not be accomplished without individual and unselfish sacrifice.

Miss Rouse was introduced by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, president of the Y.W.C.A. Board, who paid tribute to the World President's rare qualities of leadership, and "a faith that triumphs over all"

The first Y.W.C.A. was organized in Britain eighty-five years ago to establish hostels for the nurses who were going to the Crimea with Florence Nightingale, Miss Rouse said, and explained that to help women and girls in a national emergency has been the tradition of the Y.W.C.A. ever since.

In broad lines Miss Rouse painted the work of the Y.W.C.A. in China, France, Japan, West Africa and other countries—an international work in which millions of women were actively involved—a work the Y.W.C.A. has sustained through the years of peace and in the troublous times of war. Of interest were her remarks in connection with the International Red Cross, which has warmly commended Y.W.C.A. work, and with which the "Y" has worked harmoniously in important undertakings.

Referring to what the organization was doing in the present crisis, Miss Rouse said that the Y.W.C.A. was maintaining the links with other countries unbroken so far as was humanly possible. Although travelling has become more and more difficult, Y.W.C.A. secretaries were doing notable work in keeping channels of connection open with other countries.

"When Germany invaded Poland we saw thousands of women among the 50,000 Polish refugees who fled to Rumania and Hungary," said Miss Rouse. "For these the 'Y' established hostels and huts where material help, and moral and spiritual comfort were available." Refugee work of Rumanian and Hungary paled into significance, however, when compared with that of France, capitulation of which brought in its wake 11,000,000 refugees, including hundreds of thousands of women and girls. Miss Rouse spoke also of countries "in the silence"—Norway, Denmark, Holand, etc., as well as Japan, from which little is being heard, but where "women are lifting up their hearts to God in hope."

"Canada, like Great Britain, is faced with opportunity for service," Miss Rouse remarked as she spoke appreciatively of the Association's developments here of hostess houses in connection with military camps.

The work of the "Y" among the hundreds of thousands of British women in uniform is a revelation. The A.T.S. (Auxiliary Territorial Service) has an enrolment of some 80,000, and there are the WRENS (Naval), the WRAFS (Air Force), the vast army, "which is taking the place of the men on farms"; the girls in munitions and those in transport service; the ambulance drivers and the various nursing auxiliaries like the VADS—"not to speak of the army of women in government offices who have moved away from London and other large cities," Miss Rouse said.

"The supreme mission of the Y.W.C.A. in the world today," submitted Miss Rouse, "is to down the spirit of bitterness and hatred; to release the healing stream that is to mean the healing of the nation," and challenged that "all of us have before us an opportunity to let loose this healing stream."

A welcome on behalf of the Board of Directors and Campaign Committee was extended to the canvassers present, who numbered over 150, by Mrs. Kenner. "The Y.W.C.A., along with similar institutions, stands for those very principles of democracy and christianity which we are fighting for in this war," Mrs. Kenner said in a brief address which outlined the necessity of the present campaign for $8,000 with which carry on the work of the Association. "If we let these fail, or even temporarily wane," she said, "then any dearly bought victory overseas will be in vain."

Mrs. Kenner told of the formation of the Peterboorugh Y.W.C.A. by a group of local women who realized its value, and closed with the campaign slogan, "The girls of today are looking to the 'Y,' the 'Y' is looking to us—let us not fail them."

Thanks to Miss Rouse and the soloist, Miss Margaret Dickson, who led in the singing of "There'll Always Be An England," and "Wings Over the Navy," with Gwen Craw at the piano, was graciously expressed by Mrs. M. Swanston and Mrs. Paige Rowell.

G. A. Gillespie, chairman of the Advisory Board, was chairman for the dinner. And encouraging report for the men's special names committee, given by Ross Dobbin, brought a round of applause. The banquet was served by the residence, and residence girls assisted to serve.

The Stars Say . . .

For Friday, November 1

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Great achievements and opportunities are foreshown by the powerful and lively lunar transits governing this day. Important projects in connection with influential organizations, political, diplomatic, humane, educational or philanthropic seem to start off under splendid impetus for unusual success, nevertheless there are portents of such fine prospects being undermined by sudden, wild, impulsive and tricky circumstances of most devastating character. With these erratic moves eliminated and strategy used there is every hope of success.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of outstanding openings for definite success and achievements in connection with large groups centered on public objectives or advanced spiritual or humanitarian ends. This may be negated if not wholly vanquished by indulgence in impulsive, untenable, or eccentric behavior, perhaps of a startling or sensational nature. With restraint, sound and workable ideas there may be surprising benefits attended by social and personal gratifications.

A child born on this day may have great depths of character with lofty aspirations and versatile talents, but such may be subject to spurts of whimsical, queer or eccentric actions to frustrate splendid prospects.

MARRIED COUPLES SHOULD KEEP ABREAST MENTALLY

When One Outgrows the Other Too Rapidly Then Troubles Comes The Door and Love Wanes

The greatest unhappiness in marriage is caused neither by the philanderer, nor the drunkard, nor the nagger, nor the virago, but by either the husband or the wife outgrowing the other. And the tragedy is all the more pitiful because it is one for which no one is to blame unless it is Mother Nature. Neither one planned it. Neither one desired it. Neither one knows when they parted company and one began to climb to the heights, while the other stayed put in the low grounds. When they married they never doubted that they were perfectly suited to each other and would make a thoroughly congenial couple. The girl was pretty and sweet and gay. The boy was good-looking and energetic, and full of the high spirits of youth. They liked to dance and listen to the radio and go to football games together. They had a physical attraction for each other and were certain that theirs would be one of the matches made in heaven. So they married in all good faith and then, somehow, the girl became a woman and the boy developed into a man. And there began that slow and insidious process of growth that neither could help that separated those who lived daily side by side farther than if oceans rolled between them, and that made their marriage a death in life.

Sometimes it is the wife who outgrows her husband. He stays, mentally and spiritually, just the nice boy she married, kind and generous, devoted to the wife and the children, and a good provider, but with no interests outside of his business and the stock market and the baseball score; while she has read and studied and thought and become a highly intelligent and cultivated woman. He is no more of a companion for her than a child is for a grown-up, and her marriage is one long endurance test of how much boredom a human being can stand.

When Interests Diverge

Many of the scandals into which married women get themselves, much of their peevishness and fretfulness, and the sheer brutality with which some of them treat their husbands is to be attributed to the fact that they are adult wives of boy husbands, and that they are as lonely in their own drawing rooms as if they were marooned on a desert island with nobody to speak to who talked their language.

It is, however, oftener the husband who outgrows the wife rather than the other way about. The callow boy who was a suitable enough husband for little Prettikins develops into brilliant and successful man, while little Prettikins stays just as she was, only not so little and not so pretty.

Nothing is commoner than to see a scintillating, poised man of the world dragging around with him a dumb little cluck of a wife to an accompaniment of whispered "Why did he ever marry her?" A question which must find its echo in his own heart, for where he has gone she cannot follow.

She cannot enter into his hopes and plans and aspirations. She cannot enter into the things that are his life. He asks her for bread and she gives him a stone.

And the suffering, the loneliness, the absence of companionship, the unity, the lack of all that really makes marriage worth while has to be borne by the wife as well as the husband when a man outgrows his wife, for she, too, is desolate and miserable who might have been happy if she was married to a man who was as commonplace as she is.

Don't Marry Too Young

But not much can be done. Sometimes if a couple perceive the danger that threatens their marriage and make an effort to keep in step, they can do so, but not always. For some of us are born groundlings, while others are destined to become the masts of tall ships.

But this common tragedy of husbands and wives outgrowing each other, at least, serve as a warning to undeveloped youngsters to put off marrying until they have come to their full stature, and not to be fooled into thinking that a boy and girl must inevitably develop along the same lines if they are married. It is just a matter of pure luck of they do.

Don't Impost On Friendship

Dear Miss Dix—What do you think about the promiscuous giving of letters of introduction? I live in a large city and am a man of some prominence, with a wide acquaintance all over the country. I have dozens of friends whom I like very much, but they victimize me by giving letters of introduction to me to all of their friends who visit my city. There is hardly a day that some man doesn't bob in with a letter of introduction asking me to show this perfect stranger some attention while he is in my town. I find this an intolerable tax on my time and purse.—JOHN.

ANSWER.—Shake, John. I belong to your lodge of sorrow. Indeed, I dare say that my sufferings are greater than yours, because women are more fluent letter writers than men, and even more gifted at passing the buck than men are.

Apparently it never occurs to those who give letters of introduction that those to whom they so cheerfully pass on their social debts have just about as many friends of their own as they can manage to entertain, and that they have as many calls upon their time and money as they can respond to, or that they are not running free employment agencies, for they expect them to get them unemployed acquaintances and relatives jobs, as well as entertain them.

There are no greater pests than the writers of letters of introduction, but I know of no way to stop them. There will always be those free-hearted, spontaneous enthusiasts who when they hear that somebody is going to Rabbit Track or Paris will say:

"Oh, my old friend Bob Robinson, or Sally Snooks lives there, and I'll just give you a letter of introduction," and that puts it up to Bob or Sally to do their entertaining for them.

DOROTHY DIX.

For Country and Campus

By ALICE ALDEN

WHETHER you are an undergraduate, a constant weekender or the proud possessor of a country place, you'll want something bright and casual to wear on these crisp Autumn days.

The outfit shown in the above photograph is worn by Constance Moore and can be utilized for double duty. With the jacket it is perfect for the open spaces and for spectator sports. Without the coat the dress can be worn in town for almost all daytime occasions under a coat.

The dress is a bagpipe plaid wool of lovely wine, green and Indian earth with a green leather belt, a high neckline and a full skirt for comfortable walking on city streets or wooded lanes. The jacket is a boxy double-breasted model with an attached hood. It is the same color green as the belt and is lined with plaid to match the frock.

"Charlie!" the fat man bawled.

A youth at the corner table waved his hand, and Blair walked toward him.

"You Charlie?"

"Yeh. What d'ye want?"

Blair saw the boy's eyes were bleared, and the muscles of his face sagged. Very apparently, he had had too much to drink.

"You on the Wanderer?"

The boy looked frightened.

"Who're you? You're not goin' take me back to that...."

"No, no, but I want your help. I'm trying to find the girl aboard ...and I don't know what the yacht looks like, nor where it is. If you'll tell me all you know about it, and point it out to me, there'll be something in it for you."

"How much?" Charlie asked, leering cunningly. Charlie was not so drunk he didn't know what he was doing.

"How much do you want?"

"Ten bucks."

Say Good-by to Money Worries

Juggling family finances, putting off bills from month to month—that's the fix you get into when you have no safeguard for your spending. And the worst of not paying bills is that you fall more and more behind.

There's only one cure—a budget! Wise planning can call a halt to run-away bills, even give a margin for pleasanter living.

First, keep a record of all expenditures for one month to see where your spending has gone beyond the ideal budget.

Take your rent bill. By cutting it down to the safe 20 per cent. of your income that your budget recommends you may save a large sum monthly. But, remember gasoline and carfare are items to be considered with rent.

Food bills, too, may have been taking more than their fair 30 per cent. By buying foods in season, taking advantage of "specials," you can eat just as well for lots less.

With the money saved you easily pay back debts and soon you can use your new margin for things you want—a home, fun.

From our 32-page booklet learn how to budget your income according to your needs. Gives pointers on buying, saving, getting what you want. Includes ruled pages for a year's accounts.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO BUDGET AND BUY FOR BETTER LIVING to The Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

AN INTRICATE FORMULA

TO MOST good players, a double squeeze is an intricate enough proposition to understand. Those who learn its component parts, so that they can build one themselves, are not always able to recognize when an opponent is trying to build one. And those who get so that they can usually spot such an effort by the opposition are not necessarily familiar with the ways to thwart it. Sometimes it cannot be stopped, but if a player knows the formula for beating it, he may be able to grasp his chance.

Declarers at two tables of a duplicate game tried to make their contracts by means of double squeezes, playing the tricks in the same order. One made the double squeeze, but the other was thwarted. In each case, the first nine tricks went the same—two hearts, four spades, the diamond K, the club A and K. Each left the diamond A-7, heart 9 and club 8 in the dummy, and in his own hand the spade 9-7, diamond 10 and club 10.

To this point, the defenders also played alike, West holding his heart J, diamond Q-8 and club Q, and East his diamond J-9 and club J-6. But when South played his spade 9 to the tenth trick, the West players chose different discards. At one table, West tossed off his club Q and East, of course, his club 6. The declarer then played his spade 7 and the double squeeze was on. West had to keep his heart to guard the dummy's 9, so threw his diamond 8. The heart was then tossed from dummy. East now was squeezed between the club and his two diamonds, so declarer got the last two tricks.

At the other table, when the spade 9 was played on the tenth trick, West discarded his diamond 8 and kept the club Q and heart J. Thus he protected the singletons of the enemy's two holdings, so that his partner then could safely guard the diamond doubleton. As a consequence, declarer had to lose the final trick, no matter what he did.

An Unusual Story

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP).—Sadie Johns, 28, of the Six Nations Indian Reserve, Brantford, lost an assault case against George Hughes, 32, London, to-day and was herself sentenced to 30 days in jail when she pleaded guilty of vagrancy.

Both the woman and Hughes were arrested early this morning, after she had run into the street clad only in a man's overcoat, and had telephoned police. She charged Hughes with assaulting her in his home.

Commenting Miss Johns' story was "unusual," Magistrate D. B. Menzies dismissed the charge against Hughes.

Feels Like A Different Man Since Syntona Built Him Up

This Man Suffered 10 Years With Gastritis, Heartburn, Bloating and Acidity

BACKACHE AND RHEUMATIC PAINS ALSO OVERCOME

MR. ARCHIBALD McKINLAY

"It is a real pleasure to tell you how much your medicine has done for me, and I hope other sufferers will read this and benefit also. After years of misery, I feel just like a new man to-day." This statement was given only a few days ago by Mr. Archibald McKinlay, 4 Kent Street, Hamilton, Ont.

"My appetite was poor and whenever I ate my stomach would get bloated I couldn't get comfortable for hours. I would belch hot, sour liquids, and often I used to suffer with heartburn so badly I would have to get up several times and take a dose of soda. Then, in the mornings, I felt so sick I couldn't eat breakfast. The acids went all through my system and I developed rheumatic pains and backache.

"For fully ten years I tried every remedy I knew of, but I just seemed to be getting worse and I didn't think anything would help my stomach any more. Then one day, my daughter got me a treatment of Syntona and I began taking it. Well, the way it went to work on my system was wonderful. I could just feel myself improving daily. Now all that bloating and acidity is gone and I can eat a good meal and enjoy every mouthful. I sleep the whole night through and I get up feeling rested and happy. Those pains in my back and limbs left me and I don't get headaches like I used to. Every word of this is true and I will be glad to verify it to any person who wants to ask me."

If you feel fatigued, irritable, nervous or rundown; if you suffer with stomach troubles, acidity or aches and pains, make up your mind to begin taking this pure herbal compound to-day. Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Thain To Die On Gallows OnJanuary14

Man Pleads Innocence Prior To Sentence By Mr. Justice MacKay

(Special to The Examiner.)

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 1.—Frederick Thain, 46-year-old Rawdon farmer, will pay with his life for the murder of Arnold Wellman, aged Rawdon township resident, whose shotgun-blasted body was found with that of his wife, Nancy Wellman, in their farm buildings, 25 miles north of this city on January 31.

Thain was found guilty by a Supreme Court jury here Thursday afternoon after 2½ hours deliberation. The verdict culminated one of the shortest murder trials in the history of Ontario.

The convicted man was sentenced to death by Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, immediately following the verdict. He will be hanged here on Tuesday, January 14, 1941.

Asked by the judge if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, Thain, erect, and a ghost of the now famous smile playing over his features, replied, "Before God, I am not guilty."

"Have you anything else to say?" asked Justice MacKay.

"I say in front of everyone here—if none will believe me, then God above will be my witness. I wish to thank your Lordship, witnesses and court officials for a fair trial. I have nothing else to say," Thain replie.

In his address to the prisoner, prior to passing of sentence, Justice MacKay told Thain, "after a fair trial and able defence, you have been found guilty of the wilful murder of Arnold Wellman. It is not for me to say anything to aggravate the terrible position in which you are placed. It was a cruel, brutal and inhuman murder."

A PECULIAR, torpedo-shaped apparatus used by the Italians Wednesday in an attempt to destroy shipping at Gibraltar was taken to the Spanish naval arsenal at San Fernando today for further study.

The apparatus was found on the Spanish coast near Gibraltar, but there was no trace of persons who might have manipulated it.

FDR Skidding US Near War WithAxis-Gayda

ROME, Nov. 1 (AP) — Virginio Gayda accused President Roosevelt and his supporters today of creating an "ideological political conflict which is skidding toward belligerency between the United States and the axis."

The editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, who often reflects official Fascist opinion, said he was answering a recent speech of the United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull.

Mr. Hull's speech, he said, "pretended again to change the elementary truth of the facts, inventing an axis menace to America." He invited "these bellicose Americans" to furnish "one single, concrete, documented proof" of this menace.

He claimed, however, that Italy was not interested in the outcome of the United States' presidential election.

(Mr. Hull, speaking last Saturday night, described the rulers of Germany, Italy and Japan as "would-be conquerors" engaged in a relentless attempt to reduce mankind to "a master-and-slave relationship among nations and individuals, maintained by brute force."

(They "adhere to no geographic lines....on their programs of invasion" and "there can be nothing more dangerous for our nation than for us to assume that the avalanche of conquest could under no circumstances reach any vital portion of this hemisphere," Mr. Hull asserted.)

Cites Cordell Hull

Gayda followed these charges with citations of speeches and actions of Mr. Hull, President Roosevelt, Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury; William Bullitt, ambassador to France; William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kas.) Gazette, senators and other leaders.

President Roosevelt, he charged, concerned himself with the internal affairs of Italy and Germany, in-

No TurkMove In War Just Now

Relations With Reds Turn Friendly; Talks On With U.K.

ANKARA, Turkey, Nov. 1—(AP)—President Ismet Inoun informed the National Assembly today that Turkey will not enter the war now, but is studying the situation in the Mediterranean in collaboration with Great Britain.

The key to the decision seemed to observers to lie in the president's statement that Turkey's relations with Soviet Russia "are now taking a friendly turn" after "passing through a critical stage" at the time of the Finnish-Russian war.

He reiterated that Turkey will fight instantly if attacked and declared: "We remain loyal to our friendships, obligations and ties of collaboration."

"Our neighbors, the Greeks, unfortunately have been called into the war and we, with our ally, Britain, are studying the situation," said President Inonu. "Our country has decided to defend our independence, security and land. This is the greatest pride of our nation and no change has been made in our foreign policy. We have no external ambitions....

"The war is spreading to a point where the whole world may be involved. Several countries are under foreign occupation and it appears that this phase may last a long time....

"The youth of the Turkish nation of today will make the future wonder at its heroism....In an age in which it is possible for only heroes to live. The Turkish nation advances toward the future and security."

The speech was interpreted to mean that Turkey has decided to await developments before going to war. These developments might be a direct attack on Turkey or entrance of Bulgaria into the Greek-Italian war on the side of the Axis.

Before he spoke, Inonu had conferred with Maj.-Gen. Arthur Smith, chief of staff of the British Near East command.

Tattles The Reds

The president spoke warmly of Soviet Russia.

"Soviet policy in the face of a dark world is one of the greatest security," he said.

Inonu told the assembly, nevertheless, that nothing is being spared to "complete the needs of the republic's army."

While he talked to Gen. Smith, the Turkish premier, Refik Saydam,

Canuck Warship Saves 118 Off 2 Wrecks, 2 Days

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 (CP)—A Canadian destroyer has made two rescues in British waters, Navy Minister Macdonald announced in a statement issued at his press conference today.

In two days, he said, one destroyer (unnamed for reasons of security) rescued 118 persons from the S.S. Eurymedon and S.S. Sulairia, both torpedoed by German submarines.

The Eurymedon, struck by two torpedoes which killed 34 of those aboard, stayed afloat for three days.

The Sulairia sank within 12 minutes after being hit by one torpedo.

Those rescued included a five-months-old Dutch baby who was put to sleep in the commanding officer's bunk on board the destroyer.

An account of the rescue was taken from the journal of Lieut. Alfred Tate, a Toronto newspaperman, now a photographic officer with the destroyers.

The baby was carried off the destroyer by a sailor when port was reached and was lustily cheered by the ship's company, Lieut. Tate wrote.

"A smile came to the lips of the mother—with a great black eye and a swollen lip—who followed her beloved baby ashore," he said. "Her

All Attackers Return From Italy

Ship Sunk Off Norway But Weather Spares Germany

LONDON, Nov. 1—(CP).—Royal Air Force bombers attacked the great industrial centre of Naples last night.

An Air Ministry communique today announced "a successful attack on oil tanks and other objectives" at the Italian port, but did not disclose the base of the British bombers. However, since it specified that they were of the bomber command, naval planes were ruled out.

Malta, 350 miles from Naples, is the nearest base for land planes.

(British bombing of the Italian mainland previously has been centred on such northern industrial cities as Milan and Turin, carried out by bombers crossing the Alps from Britain.

Naples, however, is about 1,000 miles from England and slightly more than that from Gibraltar.

(The Italian high command said "slight damage" was caused in the Naples suburbs of Bagnoli and Pomigliano d'Arco. The former is the site of some of Italy's largest steel plants and the latter of airplane factories, testing fields and laboratories.)

In a flight over southern Norway coastal waters, Hudson bombers scored a direct hit yesterday on a camouflaged 3,000-ton German supply ship, the Air Ministry news service stated. After a direct hit amidship, white smoke poured out of the vessel and part of its cargo was seen in the water.

Ground defences on the German-held coast and Nazi fighters resisted the British pilots, the news service declared, and one bomber failed to return after it went on to attack a German anti-aircraft vessel.

Another group of British bombers scored a direct hit on a merchant ship off the coast of German-occupied Norway yesterday during day-

Rome Claims 35 Mile Sector Of 79 Villages Overrun; Hint Drive Renewed In Egypt

Italian Reports Differ With Greek Claim Of No Advance

ROME, Nov. 1—(AP).— Fascist sources claimed to-day the seizure of a populous area of Greece 35 miles within the country and reported an apparent resumption of Italy's offensive in Egypt.

Stefani, the Italian news and propaganda agency, claimed the Italians in the Ioannina sector had conquered a northern district containing 79 villages.

(The Greeks maintained all Italian attempts to advance had been stopped.)

The high command merely said the invaders of Epirus, extreme north-west Greece, had reached a cross-road at Kalibaki, an unmapped village which was not precisely located.

About 100 miles inside Egypt's western desert, Italian motorized columns aided by planes attacked British forces, the high command claimed. Fascist sources said this could be interpreted "unofficially" as a resumption of the Italian offensive which has been stalled for weeks inside Egypt.

(As Ioannina, also known as Janina, is only 35 miles from the border in a straight line, the Stefani claim would indicate either that the city now is under Fascist siege or that the Italians are not advancing on the shortest line.)

The Stefani report said that the area so far in Italian hands is known as the sub-Prefecture of Silati and contains 35,000 inhabitants.

German Activity In Rumania Scares Bulgaria

SOFIA, BULGARIA, Nov. 1.—(AP).— Indications of increasing German military activity in Rumania—nearest base for any Nazi attack upon Italian-invaded Greece—stirred fears here to-day of complications which might involve this country in the war.

As the Italian offensive against Greece entered its fifth day without evidence of notable success, unofficial reports from Rumania said the German armed forces there had reached a new high level of strength.

Although given no credence by government officials, rumors persisted that "German troops may go through here within 10 days" en route to the Greek border.

Sharing attention with the rumors of possible German intervention in the Italian-Greek conflict was Turkey's attitude toward the struggle, which President Ismet Inonu was expected to clarify to-day in an address opening the Turkish National Assembly.

Balkan observers generally believed that Inonu would affirm Turkey's non-belligerency, although the Istanbul newspaper Vatan said the Turkish people "will not hesitate to assume their great historical responsibility if the duty is imposed upon them."

The Bulgarian Government adhered strictly to a hands-off policy, making no move to take advantage of the Greek plight by pressing its long-standing claims for territorial revisions.

Ace Mountain Experts Artillery, Planes Used In Major Push

BELGRADE, Nov. 1—(AP).—Italian troops supported by heavy mountain artillery and warplanes were reported today to have launched a major attack on Greek positions in ancient Pisoderia Pass at the northern end of the Albanian frontier.

The drive, coming from the direction of the Albanian town of Koritza, apparently had as its immediate objective the Greek city of Phlorina, about 30 miles from the frontier.

Yugoslav military experts cited Phlorina as a strategic traffic centre.

Highways lead out of the city to the south and east—the latter providing an effective route to Salonika, Aegean port believed to be the ultimate goal of the Italians in the north.

The thunder of guns on the battlefront was said to be incessant as the Greeks, operating from positions blasted out of solid rock, directed a point-blank fire along the mountain road over which the Italians were attempting to advance.

Italian officers experienced in mountain warfare in Ethiopia were reported leading the Fascist forces.

A Costly Drive.

It was believed here the Italians would have to pay a high price to capture Phlorina, but it was pointed out that if they achieved this objective they would be able to bring their motorized equipment into play for a push deeper into

French General Escapes Empress

LONDON, Nov. 1 — (CP). — General Le Gentilhomme, who commanded the Allied forces in French and British Somaliland at Jibuti until the French-German armistice, was among the passengers rescued from the liner Empress of Britain when she was bombed and sunk by the enemy last Saturday, it was disclosed to-day.

The General joined the Free French forces of Gen. Charles De Gaulle in London on Tuesday.

Gen. Le Gentilhomme apparently was one of the "small number of military personnel" aboard the liner mentioned in the official announcement of the sinking. There were also "a small number of military families" among the 643 persons on board, of whom 598 were rescued.

8 U.S. Destroyers Rush Out To Sea

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 1.—(AP).—The entire United States' neutrality patrol fleet operating out of Key West was at sea on a secret mission to-day and navy officials here and at Washington declined comment on the sudden sailings.

Three destroyers— the Overton, Bainbridge and Sturtenvant—took on fuel and supplies yesterday and departed under sealed orders, perhaps to join the five destroyers, a seaplane tender and six navy bombing planes which left in haste Tuesday

The Miami Herald said it had "learned unofficially" that a concentration of United States' sea power is underway near St. Lucia, one of the Caribbean air and naval bases leased by the United States from Great Britain.

St. Lucia is about 25 miles south of Martinique, French-owned island.

British warships have kept a close watch on Martinique since the French capitulation because an aircraft carrier with American planes aboard and a cruiser are anchored there.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 1 — (AP). — Chinese soldiers forced into service by the Japanese revolted and drove the invaders from Shaoking, famed wine-making centre in northern Chekiang Province, which the Chinese announced they recaptured early this week, first foreign reports from the area said today.

Foreign missionary circles in both Shaoking and Hangchow gave this first independent confirmation of Chinese claims of uprising by "puppet" troops during intensification of hostilities in the last two weeks.

Shaoking is 90 miles airline from Shanghai, 31 miles from Hangchow.

Chinese also reported a revolt in the Pootung region, across the Whangpoo River from Shanghai, where 600 soldiers were said to have deserted the Japanese and joined guerrillas attacking the invaders.

Mission sources in Shaoking said all missionaries were safe, although the Japanese, before retreating after the short-lived occupation,

8 Cars Wrecked In 3 Smashes

7 Hurt, 1 Jailed, Cop's Cycle Ruined, On New Road

TORONTO, Nov. 1 — (CP). — Seven persons were injured and damage to motor vehicles was estimated at $10,000 in three highway accidents which occurred on the Queen Elizabeth Way west of here early to-day. Eight motor cars and a Provincial constable's motorcycle were wrecked in the mishaps. The injured were brought to hospital here.

One driver was arrested. Police said three persons involved "disappeared" during the confusion of the accidents which took place on a short stretch of road.

Hilton King, 23, of Toronto, was taken to hospital with serious head injuries after he collided with a west-bound vehicle. A passenger in King's car, Mrs. Betty Newman, 30, of Toronto, is in serious condition with head and back injuries. Two passengers in the other car, Rose Oporroski, and her sister, Elizabeth, both of Toronto, received cuts about the head and arms. Name of the car's driver was not learned.

While the wreckage was being removed, a third car, proceeding west, swerved to avoid one of the machines still on the highway and struck Provincial Constable Stanley Batt's motorcycle, parked 10 feet from the pavement, then continued along the shoulder of the road to collide with a parked car. The motorcycle, a new one, was tossed to the other side of the highway and reduced to a pile of scrap.

Private Fred Battersby, of London, a member of the R.C.O.C., sustained cuts on the head and ear in the second accident.

Two members of the R.C.A.F., stationed at the Manning Depot at Toronto, escaped death in a terrific head-on collision.

Aircraftman G. Burnham of Hamilton sustained head injuries and a fractured foot. His companion and driver of the car, Corporal Alfred Cecil Patstone, Hamilton, suffered deep lacerations on the nose

While the political big guns opened up for the final week of a campaign that has proved one of the most heated in a country noted for its political warmth, the two feminine antagonists supplied a lighter touch. Miss Thompson is energetically pro-Roosevelt; Miss Boothe supports Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican nominee.

Laval Out To Swing France Behind Axis, Deal on Prisoners

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Gradual release of 1,000,000 French prisoners by the Germans is provided in an "agreement in principle" reached with Nazi leaders by Vice-Premier Laval of the Vichy regime diplomatic sources said today.

This agreement, these sources asserted, is Laval's ace-in-the-hole with which he hopes to win at least temporary approval and support of the mass of French people for the Vichy government's program of collaboration, with the means put over for later discussion, was agreed upon last week when Marshal Petain, Vichy chief of state, conferred with Hitler.

(Petain on Wednesday foreshadowed some action affecting French prisoners when he told his people that, as part of France's deal with her conquerors, "in the new future the suffering of our country may be lightened, the fate of our prisoners ameliorated, the charges of occupation eased.")

Diplomatic sources said there was no doubt that Laval had obtained the release agreement during his recent Paris talks with German officials.

When he plans to play his ace card remains in doubt, it was said.

Almost every family in France has a son, brother, husband or close relative in the "vanished legion" of 1,500,000 or more prisoners now in internment camps in Germany or German-occupied parts of France. Announcement that two-thirds of these men soon would be back home certainly would bring joy to millions.

About 500,000 prisoners, diplomatic sources said, will be forced to stay in these camps until the end of the war.

Some still will be held because they sympathize with the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaule, it was said, and others because their homes are in zones

Missile Leaves Her And Companion Unhurt

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(CP)— Bomb splinters from the Battle of Britain:

It was a regular "stripper," that bomb that tumbled in front of a young lady and her male companion tanding near a London hotel. When the girl regained her feet she found herself dressed only in stockings and bloomers. Someone came to the rescue with a trench-coat.

Tribulations of an A.R.P. warden are mirrored in the report of one of them who wrote: "It is six weeks since I undressed to sleep. In that time I've taken them off pretty often, of course, but only for a bath.

British Press Clamors For Heavy Blows At Italy

LONDON, Nov. 1 — (CP). —Axis air raiders returned to the attack on England by daylight today in forays scattered from the southeast coast to the west Midlands.

London had two daylight alerts before noon after a comparative respite during the night.

There was a brief alarm at the morning rush hour but British fighters were reported to have turned back the attackers.

The second alarm came shortly before lunchtime after reports that a large formation of raiders had been sighted over the southeast coast.

During a pre-dawn raid, four persons were killed and a number injured by a bomb which fell in a London residential district where several houses were demolished.

Press Wants Action

A large part of the British press, meanwhile, demanded stronger blows against Italy and cheered the Greek navy for shelling Italian positions along the Albanian border.

With a long rest in the middle of the night, London underwent one of the lightest after-dark attacks of the war on the 55th consecutive night of bombings.

Two explanations were suggested for the lessening of air raids during the last week—first, bad weather, with ground mists and boggy fields in France; second, the assertion that many German bombing pilots have gone to southeastern Europe and Italians who have moved into French bases are just getting their bearings over England.

The few bombs which were reported during the night fell mainly in London, East Anglia and a town in the Midlands. The government said these caused little damage and few casualties.

A small number of bombs also dropped at one point on the northeast coast of Scotland—"with little effect," a communique said.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, echoing the call of Admiral of the Fleet Lord Chatfield for violent blows against Italy, said:—

"Living women and children matter more to us than the antiquities of Rome. If bombing Rome is to mean an earlier victory for the Greeks and ourselves, we should begin it tomorrow and continue it until the Italians see sense."

The Daily Herald declared "We have got to hit Mussolini and hit him so hard that we leave our mark upon him."

Some Fast Work

Lieut. Tate wrote that the rescue work, which included hoisting the badly injured aboard in stretchers and lowering them away below decks was "accomplished with amazing speed and smoothness."

"Men of this Canadian ship handled the situation like old hands," he said. "Later it was touching to see the genuine tenderness with which the sailors handled the injured. Feeding presented an unexpected problem but not one survivor who could eat missed a meal in three days...."

His account continued, "The mother and the baby were in a life boat that was about to be lowered into the water after the Empress had been hit by the first torpedo. A second projectile from the submarine smashed into the starboard side of the ship and exploded just below that life boat and another, both of them crowded. The mother was knocked unconscious.

"When she came to her baby was no longer in her arms. The life boat had been broken in half and only one half was still afloat and she was sitting alone in it—the only one in the two life boats who had not been blown into the sea. The baby was floating in the water in the bottom of her half of the boat. She snatched him up out of the cold sea water."

"She thought her husband had been drowned until she found him aboard the Canadian destroyer."

Miss Boothe started things. Wife of Henry R. Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, which are supporting Willkie, she took the air to assert that Miss Thompson was showing "silly signs of hysteria" at the possibility of Willkie's election.

Miss Thompson countered by terming Miss Boothe the campaign's "snob-appeal," the "Brenda Frazier of the great crusade (for Willkie.)" She had "torn herself loose from the Stork Club to serve her country." Miss Thompson hit a high note when she described the publisher's wife as "the body by Fisher in this campaign."

But the columnist was only warming up. She went on: "Miss Boothe has everything to pull in the orders, the Powers model face, the recommendations of Lady Whoosis who, whether from her lovely apartment in the super Ritz or from the exquisite little yacht that was a gift from Lord Peevish, says to you: 'I use only Willkie.'

"I've met you before, Clare—in various costumes and under various hats, I met your type in the Cliveden set....and the last time I saw you, the eternally repeating type of you, the Lady Kingmaker, was in the appartment of the last prime minister of France."

However, the by-play between the ruffled feminine campaigners was only one of the lighter touches of the week as the campaign reached new heights of intensity preparatory to the Nov. 5 voting. The main barrage was laid down by the candidates as President Roosevelt took personal issue with the Republican nominee.

Nearing the end of his swing around the country, Willkie yesterday campaigned in the factory towns of New Jersey and Delaware with the assertion that "when a man becomes too absolute in power, he always takes the people to the shambles of war." At Camden, N.J., last night he maintained that the United States "is sick of the type of government that treats our constitution like a scrap of paper."

Third of 5 Major Speeches

Mr. Roosevelt will have an opportunity to reply tonight when he speaks in Brooklyn in the third of the five major speeches he has scheduled for the closing days of the election fight. The president returned to Washington yesterday from a speech-making excursion to Boston where, among other things, he denied he is leading the country into war and said he had urged "sympathetic consideration" for a British request for 12,000 additional airplanes.

Willkie, who has maintained he would give more aid to Great Britain than could Mr. Roosevelt, commented on this during one of his talks yesterday. He said that if he were elected a request for such a number of planes would be "insignificant" because American production would be geared to a new high.

As the campaign entered its last four days, political observers were keeping a close watch on these 11 States: New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, California, Michigan, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Missouri and Indiana. For if either candidate wins these States and any other single State, he will have enough electoral votes to give him victory.

The chief prize is densely-populated, industrial New York. New York's 47 electoral college votes have gone to the winning candidate in every election except three since the civil war.

cluding "public defamations of their political systems."

Gayda's citations began with the president's Chicago ("quarantine") speech in 1937 and continued down to the Free French attack on Dakar. He said a Spanish diplomat, inquiring at "a foreign office" was told the expedition against that French West African port had been made on American suggestion.

His editorial cited what was purported to be a secret report by Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish ambassador to the United States, May 7, 1939, which attributed to President Roosevelt "constant preparation of American public opinion to hate everything which savors of totalitarian or Fascism."

Some Complaints

Gayda cited these actions as particularly non-neutral:—

Alleged routing of Atlantic Clipper planes by way of Bermuda (where there is British censorship) "to keep Italians and Germans from using this means of communication";

Alleged application particularly to Germans and Italians of alien surveillance in the United States;

Alleged refusal to furnish an Italian airline in South America with gasoline;

Export bans on various mineral products;

The trade of 50 destroyers—which he said were good warships—for British bases in the Western Atlantic;

Alleged daily dispatch of "arms and fighting men" to Britain;

Co-ordination of United States and British airplane manufacture to help Britain.

His reference to "fighting men" apparently meant the "Eagle Squadron," a unit of American fliers who as individuals have joined the Royal Air Force and who, Gayda said, already are fighting in England.

TELLICO PLAINS, Tenn., Nov. 1 — (AP). — A 24-year-old woman made the first kill in the bear and wild boar hunt held annually in the rugged mountains of the Cherokee National Forest. Mrs. Edith Hass Padgett, wife of Tellico Plains postmaster, bagged a 400-pound black bear with a rifle yesterday, bringing it down with two shots at 65 yards.

Greek Bombers Take Toll Along Coast

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 1 (AP)—Tank-supported Italian infantry attacks in northwestern Greece have been "repulsed everywhere," the Greek general staff disclosed today, and the small Greek navy has moved alongshore to bombard the invading Fascists.

Greek planes also joined in the fighting, a communique said, bombing and machine-gunning invasion forces "from a low altitude." Naval guns were said to have shelled "successfully" the Italian right wing (closest the sea) for more than an hour yesterday.

The communique said the Fascist forces suffered losses in yesterday's fighting and added that "prisoners were taken."

For the second time in two days the general staff reported that "irregulars are collaborating with the enemy" without further identification.

(A frontier correspondent also claimed Italian troops had penetrated Greece from the sea as well as from Albania but he did not elaborate.)

Continued Italian air raids yesterday on the port of Patras were reported officially and the toll of Monday's opening raid on the city reached 100 dead and 250 injured as Premier John Metaxas addressed a message of sympathy to the city.

Cowardly Attack.

"A formation of raiders attacked an open town in a cowardly manner and the civilian population was bombed and machine-gunned from 60 feet," Metaxas declared.

"The innocent blood shed galvanizes our faith in the sanctity of the struggle and affords to the eyes of the civilized world a measure of the manliness and honesty of our enemy, who believes that with known murderous means he will intimidate a brave people....

"The blood of the dead citizens of Patras will be revenged by the nation."

Aristides Demetratos, Under Secretary of Labor and General Secretary of the Greek National Labor Confederation, called on workers throughout the world in a broadcast last night to come to the aid of Greece in her struggle against Italy.

The text of his appeal was sent to United States labor organizations.

He sugested a boycott of Italian products and urged that workers demand that their governments ban exports of raw materials and munitions to Italy.

King George II. conferred yesterday with Metaxas and General Alexander Papgos, Chief of Staff, on the war situation.

The Istanbul newspaper Vatan, commenting upon the situation, said the government knew it could count upon the Turkish people "to assume their great historical responsibility if the duty is imposed upon them."

Other sections of the press emphasized that should the Italians succeed in capturing the Greek port of Salonika Yugoslavia would be the next Balkan nation to suffer dismemberment by the Axis powers.

The Turkish press generally warned against any Bulgarian interference in the conflict.

The newspaper Jeni Sabah said "neither Jugoslavia nor Greece need fear a Bulgarian attack from the rear, because Turkey knows how to deal with adventurous Bulgaria."

The paper further declared "The Balkans face the duty of making their land the cemetery of Italian hopes...This can be either our freedom or slavery, depending on the road the Balkans choose."

One London drugstore, (A "chemist shop" over here) really gives you a reminder of its collections for a Spitfire fund. The collection tin hangs on a string from the ceiling and you have to duck to avoid a crack on the head each time you enter or leave.

Now, see what the war has started. All kinds of people are helping to revive the centuries-old pastime and art of tapestry stitching while waiting in air raid shelters. Lady Smith-Dorrien, principal of the royal school of needlework, "which is remaining in London despite the war," says "there has been a great revival" of the work which dates back to medieval days when the women used to pass the hours awaiting the return of their men from battle.

Sleeps With His Books

C. J. Purnell is one man who can read himself to sleep in his shelter. He is in charge of the London Library and sleeps amid 500,000 books. Bombs persuaded him to abandon his suburban home.

Three youths aiding in rescue work in South London crouched as a bomb crashed beside a neighboring factory wall. But there was no explosion so the trio of unofficial wardens grabbed a sack, shoved the 250-pound bomb inside and carted it away to an open churchyard where it later was de-fused by experts. Alongside the factory wall was a shelter protecting several hundred persons.

Outside one wrecked warehouse three stenographers set their machines on the mutilated standbags and continued to clean up urgent correspondence. Beside them the "boss" sat at his packing-case desk, dictating to his secretary. They all worked there—until the rains came.

The baby was dumped from his rocking chair when a bomb wrecked a bungalow in a northwest town. But that's what saved the baby's life. After removing piles of debris rescue workers found the baby under the overturned chair, still sucking away at its milk bottle.

Shakespeare has had his left hand amputated by a German bomb. The rest of the statue, however, remains in tact and the bard still hold his right hand to his cheek and gazes at a set of broken windows. At the base of the scroll reads: "There is no darkness but ignorance." (He never had to find his way home afoot in London blackout.)

along the English channel and Northern Brittany now restricted to German military operations.

Release of 1,000,000 is reported to be planned as a gradual operation partially to enable smoothest possible re-absorption into civil life.

Their return, however, may well bring with it a tremendous economic problem of employment to dormant French industry, which is only beginning to stir again under encouragement of the Vichy regime, it was said.

According to Vichy figures, there now are 1,100,000 unemployed in France, without counting prisoners —including 300,000 jobless in the Paris region alone.

Industry Half Speed

However, French industrialists who travel into the German-occupied zone assert that the Germans are trying to get French industry back into at least partial production, especially when the output is of interest to Germany.

Generally the Germans are reported to have limited production to 50 per cent, declaring that normal production would bring the French plants into competition with their German counterparts.

One French industrialist said his firm—one of the largest in Europe making automobile tires—stopped production after the armistice.

Later a German trade commission asked what raw materials were needed. The plant director said he had rubber stocks for a year but lacked cotton fibre. The Germans then delivered the fibre at the world market price and guaranteed to purchase half the factory's output, but limited it to half its normal production. It is operating at half speed to-day.

Similar instances have been reported throughout France.

How to absorb released prisoners into an industry is so limited, economists say, will be Laval's greatest problem.

The Germans, it is said, have declined to import French labor—as they have Italian, Polish and Slav workers—because they say French unskilled laborers are too "undisciplined" and independent to work under German direction.

Laval, however, is reported willing to risk the labor problem for an immediate rise in his prestige, while the Germans are said to be unwilling to keep French prisoners in their territory indefinitely.

New Sub-Station Put No Tax On Ratepayers

Construction of a new sub-station at Park and Romaine streets at a cost of $100,000 will put no tax on the ratepayers of the city, Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission told members of the Finance committee of the City Council on Thursday night.

Mr. Matthews with E. R. Shirley, Ross Dobbin and Roland Denne formed a delegation before the council seeking to have an application made to the Ontario Municipal Board approving the sale of debentures. The Ontario Hydro Electric Commission has approved the building of the station, and once the approval of the Municipal Board is obtained for the issuing of debentures, the Council can pass the necessary by-law.

Mr. Matthews explained that the issuing of $100,000 worth of debentures would put no tax on the people but would be taken care of out of the annual earnings of the Commission. He added too that the local Commission was in a fine position financially. "In 1941 we will pay off $50,000 worth of debenturse and in 1943, an additional $280,000" he said.

Alderman Dutton moved that a by-law be prepared and that the Council seek the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board, and the motion was seconded by Alderman Stocker.

Another deputation of three men headed by Fred Skitch sought the aid of the Council in finding a suitable room for band practices. Mr. Skitch said there were 26 players in the musical organization and that their room at the Y.M.C.A. had been given over to the soldiers. Alderman Cotton and Dutton assured them that the request would get every consideration.

light operations, the air ministry added.

Text of the air ministry's Friday communique:—

"Last night a small force of aircraft of the bomber command made a successful attack on oil tanks and other objectives at Naples. All our aircraft have returned safely.

"No operations were carried out over western and central Germany because of bad weather.

"During daylight operations yesterday aircraft of the coastal command scored a direct hit on a merchant ship off the Norwegian coast. One of these aircraft is missing."

In The Right Spots.

ROME, Nov. 1—(AP). — British warplanes, striking at southern Italy, roared over Naples during the night and unloaded explosive and incendiary bombs, some of which, the Italian high command acknowledged, fell in two of the city's great industrial suburbs.

(The British Air Ministry said the raiders scored hits on oil tanks and "other objectives" at Naples).

Several bombs fell at Bagnoli, four miles west of the city, and at Pomigliano d'Arco, eight miles to the northeast, the high command said. Some of Italy's biggest blast furnaces and steel mills are located in this region.

The communique did not indicate from what direction the raids were launched.

Hurled To Death

MILFORD, Del., Nov. 1—(AP).—A clown in a water diving "thrill act" died today of injuries received when hurled 120 feet from the top of a ladder during dismantling of the act's equipment after a Hallowe'en celebration last night.

Thrown from the ladder, Walter Caldrell, 35, of Raleigh, N.C., hit another member of the crew standing on the ground below. Both were taken to a hospital, where Caldrell died.

Police said the accident occurred when an automobile struck a guy wire. The driver was held on $5,000 bail for a hearing.

Two Bruce Homes Are Destroyed In Hermon District Within Week

BANCROFT, Nov. 1—(ENS)—The homes of two men of the Bruce family in the country east of here were wiped out by fire that repeated itself some miles apart in strikingly similar circumstances this week.

Benjamin Bruce of Hermon, seventeen miles east of here, saw his house burn down last Monday morning, and the same unfortunate experience befell Cecil Bruce, also of Hermon, two days later, on Wednesday.

In the first fire Ben Bruce and his brother-in-law, Jack Mackay, got up early, lit the fire and went out to the barn to do some chores. They had been away from the house only a short time as it seemed when they heard Mrs. Bruce calling for help. Mr. Mackay ran in the house and upstairs through smoke that was becoming quite dense, and managed to carry his sister outside.

Contents of the home were lost, and Mackay is said to have had considerable money in his clothes upstairs which he thought of as he dashed toward his sister's room. His clothes and money disappeared in the flames.

With no reason to think of his brother's loss as he followed his own routine, Cecil Bruce got up early on Wednesday, lit the fire, and as the day was wet and disagreeable for work in the woods, he decided to go back to bed for a while. A heavy pungent odor of smoke awakened him. He succeeded in saving the contents of the house, but the building went up in smoke. It was insured.

Heavy Snowfall.

The weatherman played quite a prank on Bancroft and vicinity on Wednesday afternoon in the form of a snowstorm which lasted all afternoon and well into the night. About three inches of snow fell and motoring was quite hazardous. The winter appearance was quite localized, for ten miles north of Bancroft just a skimmer of snow could be seen and east of Maynooth no snow was visible. The trees, telephone lines and cars got a real heavy coating, which from an artist's view was very picturesque.

The funeral of the late James Linn who passed away in Bancroft Sunday morning, was held at the Brethern Hall Tuesday afternoon. The service was conducted by the Rev. F. Peer of Belleville, and interment took place at Hillcrest Cemetery north of the village.

The annual bazaar of "Our Lady of Mercy" Church, Bancroft, was held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in the Community Hall under the supervision of the Rev. J. L. Kennedy, parish priest.

Harold Gallagher, nineteen-year-old son of Mrs. K. Gallagher and the late Leo Gallagher, who has been confined to hospital in Pembroke for the past five weeks, passed away Tuesday evening at the hospital. The remains were brought to his home at Bird's Creek Thursday morning. The late Harold Gallagher is survived by his mother, Mrs. K. Gallagher, two sisters, Doreen and Reta, and one brother, Leo.

Chatham later reported liveweight down 25 cents there at $8.10 and dressedweight down 40 cents at $10.90. Prices were unchanged at London at $11.25 plus transportation, but down 15 cents at $11.25 at Peterborough.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 1 — (CP). — Trading in all grains was slow during the first half hour of today's session of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. December and May wheat futures remained unchanged at minimum levels of 71⅝ and 75⅞ cents a bushel respectively.

Chicago wheat prices were unchanged and the Buenos Aires market was on a holiday.

Dealers completed a few transactions in the coarse grain pit during the first few minutes of trade but business soon dwindled. No July futures were traded.

Chamberlain Not Off To California

LONDON, Nov. 1—(CP).—Widely-circulated reports that Neville Chamberlain was on his way to California in hopes of regaining his health brought from the former Prime Minister's secretary today the assertion that he "has not left this country and has no intention of doing so."

Mr. Chamberlain himself, the secretary added, regarded the reports as "such rubbish that he does not consider them worthy of a formal denial."

Reports emanating previously from Chamberlain's home city of Birmingham were to the effect that he and his wife had been on the high seas for about 10 days.

The 71-year-old former Prime Minister, under whom Britain entered the war against Germany, resigned from the cabinet of his successor, Winston Churchill, October 3, because of failing health.

He underwent an abdominal operation last July 29, and has suffered also from gout. During the last two months of German air raids on London, he has been unable to get proper rest, it was said.

Army Loses $300,000

MONTREAL, Nov. 1 — (CP). — The Salvation Army lost more than $300,000 worth of equipment and supplies in its withdrawal from France after the German invasion, Col. George Walter Peacock, Chief Secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada, said today on his arrival here from a tour of the Maritime Provinces.

Lindsay Youth Escapes St. Malo Sinking

LINDSAY, Nov. 1—(ENS)—Vernon Sedgwick, 20-year-old son of Mrs. Emily Sedgwick, Durham street, town, is among the 16 survivors of the St. Malo, commandered French steamer, which was sunk by enemy action on the high seas last Saturday.

The young man, who has had the wanderlust since he was a very young child, has travelled in many parts of the world as a sailor during the past four or five years, but was home for several months this year.

Mrs. Sedgwick, who was notified by Canadian National Steamships that her son was safe in a United Kingdom port, told The Examiner Thursday that it was the first news of her son since he left home in mid-September. She said she did not know that he had returned to the sea.

Vernon always had the ambition to be a sailor, and he returned home some two years ago with a thrilling story of his travels. He was born in Lindsay and has a brother and sister residing here.

In the latter part of September William Brooks, town, received word this his son Fred Brooks, a member of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, had been killed by a bomb in England and that his remains had been interred there. A few days ago Mr. Brooks was surprised to received a letter containing a picture of his son. The letter was dated October 1. Mr. Brooks could not believe his eyes when he discovered that the letter was written by his son, who is very much in the flesh and is in excellent health. Private Brooks was at one time a guard at Kingston Penitentiary, and later chief of police at Deseronto.

172 Japs Leave LondonForHome

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Acting on advice of their government, 172 Japanese, carrying gas masks and steel helmets, left Euston Station today for Japan.

Most of them were representatives of Japanese banks and business houses in London. They are scheduled to sail from Galway on the Japanese steamship Fushimi Maru for Japan via the Panama Canal.

Kiyoshi Uchiyama, Consul-General, who headed the party, said about 600 Japanese were remaining in Britain, including skeleton staffs for many firms.

Tokyo's advice for its nationals to leave was based on loss of business and conditions under the German air offensive rather than strained relations between Japan and Britain.

LINDSAY

Beat Wrong Man Pays $18 Fine

LINDSAY, November 1.—(ENS)—It was a case of mistaken identity when John McDuff of Lindsay was attacked in his home on October 16, and when the "smoke" cleared away one of his eyes had been blackened and his face bruised. He laid a charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence against two young men, R. Davidson and A. Heenan, and the hearing was scheduled for Wednesday's session of the police court.

When Magistrate Gee called the case, County Crown Attorney Anderson announced to the court that the accused wished to withdraw the charge. Magistrate Gee inquired if there had been any collusion, and the County Crown Attorney remarked that it was simply one of the cases when the court had been made a tool of. The officers of the law had been put to a great deal of trouble in connection with the case, and now had the spectacle of the complainant coming into court and asking for a withdrawal.

The circumstances surrounding the case were of such a character as to make the incident a disgrace to the community, said the County Crown Attorney, who did not look with favor on the withdrawal, and asked the complainant to go in the box and tell his story under oath.

It appears that the accused went to the house of the complainant about two o'clock on the morning of the 16th and knocked on the door. When Mrs. McDuff opened the door she saw two men outside and proceeded to close it. The accused effected an entrance, however, and immediately attacked McDuff, only to find that they had pummelled the wrong man. It was diclosed that Heenan had visited the house the day previous and had become engaged in a fight with a roomer named Graham, and had returned next morning with Davidson for the purpose of finishing the job. Both the accused had admitted to Chief of Police Lawler that they had committed the assault, but McDuff could not identify Davidson as one of his assailants because the house was in darkness.

County Crown Attorney Anderson stated to the court that he was not at all pleased with McDuff's attitude in the case, and that he gave evidence of having a jellyfish backbone. The whole thing smacked of collusion.

Magistrate Gee, in giving judgment, stated that while the charge had been sustained, he felt that McDuff, through his conduct in connection with the case, was not entitled to much consideration. He allowed Davidson to go owing to the failure of the complainant to identify him, and gave Heenan two years' suspended sentence on paying court costs, $18.85.

Escapes Death At Sea 3 Times

WINNIPEG, Nov. 1.—(CP)—For a third time, Francis Millan, 23-year-old Winnipeg seaman with the Royal Navy, has escaped death at sea.

He was listed as missing after the sinking of the Canadian destroyer Margaree October 22, but it was learned yesterday he did not sail aboard the warship. He is still in the United Kingdom.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Millan, received word of his safety last night.

Millan was a survivor of the Canadian destroyer Fraser, and previously had escaped death during the Spanish Civil War when his ship was torpedoed. He has been with the Royal Navy since 1934.

His parents last heard from him early this month when he said he was taking a special course at a naval station in Scotland. At that time, he said he would not rejoin his ship until October 24. "We still hoped there was some mistake when the news of the Margaree came through," said Mr. Millan.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1940

Hitting Below The Belt

Wendell Willkie did something in a political address in Baltimore and he did it deliberately. He stated that United States would be in the war by April of 1941 if President Roosevelt is elected to the White House.

And that we consider to be mighty miserable campaigning.

There have been times when the leading national and domestic issues have been discussed and kept to the front in United States, but they have been shoved back so far in the closing days that they might just as well have been left alone throughout.

United States, which so long has followed the idea that it can be in the world and yet have nothing to do with the troubles of the world, is asked to vote out President Roosevelt because he is going to bring the country into the war.

And that is something which we do not believe. We see nothing in sight to indicate that President Roosevelt has any intention of making a declaration of war; nothing to show that he will send armed forces overseas.

Britain has never hinted, suggested or expressed even a slight desire officially that United States should enter the war.

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Britain, is in Washington, and he made a statement regarding the relationship of Britain and United States and he so accurately conveyed the British idea that the London Daily Mail at once took opportunity to use its editorial space to voice approval.

The position is simply this:

The armed forces of Britain are America's first line of defence against Nazi invasion. Those forces are fighting not only for the life of the British Empire, but for the survival of Western democracy.

In return for that service Britain requires the utmost service United States can give.

And what form is that service to take? An armed expedition? Not a bit of it. The Daily Mail states it briefly: "We want all the equipment America can send. We want more than we are getting and we want it faster. Our enemies could not stand against a Britain armed to the teeth, backed by United States with her vast potential war production at full strength."

We are told plainly that a speed-up of her industrial production would be worth more to Britain right now than if United States were to send an expeditionary force of 1,000,000 men.

Britain would not welcome the million men, but it would welcome an increased output of planes, and the reason for that form of argument is plain to see. If United States stopped right now to start arming an expeditionary force then it would mean slowing down the amount of war equipment which she could send to Britain. And we are informed plainly that right now Britain has more regard for equipment than for added men.

That is actually the way President Roosevelt has been looking at the situation. He knows what Britain needs today because he has been kept well informed of that need.

When Britain said she was in need of more destroyers, United States agreed to transfer fifty to the British fleet. They were classed as "over-age," but we have been assured they were all good. There was no suggestion from any quarter that United States crews should go with them. They were transferred to British register and British crews took them over. It was a clear case of where Britain was asking for and receiving destroyers and not crews to operate the destroyers.

And that is the British attitude today. To United States the message is: Send us more planes; get them over here in greater numbers and with more speed; let us be armed to the teeth and we will win this war.

And if that is not an excellent way for United States to keep out of the war then we do not know the meaning of anything. United States is selling goods to Britain and Britain is paying for them. No one in a position of authority has ever suggested that United States should enter the war or that it should send one single man overseas.

Britain is asking for equipment and more equipment and she wants it immediately. The whole array of plain facts shows plainly that Willkie is playing on the war issue to get elected. He says if he is not elected United States will be at war in a few months. And no person wants United States in the war. The wheels should turn faster and more continuously in the war plants on British orders. That's all. And Willkie is seeking to distort the British position to serve his own political purposes. In this critical year that is poor stuff.

This Doesn't Seem Right

Between provinces, states or nations it is necessary to have boundary lines. They at times save trouble, and again there are occasions when they create more.

At North Derby, 25 miles south of Sherbrooke, Que., there is a house which straddles the boundary line between Canada and United States, and part of that house is in Quebec and part is in Vermont. It is occupied by Lawrence C. Parminter.

The occupant was in court at Sherbrooke and the result of the session was that he was fined $50 and costs for having goods in Canada which had been purchased in United States and had not been declared. The case centred around a tea kettle, some wallpaper and a set of utensils. The articles were found in a room divided only by the international boundary line. The tea kettle case failed because it was found to have been on the side of the room which was in United States, but the wallpaper and the utensils were on the side which was in Canada, so they nailed the man on that to the extent of $50, and that should surely teach him to watch his step when he is puttering around a house which straddles the friendly boundary line.

The magistrate said he had no course open but to impose the fine owing to the severity of the customs laws, but he said plainly that he believed it was one of those cases which should never have been brought to court in the first place. Whether that made Mr. Parminter feel any better we do not know, but we doubt whether it would raise his feelings to the point of patriotic jubilation where he would fork over the currency in the full knowledge that justice was being done.

From this distance it looks like digging down deep into the hill and bringing out the small potatoes. This line straddler is a marked man and leads a dangerous life. He may sleep in United States and partake of his morning nourishment in Canada; the geraniums in his window may look out into Quebec, while the patch of lettuce and onions in the rear may reach maturity under the laws of Vermont. We need money in this country, but we have not reached the stage where we must lay it so hard on the one man whose house happens to sit deliberately on what we call the friendly border line.

Why Blame The Corn?

On September 28 there was a fatal traffic case in Lobo township (Middlesex county) and it found its way to court in London by way of a reckless driving charge. A woman from St. Marys had been killed.

This case did not progress far because the Crown suggested there was not sufficient evidence of reckless driving. It was merely a situation where two cars had been approaching a road intersection and neither could see the other on account of a field of corn which had attained sufficient height to obscure vision.

"The real cause of the collision was the corn," was the decision of the official, and that ended it.

If one wants to forget the corn for a moment, it comes closer to the truth to say: "The real cause of the collision was that two men driving two cars were approaching an intersection, and neither of them thought far enough ahead to slow down when approaching what was actually a blind corner."

Petain Is Told What To Do

Henri Philippe Petain, marshal of France, has made yet another statement. This time it is to make known a new determination. His government must move now to stamp out the "Free French" movement in the colonies. If the people in the colonies decide to sever their connections with the "Free French" movement, then they will become as Petain and the rest of France—under the heel of Germany.

Petain argues from the small premise of a man who has reached a dead end and sees no open door through which to pass. He claims that if the French people become united things can be made easier for them. In two ways at least: (1) the plight of French prisoners of war can be made better (there are 2,000,000 of them), and (2) occupation expenses can be made lighter. (At present the cost to France of the German army is $8,000,000 per day).

What has actually taken place has been nothing short of a form of blackmail; at least that is what it would be called outside of military jurisdiction. There is only one person who can order that the lot of French prisoners shall be made lighter, and that one person is Hitler.

There is only one person who can order that French payments for maintaining the German army of occupation shall be made lighter, and again that one person is Hitler.

The thing seems plain as a pikestaff. Hitler has intimated to Petain that a little of the pressure may be taken off; the iron heel of the conqueror may move a little to one side—provided that Petain and his puppet government at Vichy undertake the putting down and the flattening out of the "Free French" movement.

If the idea of freedom can be smothered in its entirely then Hitler may be willing to make things a trifle better while his hands are fully occupied elsewhere. So Petain, now in his 84th year, has the thing put plainly before him; he must snuff out the idea of freedom and take the light from the window.

Three Brave Men

There were three men in court at Guelph. Their names were printed in the report of the affair, but that didn't mean a thing. We'd never heard of them before.

But they have by now gone to prison for three months. Locked up in the county jail, and there they will spend Christmas.

The three had been stealing chickens. Taking them away from farmers in the district who had raised them and fed them. And so they are off to jail. For stealing chickens.

If a red-blooded man were going to jail we have always had the feeling he would feel better if he were sent down for something else than stealing chickens. He'd rather have it noised about concerning him that he'd been in a man-sized fist fight.

But an able-bodied man—no, three of them—going down for stealing chickens! We'd have more regard for a man who was dropped in the cooler for being drunk and disorderly.

NOTE AND COMMENT

About the meanest remark which one could make would be: "You act like a German."

If ever a nation was badly let down, betrayed, sold down the river, etc., it was —and is—France.

Man in Toronto was arrested and he was spotted by the socks which he wore. Perhaps a golfer who had made a hole in one.

The rising price of cream worries the cheese makers in some sections, but it does not worry the farmers who have cream for sale.

A man in New Albany, Ind., was fined $2 for galloping a horse along the main street. Having seen neither the horse nor the main street it is difficult to make any intelligent comment.

At West Plains, Mo., a man billed to address a political meeting drew such a crowd that he could not get in. He secured a ladder and spoke to the audience through an open window. A good idea that, as no person would be likely to throw anything at him for fear of breaking the glass.

GOOD IDEA

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Since trees have leaves on them no more, I see much better than before, there's really nothing hid; I see where birds have had a home, and I can see where it was thrown, and everything they did.

¶ The birds that came to life up there, have long since taken to the air, I see them here no more; they don't start singing in the tree, as though they'd found fresh cause for glee, at morning hour of four.

¶ They've all picked up and left I know, because they fear the coming snow, they've dodged the winter breeze; they've gone down where they'll find some heat, they won't need socks upon their feet, or things around the knees.

¶ They never had to spend a cent, they never had to find the rent, nor did they buy a lot; when they arrived here in the spring, they gathered up some straw and string, and picked a likely spot.

¶ They never asked the engineer, if they could built just there or here, mechanics they hired none; and when their nesting time was through, they all picked up and off they flew, of taxes not a one.

¶ I have to stay and shovel coal, and plug up every little hole, I'll shovel snow some day; the birds work by a better rule, for when it starts to turning cool—they merely fly away.

Try To Change Views Of Press At Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Some time ago, when semi-official straw polling, on a country-wide scale, was overwhelmingly Roosevelt, I estimated, in print, that a separate poll of Washington's National Press club, which I considerably infest, would show our membership 80 per cent the other way.

Chas. P. Stewart

I didn't say that the newspaper boys, at that juncture, expected Willkie's election. I was convinced that they didn't. I was speaking only of what I believed to be their preference. Neither did I think that they were 80 per cent pro-Willkie. Rather, my judgment was that they were 80 per cent anti-Roosevelt. I based my opinion upon talks I'd had with them, by the dozens and scores.

It struck me as odd that our people out in the sticks should be, as indicated by straw investigators, so strongly pro-F. D. R., whereas the capital's own press gang impressed me as so decidedly anti. We represent newspapers all over the United States. Why, I asked myself, didn't we reflect the sentiments of the numerous communities we hail from? Furthermore, we all see the president a couple of times weekly, at his regular conferences with the correspondents. Had a large majority of us, I queried internally, taken a dislike to him personally?

Anyway, I disseminated my 80 per cent guess.

It was much resented by the other 20 per cent club members. They said it was perfectly ridiculous.

HULL TO THE RESCUE

THE New Deal management, however, took sufficient notice of it to decide that it was desirable to send a pretty competent missionary up to the club to convert us. The president wasn't available but they hit on State Secretary Cordell Hull.

Well, we like to have big men address us. Cordell's very popular, too. He isn't an impressive orator — too squeaky. He's authoritative, though. And he chose as his subject, "American Foreign Policy," concerning which Wendell Willkie says he's more of an adept than President Roosevelt himself. The board of governors jumped at getting him.

He was scheduled to spellbind the club at a dinner in the big auditorium Saturday evening, October 26.

Generally members are allowed to bring guests to these functions, but in this instance it was reckoned that there wouldn't be room even for all the members, so guests were barred. Indeed, the governors were fearful that a lot of members would not be able to get in; thus that many would be sore. There was talk of putting a loud speaker to enable the overflow to hear the address out in the lounge, the restaurant, the lobby and the bar. Admission was fixed at $3. The ordinary rate is 75 cents. Black neckties were specified. Ticket seekers were urged to come early and avoid the rush.

They didn't come—not in formidable numbers.

Presently the entertainment committee members began to wring their hands. Then they sent out notices to the effect that they had a lot of tickets left over. Oh, yes, they said, guests would be admitted, after all. Come in, for gosh sake, and buy tickets for 'em.

WHY SO INDIFFERENT?

NOW, why were the members so clammy?

For one thing, as I surmised, they've been 80 per cent anti-Roosevelt and they've figured that this was a pro-Roosevelt occasion.

Furthermore, they're privileged to listen to Secretary Hull at his regular press conferences, for nothing, and haven't particularly fancied the notion of hearing him say the same things at $3 per shot.

Finally, I'm convinced that they drew the line on black neckties. A newspaperman, after working hard all day, doesn't take to the idea of going home and changing into a black tie, for an evening's blowout that he isn't materially interested in.

I know this for a fact. Scores of the boys made a compact in advance to show up at the Press club bar in flamboyant neckwear with the explanation that they couldn't attend the Cordell Hull gathering because they haven't got black ties.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And Moses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The Lord hath not appeared unto thee.

And the Lord said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod. And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it.

And the Lord said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand: that they may believe that the Lord God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.—Ex. iii.

NOT ENOUGH PLAY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—As a Queen's student, I wish to reply to your recent editorial "Education at Queen's."

We of Queen's, are not at all proud of the affair to which you refer but the information which you and the Whig-Standard have printed, though based on some facts, was not prepared from a complete knowledge of the actual conditions and has given a very misleading and unfortunate impression to the public. Let me explain for I was there from start to finish.

Just let me say that Queen's students are a typical cross-section of the youth of today and are no different from the students of any other university. In addition to our studies, we have been allotted six or more hours a week of military training which is to be supplemented by two weeks at camp in the spring. The army has organized sports but ours have been seriously curtailed and the traditional rugby games have been cancelled. Let us look at the situation fairly and realize, as our administrators should have, that all work and no play is a serious situation among fourteen hundred young men.

We must admit that the Faculty rivalry resulting in tussles always has existed and probably always will. Our coming elections may have added some surplus emotion but that was not directly responsible for the foray.

It had been agreed between the Arts and Science Faculties that a friendly tussle would take place on the campus away from all buildings. At the last moment, however, the Dean of Arts demanded a disorganization of the Arts forces but failed to notify Science of the intention. Mob spirit broke loose while waiting for the rivals to appear and the consequences were serious and lamentable.

These are the main points of the story which should not have been written before the real facts were known.

Congratulations Sent To A Fiend

IT IS QUITE a long time since we have heard anything quite so barefaced in the way of brutal distortion of the truth as an item which came in an American broadcast from Berlin last night. It was in a broadcast by William L. Shier, the Berlin representative of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Neither Mr. Shier nor Columbia, it should be hastily pointed out, produced the distortion. The American broadcaster was merely acting in his role of reporter. He was describing what the Berlin radio was telling the German people.

What the Berlin radio had been telling the German people was that the Berlin representative of Mr. Hoover's American committee for European relief had sent a congratulatory telegram to the German governor of conquered Poland. If we are able to believe our ears, that telegram thanked one of the most brutalised Germans in Europe for co-operation and expressed appreciation of what he had done for the Polish people during the past year!

There has been any amount of evidence which cannot be disputed concerning what the Germans have done for the people of Poland during the past year. It is some of the most heart-rending evidence in the entire history of mankind.

We do not know whether Mr. Hoover's representative in Berlin actually sent that telegram to the chief German sadist in Poland. The German propaganda organization may have manufactured it out of whole cloth. But whether Mr. Hoover's organization voluntarily co-operated or was forced to become an unwilling tool of Joseph Goebbels is of small importance. If the Hoover organization cannot prevent the Nazis from taking liberties with its verbal integrity, how is it going to prevent the Nazis from taking liberties with the foodstuffs and other supplies which it desires to distribute through German-occupied Europe? If the Hoover organization is not going to use the means of sabotaging the British blockade of Germany itself, let it first get back for the conquered peoples of Europe the foodstuffs and other supplies which the Germans have already taken from them and are still continuing to take from them.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Plane, Ship Hunt Of Gulf Vain For Bras d'Or

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—(CPP)—Gloom spread deeper over 30 Canadian homes today as search continued for the missing auxiliary minesweeper Bras d'Or. But happiness reigned in another which felt short-lived grief following disclosure the Canadian destroyer Margaree had been lost.

There still was no trace of the Bras d'Or, missing with Lieut. C. A. Hornsby of Halifax and 29 others, and aircraft and ships hunted the turbulent Gulf of St. Lawrence for some indication of her fate.

Meantime, Mrs. Mary R. Millan of Victaria received news from navy headquarters that her husband, Ab. F. Millan, was not lost when the Margaree, under Cmdr. J. R. Roy of Ottawa, sank October 22 after collision with a merchant ship in the North Atlantic submarine zone.

Last night, the navy issued a revised list of casualties and survivors of the Margaree disaster. Besides reporting Ab. Millan was not a casualty but safe in England, the list named three additional men as "missing and believed lost," and added three to the number of survivors.

This raised total casualties in the sinking to 142 officers and men, including Cmdr. Roy, and survivors to 34.

Only One Other.

The only man in the revised list besides Ab. Millan whose next-of-kin lives in Canada was Steward E. C. Brown, named as a survivor. His name did not appear in the original list of survivors and casualties issued Sunday night. Steward Brown's mother lives at Halifax.

The other two survivors reported last night were Lieut. H. V. Gordon of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve and Leading Stoker H. James of the Royal Navy.

The three newly-reported casualties were Leading Stokers H. Brockway and G. F. Jaines of the Royal Navy, and Signalman W. J. Reading, Royal Canadian Navy, whose next-of-kin live in England.

The revised list was the first official announcement that any British navy men were aboard the Margaree when she sank.

Last official word on the minesweeper Bras d'Or was a 20-word statement issued at 7 p.m., EDT., last night by the navy. It merely said: "There is still no trace of the Bras d'Or. A thorough and widespread search for the missing vessel is continuing."

The revised Margaree casualty list issued last night raised to 215 the total naval casualties reported since the war began, up to and including the Margaree loss. If the Bras d'Or also fails to show up, it will raise Canada's total naval losses in this war to 243.

Claim Ship Captured

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 — (AP). — The German radio to-day broadcast a Rome despatch reporting that the 2,561-ton Greek steamship Attiki, en route from the United States to Piraeus, Port of Athens, with a cargo of steel, copper, tires and glycerine, had been captured by the Italians in the Mediterranean.

The broadcast, heard by National Broadcasting Company, said the Attiki, owned by the Hellenic Mediterranean Lines, had been taken to an Italian port.

Seven Key States To Decide Willkie Chances

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Wendell Willkie's chances of becoming president of the United States rested today, it was generally agreed, upon the support the Republican nominee has attracted in the densely-populated states such as Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, California, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York.

These states, and a few others such as New Jersey, Indiana and Maryland, are considered the ones most likely to turn over if Tuesday's election shows that a substantial part of President Roosevelt's following, that won the 1936 election in overwhelming fashion, has deserted him.

Roosevelt carried 46 states in 1936, losing only Maine and Vermont, for a record electoral-college total of 523 to eight for Alf M. Landon, Republican. In the popular vote table Rooosevelt had 27,476,673 votes to 16,679,583.

But that does not mean a turnover of more than 5,000,000 votes is necessary to defeat the President. Many states gave him enormous majorities, particularly in the so-called solid south, while in others his margins were much less and could be upset by a comparatively small turnover.

Landon Got 16 Million

Republican strategists argue something like this:—

In 1936 Landon, it developed, was an unpopular candidate, yet he polled 16,000,000 votes. Few, if any, of these votes can be expected to switch to the President—those who opposed him in his most popular year will surely still oppose him, they claim.

So on that base of 16,000,000 Republicans they expect to build a substantial addition made up of (1) Democrats who oppose a third term; (2) Congress of Industrial Organizations members attracted to Willkie by John L. Lewis' break with the President. (It was noted that many C.I.O. leaders have come out for the President, but any following Lewis takes with him would be net gain for the Republicans who believe few of these men voted for Landon.) (3) Voters who far various reason are alarmed over the President's foreign policy which Willkie himself does not oppose, and (4) Democrats who broke with the President two years ago over such issues as the Supreme Court reorganization and the "purge" of insurgent Democratic members of Congress.

Hon. D.B. Mullen Is Laid To Rest

EDMONTON, Nov. 1.— (CP)— Cabinet ministers, members of the Legislature, New Democracy members of the House of Commons and hundreds of citizens of Edmonton and Camrose constituency Wednesday attended the funeral service in McDougall United Church for Hon. D. B. Mullen, Alberta Minister of Agriculture, who died Monday.

The service was conducted by Rev. G. C. McMann and a message of personal tribute was given by Premier William Aberhart. The premier also read several passages of scripture.

Mr. Aberhart praised the late minister for his indefatigable efforts in performance of his public duties in the administration of livestock policies of the province. He spoke of Mr. Mullen as a leader in political thought and of his work to bring about general betterment among the people of Alberta.

From noon until 2:15 p.m. the body lay in state at the church, guarded by six Royal Canadian Mounted Policemen.

The active pallbearers were all senior officers in the Department of Agriculture and honorary pallbearers were Premier Aberhart and cabinet ministers, Hon. E. C. Manning, Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, Hon. N. E. Tanner, Hon. Solon Low and Hon. Lucien Maynard.

Interment took place in Edmonton cemetery.

CAMPBELLFORD

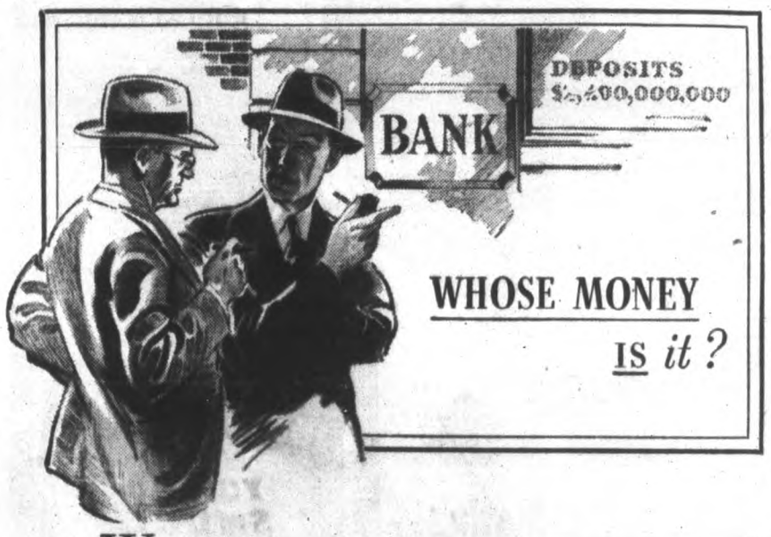
Quality Of Knitting Highly Commended

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1. — (ENS). — Comments on what was termed beautiful knitting, was made by the vice-president at this week's meeting of the Campbellford and Seymour branch of the Red Cross Society when it was pointed out the branch had every reason to be proud of the type of work they were able to send to Red Cross headquarters. Some of the ladies are at present knitting afghans and attention was drawn to the fact they would be glad to receive left-over balls of colored wool or even small pieces.

It was announced the purchasing committee had been reorganized with several new names added and now comprised Mrs. E. Brunelle, Mrs. C. S. Reddick, Mrs. H. Coxwell, Mrs. J. P. Archer, Mrs. S. Twigg, Mrs. H. T. Scott.

The following articles were shipped to headquarters during October: 85 pairs socks, 17 helmets, 37 pairs mitts and gloves, 19 sleeveless sweaters, 27 scarves, 21 turtle neck sweaters, 3 dresses, 6 panties, 4 pyjamas, 25 caps, 6 quilts, 1 afghan and 1 blanket.

Four quilts were completed at this week's meeting according to the secretary, who expressed thanks on behalf of the society to all the people who gave so generously of their time, services and actual money spent in the making of many miscellaneous articles donated to the society.



WHAT money? Why—the money in the banks! The money carefully put away by you and your neighbours in savings accounts. The money you could have spent today but wanted to keep safely against some future need. The businessman's money for use in his normal operations. There are more than 4,846,000 bank deposit accounts, savings and current. Within these two classes the great majority of deposits are small or of moderate amount. ¶ But you'd be wrong if you assumed from this, that the rest of the deposits are owned by the few! Quite the contrary! The railways, for instance, have deposits in the chartered banks—and that indirectly includes the whole population of the Dominion. The trade unions have deposits. Millions of policy-holders share in the ownership of insurance companies' deposits. ¶ And don't overlook the deposits of wheat pools; farm co-operatives; churches; municipalities and municipal hydro commissions, school districts; school children's penny bank savings deposited with the chartered banks; and commercial and mining corporations with very wide lists of shareholders, large and small, all over Canada. Truly, money on deposit in Canada's chartered banks is owned, in fact, by you and your fellow-Canadians.

In war, as in peace, Canada's Chartered Banks maintain, uninterrupted, their useful services — safeguarding depositors' funds; facilitating the nation's business — looking forward to peace with freedom as the only sure basis of enduring prosperity.

Season's High Of 3562 Set By Winners

Smacking the pins for a season's high three-game total of 3562, George Huffman's team upset Chief Gimblett's league-leaders with a 4-to-0 drubbing It was easily the best effort of last night's City League games at Duffus.

Four of the Huffman gang went over 700 to gain their big total, Charlie Clarke spilling them for 783 with a nice single of 359. Clarke's score was not high for the night, the top effort going to the veteran Tom Curvin who delivered two 300 games in his 856 total.

Curvin's good rolling gave the Green team a clean sweep over the Peterborough Lock Co. Four teams were whitewashed while the other two were only able to gain one point.

Bud Weese paced the Nationals to their 4-0 win over the Kinsmen with a 704 total, while Johnny O'Brien's 709 was the real reason for the Centre's 4-0 victory over the Big Five. Hec Thompson's 708 helped Westclox take Raine's 3-1 and V. Anthony and Tom Martin with 750 and 707 gave Tamblyn's the edge of 3-to-1 over Joe Dean's Capitols. The scores:

CURB RABBIT PEST

LONDON—(CP).—Experts have decided on an intensive campaign against the rabbit, a pest with no redeeming features—its meat having low nutritional value and five rabbits eating as much as one sheep.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Happy in the knowledge that we couldn't possibly do worse than last week when we called them all wrong, the Friday chore of doping out Saturday's football games looks comparatively simple today. Last week the clubs took form out into the back yard and strangled it so if that happens again tomorrow we will be wrong again. But after all it wouldn't be the first time or even the second. Anyway we'll start out and call Argos to win in Hamilton. The Oaramen would have to be as bad as they were in Ottawa two weeks ago to give the Tigers a chance to win and they are not likely to be anything as poor as that again. So it would be Argos without a great deal of trouble, even making allowance for the fact that this bird Wright is likely to outkick anything the Oafsmen toss out there against him. But important as good booting is it doesn't seem to matter much when there are backfield phantoms like Bobby Coulter and Art West to run those long punts back.

* * * * * * *

Alex Hayes of Camp Borden has risen right up in meeting to declare that after Saturday there will not be an undefeated club in the east. We are going to tilt a lance with the former Sarnia star quarterback and predict that Alex Ponton's Balmy Beachers will stay in the winning column tomorrow at the expense of the boys from the big and sandy military camp. Hayes bases his confidence in a Camp Borden victory on the all-round fine playing of Eddie Thompson and on the booting of Meikle, former Cobourg star. Thompson's ability is unquestioned and Meikle can boot them but on the Balmy Beach backfield is Don Crowe who has won more than one kicking duel with the same Meikle and is likely to do it again, especially if the Camp Borden line happens to show any signs of defensive weakness and Meikle has to hurry his kicks.

* * * * * * *

As for the other two games on the Saturday card calling them does not seem to contain any particular difficulty. The Montrealers claim they will make things interesting for the Rough Riders. They may succeed in doing that much but we cannot conjure up a picture of them defeating Ross Trimble's big and powerful squad who will be out to make amends for their defeat at the hands of the Argos. That game should be Rough Riders' by a snug margin. The fourth game of the day, a senior O.R.F.U. fixture between Hamilton Alerts and Sarnia Battery we are giving to the Artillerymen. They look to have too much fight and speed for the Alerts but this perhaps is the toughest game of the day to go out on the limb about. Anything can happen and probably will.

Expect To Get It Easy

Hallowe'en activities have progressed along the same lines as other branches of sport. In other words the kids, like the athletes go around with their hands out, expecting to get a bag full of candies merely for the trouble of asking for them. In the old days the kids never thought of candy being handed out to them at the front door. Their scouts located a party where there was sure to be taffy and the gang just waited until the sweet stuff was put outside to cool, and then they climbed a couple of fences and made off with the loot. They realized that anything worth having had to be worked for and getting away with a pan of taffy was a major operation, requiring planning, nerve, climbing ability and speed. Sport is much in the same situation. Nowadays the performer expects to get his sugar at the front door as it were; if it is not obtainable there he does not believe in having to work for it.

Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, has come out for Wendell Willkie for president of the United States. The average American has a keen sense of humor so that should get quite a laugh across the border. The heavyweight champion is a great fighter, although not quite so great as some of the press blurbs would make him but when he starts to tell his fellow Americans what they should do politically that registers about the best joke of the season. Louis probably knows as little about politics as anybody in Detroit. Most folk would just about as soon take his judgment in selecting a new suit as they would his opinion on the presidential election. However, he is a name and the Willkie forces probably figure that he will have some influence over the negro voters. Everything is grist that comes to the political mill.

Collegiate's two football squads journey to Oshawa tomorrow for a double-header with the Oshawa Collegiate's junior and senior teams. The games mean nothing to P.C.I. but both outfits are determined to turn up with wins tomorrow. It will be the last game of the schedule for the seniors and perhaps the last interscholastic game for some of the squad and the garnet and gray youngsters who had to yield the group to Bowmanville High, would like to wind up their schedule with a win. They will be without the services of Al Marshall, their snapback who injured his right arm early in last Saturday's game and has been under treatment since. Marshall's great worry now, and it is shared by his coach Gordon Minty, is that the injury may interfere with his swimming. He already holds the Canadian breast stroke record and Minty intended pointing him for other marks during the winter. It is hoped the injured arm will respond quickly to treatment.

One Of The Old Guards

Older sport fans will be sorry to learn of the death at Ottawa of Harvey Pulford, one of the outstanding figures in Canadian sport in the early days of this country. Pulford, big and powerful, rated as one of the greatest hockey defence men of his day, the Eddie Shore of the period and he was equally famous as a member of Ottawa Rough Riders' football club. In hockey he starred on the celebrated Silver Seven which gave Ottawa the Stanley Cup championship in 1903-04-05. What a club that was with Pulford, Alf Smith, Harry Westwick, Billy Gilmour and other celebrities wearing the Ottawa uniform. It had power, speed, scoring and fighting ability and Pulford was always one of its strongest links. He was a capable footballer, and lacrosse player as well and earned a permanent niche in sport's hall of fame.

Eddie Shore has served notice on all and sundry that his Springfield Indians are going to provide a battle in the American Hockey loop. The Springfield gang won their second game in successive nights last night when they opened their home season by nosing out the Providence Reds 3 to 2. Shore started on the defence for his club. Incidentally the gang the former Boston powerhouse has gathered under his banner are not only going to be troublesome to the opposition players but they promise to cause a lot of grief to sport writers, telegraph editors and radio announcers. Here are some of the names in the Shore circus: Thibeault, Thurrier, Finkbeiner, Herchenratter, Kaminsky and Haldorson.

Smythe Signs Nick Knott, Buddy Hellyer

TORONTO, Nov. 1 — General Manager Connie Smythe of the Toronto Leafs Hockey Club announced Thursday the signing of Buddy Hellyer and Nick Knott to pro contracts. They will report immediately to Pittsburg Hornets of the American Hockey League.

Knott and Hellyer were signed late Thursday afternoon. The two rookies were with Oshawa Generals, Canadian junior champions, last winter.

At the same time Manager Smythe emphasized that Rookie Goaltender Baz Bastien had not been offered a pro contract.

"Bastien has a chance to go to Washington of the Eastern States League or can stay here with Marlboro Seniors, but he hasn't made a decision yet," Smythe said.

It had been reported from St. Catharines that Bastien had signed a pro contract with the Leafs.

Smythe also revealed that Dick Kowcinak had been tendered a pro contract but had decided to remain in amateur ranks. He was the only one of the former Kirkland Lake stars to receive an offer; Kowcinak and Johnny McCreedy will leave Friday for the Maritimes, where they will play this winter with the Sydney Millionaires. Blink Bellinger, third member of the Blue Devil line, will line up with Niagara Falls seniors.

Jackie Callura To Meet Pace

TORONTO, Nov. 1—Jackie Callura, rugged Hamilton battler, has been signed to meet former world's bantamweight champion Georgie Pace of Cleveland in a ten-round bout that will headline the first show of the winter season at Maple Leaf Gardens on Monday, November 11. Promotor Jack Corcoran announced the booking of Callura following negotiations with Mock Smith, his manager.

Callura last appeared here in June, scoring a win over Joey Bagnato. Since that time he has been campaigning in Florida and California, and is credited with ten straight wins, according to Promoter Corcoran. Callura is scheduled to arrive in Toronto today from Miami, Florida.

Four other bouts are planned on a program that will be the first in a series of semi-monthly boxing offerings at the Gardens this winter.

Joe Louis Booed As Willkie Man

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 — (AP). — Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, was booed at a Republican political rally in the heart of Harlem last night, but he took it like a champ.

"You boys," said the imperturbable Brown Bomber, "can boo 'til you get blue in the face....But I'll just keep on talking."

Looking down at his hecklers, he declared, "I'm used to boos—and I win anyway."

This brought a wave of cheers.

He was up there to urge the election of Wendell L. Willkie. Police estimated 3,500 to 4,000 negroes jammed into a ballroom to hear him, and that 3,000 to 4,000 waited outside.

Louis was booed by some of his listeners when he said, "I endorse Mr. Willkie because he knows what $15 a week will do."

He waited until the booing subsided.

The champ said: "You boys who are booing are boys under 21 who don't know....You don't know what your mothers went through."

"If Mr. Willkie is elected," said Louis, "he has promised in writing to put over the Anti-Lynching Bill. Roosevelt has been in office for eight years and done nothing about that. The people in the north don't know how long is eight years."

Before walking off the platform, he concluded, "If some of you people don't appreciate what I am saying, I'm sorry."

Italy is officially urging its people to eat more fruit, especially grapes.

Boy, Is He Moving!

To the wistful boys, as the silver ship thunders swiftly overhead, air travel seems pure adventure. But the airlines know that commercial flying, far from being adventure, is business—the highly responsible business of public transportation.

To help maintain their fast schedules, the airlines use instruments — marvels of modern science—that go far to eliminate guesswork and danger due to weather. Much of the modern airplane's equipment is electrically operated with the help of storage batteries. For this vital service, it is not surprising that so many airlines rely on Exide batteries. Experience, throughout aviation history, has shown that Exides are worthy of this trust.

With facts like these to guide you, it is easy to avoid guesswork when buying a new battery for your car. Is there any other battery which so thoroughly merits your confidence?

If you are hard on a battery; if you start and stop a lot; if you have a radio, heater and defroster, ask to see the Exide Hycap battery. The Hycap is made especially for such conditions. It has ample power to take care of these extras, together with plenty of reserve for starting in any weather.

The Exide dealer in your community has been carefully chosen for his ability to give good battery service. Look for the daily weather forecast at his gas pump. To avoid starting trouble, have him check your battery now. This service is free.

ARGOS, OTTAWA, BALMY BEACH AND SARNIA ARE CALLED TO WIN

Tigers Are Team To Watch In Meeting Argos

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Having been shown that there is to be no totalitarian rule this season, the East focuses its football attention this week on the Hamilton Tigers, who have been built up to a giant-killing job on Toronto Argonauts, just as the Argos did to Ottawa last Saturday.

There is about as much reason to believe that the Tigers can beat Argos as there was to think Argos could beat the champion Rough Riders. But Argos did it, 11-9, in that thrilling fourth quarter, and the slow but steady improvement of the Tigers lends this Hamilton game some added spice.

They met once before this year, with Argos the victors 17-5. But that was no true indication of the play. Tigers led most of the first half and they were in front 5-3 early in the third quarter. The Tigers folded and Argos got hot suddenly in the last 15 minutes to decide the issue.

Generally, tomorrow's card appears to be a cinch to call in comparison with last week's. Argos should be good enough to take the Tigers; Ottawa look to be much too good for Montreal, even in Montreal; Toronto Balmy Beach entertain Camp Borden and should win going away, while Sarnia should come back after two beatings to defeat Hamilton Alerts in Sarnia.

Two of Best Men

The Tigers have two of the best men of the season to lead the attack and marshal the defences against Argos. George Wright has been the Interprovincial Union's best kicker and most prolific scorer, while Doug Turner, the big centre, has given the Tigers inspired play on secondary defence.

These are the axis around which Art Massucci's team revolves, but it is doubtful whether Wright can generate enough power to break down the defence that halted Ottawa's tanks, or that Turner can rally enough defence to stop Bobby Coulter, Annis Stukus, Elwyn Morris and company.

With something to make up for after the Argo fiasco, the Rough Riders probably will pull out all the stops against the luckless crew of Bill Hughes. The Riders blanked them by 22 points in their first meeting, and Montreal hasn't shown enough since to warrant a belief that the Riders can't do it again.

Balmy Beach, for the first time since their exhibition game against Ottawa, will have their entire backfield ready for the Borden game. But Alex Ponton may decide to keep Jack Frizelle out of action for another week's rest in preparation for the playoffs. Bobby Porter, Frank Seymour, and Hugh Tunnicliffe should be able to handle Eddie Thompson, Borden's one-man offensive, easily enough.

The Hamilton-Sarnia struggle may be the decisive one to decide the Ontario Union's second playoff slot behind Balmy Beach. With Hank Galloway ready to play again, Sarnia appear capable of throwing back the challenge of Eddie McLean's lightweights. They must stop the Gibb brothers, Walter and Odie, to do it, however.

Canuck Betting Off $340,486 To $21,355,037

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 — (CP). — Candians sent $21,355,037 whirling around the Dominions race tracks with the thoroughbreds during the 1940 racing season, the Department of Agriculture announced to-day.

This was a decrease of $340,486 or slightly more than 1½ per cent from the $21,695,523 wagered on Canadian horse races in 1939.

The Agriculture Department supervises pari-mutuel betting at the tracks of 26 racing associations which held 35 race meetings this season.

It reported gate receipts this year were $605,095, compared with $626,023 a year ago, a decrease of $20,928—but it added "gate receipts do not show a true picture of the attendance as some tracks have several ladies' days on which the ladies are admitted on payment of the Provincial tax only, while some tracks are quite liberal with free passes."

Prize money paid this year showed a decrease of $18, 946, amounting to $1,051,824 instead of $1,070,770.

There was one day less of racing this summer because the two Edmonton meetings totalled only 14 days, compared with 15 last year. There were four less races—2,057 compared with 2,061—and 400 less starters — 16,674 compared with 17,074.

The largest amount wagered at any one meeting was at the fall meeting at Dufferin Park, Toronto, $1,263,742. The smallest amount was the $464 wagered at the one-day meeting at Claresholm, Alta.

By cities, wagering increased at three Prairie racing centres—Calgary, Regina, and Saskatoon—and at Vancouver, Victoria, Hamilton, Ont., and Niagara Falls, Ont. Elsewhere it declined.

Statistics, with last year's figures in brackets, include:

Ottawa — Tracks 1 (1) racing days 14 (14), amount wagered $393,877 ($484,592), price money $35,900 ($36,900).

Toronto — Tracks 4 (4), racing days 56 (56), amount wagered $8,509,787 ($8,590,500), prize money $336,000 ($351,000).

Hamilton, Ont. — Tracks 1 (1), racing days 14 (14) amount wagered $1,826,736 ($1,719,796), prize money $73,400 ($74,300).

Fort Erie, Ont. — Tracks 1 (1), racing days 14 (14), amount wagered $1,465,330 ($1,543,570), prize money $71,700 ($72,100).

Niagara Falls, Ont. — Tracks 1 (1), racing days 14 (14), amount wagered $1,057,462 ($1,004,774), prize money $47,300 ($47,000).

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 — (AP). — Buffalo fans would like to get Charley Gehringer as manager next season if Charley decides he's through.

With the big time...Charlie McPhail, Syracuse end, is no relation to Brooklyn's Larry, but they look enough alike to be brothers. To add to the coincidence, the Dodgers are scouting the youngster as an outfield prospect.

Today's guest star.

Jere Hayes, Dallas Times-Herald: "On the theory that the farther I get away from the unpredictable southwest conference, the better my chances are to nail a winner, I'll take a flyer on U.C.L.A. to thump Stanford this week—and then retire to my bomb shelter."

Chitter chatter.

If he's feeling good, Ken Overlin should be much too cute for Steve Belloise tonight...Horse racing may be back in Texas in a big way next year...Congratulations to Freddie Fitzsimmons who has been voted the "veteran of the year" in a contest conducted by the "Sporting News."

Mail box.

"Wouldn't it be nice if they could cook up a deal in which Kimbrough, Harmon, Christman and Reagan would be caught in the first draft and assigned to West Point for the duration—of the season."

Petain on Radio

This most recent picture of Marshal Henri Petain of France shows the French leader speaking to his people over the radio. Petain and Vice Premier Pierre Laval have begun a campaign to make its new tie-up with the Axis powers popular with the French people.

Leafs' Premiere Real Thriller For 1st Nighters

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—(CP)—The audience is ready, the players know their lines, and the curtain is about to be rung up on Act 1, Scene 1 of winter's favorite dramatic offering titled "The National Hockey League Capers."

The production, which has a guaranteed run of a little more than five months, has its premiere tomorrow night in Toronto with New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs holding the stage.

The first-nighters should get plenty of action, for scene-stealing is an art with Producer Lester Patrick's Rangers at well as with Showman Conny Smythe's Leafs. Their meeting under the bright lights of Maple Leaf Gardens provides a fitting opener to the big show.

Four other members of the seven-troupe league take the stage the following night, a Sunday. At Montreal, in the Forum, Canadiens will play opposite Boston Bruins while at the Olympia in Detroit the Red Wings will be featured with New York Americans. Last of the cast to see action, Chicago Black Hawks make their debut at their stadium Nov. 7 against the Americans.

No Retrenching.

This is the second war-time season for the N.H.L., which was a bit apprehensive last season about whether the dollars would roll in as freely as in peacetime. The magnates apparently were satisfied with the success of the 1939-40 season for there has been no great retrenching moves this season.

Basing their judgment of past performances, the customers and the critics seem to be agreed that the Bruins, Rangers and Leafs will grab most of the applause during the season, possibly finishing the schedule in that order.

In any talk about the team likely to finish in first place, however, it is pretty hard to forget the Rangers' feat of winning the Stanley Cup last season, defeating Bruins and Leafs along the way, as well as the great record-making run of 19 straight games without defeat compiled by the New Yorkers.

So far it has been "open season" on predictions about which team is likely to finish in fourth place. Paul Thompson's Hawks get the call in most quarters, although Dick Irvin says that Canadiens are aiming for the spot. Jack Adams undoubtedly would be exceedingly happy if his Red Wings finished in that position, and the same goes for Mervyn (Red) Dutton, whose Americans wound up in sixth place last season.

Dick Kowcinak, McCreedy Back In Sidney Fold

TORONTO, Nov. 1 — (CP). — If precedent means anything in hockey, it's bill Gill's Sydney Millionaires against the field for the Allan Cup this coming season. For the Maritime champions have Dick Kowcinak and Johnny McCreedy back in the fold.

During the past three weeks the Damon and Pythias of the amateur ice lanes have been trying for a berth with Toronto Leafs of the National League. Always there was a possibility one or the other would get a contract, ending a partnership established when Kowcinak and McCreedy played shinniny on Winnipeg's streets 11 years ago.

At last night's game between two picked squads of the Leafs, Manager Conny Smythe revealed Kowcinak had rejected his offer of a contract. Thus the two buddies who have been on successive championship teams during the past four season will be shooting for their fifth title with the Millionaires.

Kowcinak and McCreedy won their first major championship crests playing for Winnipeg in 1937, the year the Monarchs won the Memorial Cup and National Junior honors. The next season they helped Trail Smoke Eaters bring the Allan Cup to British Columbia.

Another Crack Team

In 1939 Smoke Eaters toured Europe and won a world's amateur tournament there, and last season as members of Kirkland Lake's classy Blue Devils, Kowcinak and McCreedy were stars in that club's drive to the Allan Cup.

Kowcinak wouldn't comment last night on his rejection of Smythe's offer. But he seemed happy about the prospect of serving up goal-scoring passes for McCreedy for another season.

Mel Snowden, captain of the Blue Devils last season, is already located at Sydney, while Blink Bellinger, a fourth member of the Kirkland Lake club is endeavoring to get his release from Niagara Falls of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association in order to join the Millionaires.

Bellinger was also with the Leafs in training, and played on the same line with Kowcinak and McCreedy during the practice games.

Whether it means anything, the three amateurs played for Hap Day's Whites in the intra-club games against Eddie Power's Blues, and the Whites took both games of the series.

Canada Piles Up Picture Record of RCAF

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Pictures are piling up in headquarters offices of the Royal Canadian Air Force and at some future time will form a complete record of Canada's war-time history in the air.

Staff photographers have been taken on strength of the air force from the ranks of news photographers to handle camera reporting for the R.C.A.F. in Canada. Their job is to show in pictures every angle of the Dominion's air expansion program and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

For nearly six months Jack Dalgleish and Bert Johnson, former camera newshawks of the Windsor Star, have been air force staffmen on assignment.

Not only will their pictures some day take a place in the national archives of Canada but copies of them are going out to photograph agencies which supply the world's publications—carrying Canada's air story to the four corners of the earth.

As each air school is opened one of these photographers is usually on hand to take shots of its buildings, personnel and different aspects of the training. The best are published or go into files at R.C.A.F. headquarters.

These are supplemented by photographs taken by men attached to each school.

From the thousands accumulating, those suitable to tell a connected story will be selected by the official air force historian, Sqdn.-Ldr. Kenneth Conn of Ottawa.

Alex Campbell Acting Sheriff

LINDSAY, Nov. 1.—(ENS)—The announcement has been made that Alex. J. Campbell of Lindsay has been appointed to the office of acting Sheriff of Victoria Country for the duration of the war. He succeeds Jasper Forman, who is at present in His Majesty's Service.

Gas Tank Explodes.

A peculiar accident occurred near Donald, Haliburton, this week. A large truck belonging to the White Star Mines was proceeding from Lochlin to the Haliburton stone quarry when the gas tank exploded completely destroying the cab and damaging other portions of the truck. Jack Thayer was the driver, and it is believed that the accident was caused by the gasoline leaking from the tank onto the exhaust pipe.

Killed in Detroit

Mrs. William Wynn, of Haliburton was killed in a motor accident near Detroit on Monday. One daughter and son were also injured. The party was on its way to the American city when the accident occurred.

May House Battalion

It has been unofficially anncunced here that a battalion of infantry numbering in the neighborhood of 900 men, may be quartered in Lindsay during the winter months. The report is that the building formerly occupied by the Lindsay Distillers may be used to house the troops. It is a large stone structure and in good condition. The building had been inspected recently, and an estimate of the cost of preparing it for occupation made.

Mrs. Mary Burns, an aged woman, residing with her son John Burns, town, fell down a flight of 18 steps at the latter's home on Tuesday and was badly injured. She was removed to the Ross Hospital, where it was found necessary to put 28 stitches in her head.

Democrats Battle To Retain Weight in Lower House

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(CP)—The Democratic party in its battle to retain control in the United States House of Representatives — the equivalent of the Canadian House of Commons—in the Nov. 5 election has the advantage of a bloc of 51 members who face no opposition.

These democrats are spread over 11 states, mostly in the "solid south." The Republicans on the other hand have only seven candidates without opposition.

The Democratic party has controlled the House since 1932 and reached its peak in 1936. But in 1938 a strong reaction set in in several key states and the Republicans made considerable gains.

The standings after the last five elections were:

Year	Total	Rep.	Dem.	Ind.
1930	435	220	214	1
1932	435	117	313	5
1934	435	103	322	10
1936	435	89	333	13
1938	435	169	262	4

The Republican 1938 gains, coming a year after the Supreme Court controversy and in the midst of the "purge" of Democrats unfriendly to President Roosevelt, were made largely in big industrial states such as Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Jersey.

Question of South

Republican leaders have sought through the campaign now drawing to a close to increase this trend away from the administration in these key states which they must sweep to get control of the House.

They concede there is little chance of picking up any seats in the south but they hope to gain at least a few in the west. A swing of 48 seats away from the Democratic ranks would give the Republicans control.

The Democrats on their part express belief that the Republicans reached highwater in 1938 and that the administration will retain just about all of their present seats, perhaps a handful turning over to the oppositions.

Recalls Thrill Of First Trip In Enemy's Air

LONDON, Nov. 1—(CP). — Two hundred hours flying over enemy territory in little more than three months is the record of a 21-year-old Canadian pilot officer who has packed so much adventure into that short period—and won the Distinguished Flying Cross—that he finds it difficult to decide which was the most exciting trip.

He joined the Royal Air Force two years ago and one night in June undertook his first operation flight as navigator and second pilot.

"I don't think I shall ever forget that first trip," he said. "Our target was supply trains and railway lines south of Liege.

"As this was to be my baptism of fire the pilot wanted to let me down gently, so he kept the aircraft fairly high. My first impression of the 'ack-ack' was that it was pretty. It didn't strike me then that it was even dangerous and I persuaded the pilot to go down a bit lower. I told him this would give me a better opportunity to aim my bombs properly.

"The bombs hit the target fair and square and large pieces of twisted metal were thrown high into the air. The track for many yards was completely wrecked.

"This first journey was soon followed by 15 others and on each of these trips I was second pilot and navigator. On one occasion, just before we made our bombings, the pilot turned too quickly and we found ourselves in a spin. At the time we were only 800 feet up and had our bomb doors open ready to make our attack.

"I rushed from my perch in the nose to the centre of the aircraft and unfused the bombs. We were then only a few feet above the tree tops but the pilot managed to regain control in time.

"We then flew back to our target, whilst I fused the bombs again, and I am glad to say that after that almost spiral dive we had the pleasure of seeing some more railway lines blown sky high."

Other operations in which this pilot has taken part were against enemy shipping, oil refineries, aircraft factories, channel ports and objectives in Berlin and Stettin.

Twice he has had to abandon his aircraft over the North Sea, but on both occasions no lives were lost. The second "dip in the sea" occurred during a return flight from Stettin. The bomber came down half a mile from the coast and within 200 yards of a friendly minesweeper which picked up the crew and brought them safely to port.

"Then we were attacking the Leuna chemical works and we flew so low that we only just missed the chimneys and I noticed there were only 10 of them," he said. "There were certainly 13 before the attack started."

We'll Hold On

London, Nov. 1. (CP)

HERBERT MORRISON, Minister of Home Security, said today that while Britain has "no cause for complacency" he detected "no sign of cracking under the strain of night bombings and overcrowded shelters."

"We'll hold on," Mr. Morrison said. "We are grateful to the American people (for supplies) and when the time comes for the British army to strike, we can thank the efforts, courage and guts of our people and the co-operation, good fellowship and friendship of the United States."

The minister said the civil defence organizations, derided before the aerial siege of Britain began, had shown "heroism worthy of the best soldiers in the line in London, Liverpool, Birmingham and various parts of the country."

DriveOnKwangsi Costs Japs 74,000 Troops

CHUNGKING, Nov. 1.—(AP).—The Central (Chinese) News Agency reported Thursday that Japanese campaign centring around Nanning in Kwangsi province had cost the invaders 74,000 men through death, injury or illness.

The Japanese were estimated to have employed about 114,000 troops in the operations. Kwangsi is notorious for its epidemics, and illness was said to have been responsible for the greatest havoc among the Japanese forces.

Japan's gains have in no way matched the cost of the Kwangsi campaign, the agency said, especially now that her troops have withdrawn from Nanning, an action hailed her as "a heavy blow" to Japanese prestige.

(The Japanese claimed they had withdrawn "voluntarily" from Nanning because the city had lost its strategic importance with the acquisition of new Japanese bases in French Indo-China.)

Reports from Hong Kong said Chinese troops re-entered Nanning Tuesday and received a jubilant welcome from flag-waving crowds.

2,000 Desert To Kai Shek.

HONG KONG, Oct. 31.—(AP).—Two thousand Chinese troops recruited by the Japanese in Eastern Shantung province were reported by the Central (Chinese) News Agency to have surrendered to the forces of Gen. Kai-Shek.

To demonstrate their new loyalty to Chiang, the agency said, the troops later participated in an attack on Japanese positions near Kiaochow Bay.

The agency estimated the Japanese had suffered 2,500 casualties in battle at Shaohsing, famous wine-making centre in Chekiang province, which the Chinese reported they had recaptured earlier this week.

Aim To Prosecute Draft Evaders

OTTAWA, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Just how many men evaded the first call for military training which started last Oct. 9 has not yet come to the attention of Ottawa authorities yet but at the Department of National War Services it was said today that prosecutions of those who dodged the call illegally may be expected shortly.

It was explained that any follow-up action on these persons is a matter for the administrative boards and divisional registrars in the 13 administrative divisions into which Canada was divided for registration.

Full particulars on those who defied the orders to proceed to military training centres for Oct. 9 is in the hands of the divisional registrars.

Any legal action taken will be under the National War Services regulations, which calls for a penalty on conviction of imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months with or without hard labor, or a fine not exceeding $200 and not less than $50 or to both imprisonment and such fine."

Heads Flying School

Wing Commander B. F. Johnson, formerly of Halifax, will be in command of No. 5 Service Flying School which will open at Brantford on Nov. 11.

ORANGES FOR ARGENTINA

With Brazil having a surplus crop of oranges and Argentina facing a shortage of the fruit, the Brazilian Government obtained the use of two Swedish refrigerator ships formerly used for carrying oranges from Palestine and Spain to Sweden.

Spirit Of Poland Far From Broken

LONDON, Nov. 1.—(CP Cable)—The Polish Telegraph Agency said on Tuesday that "a new series of execution sentences published recently in the German newspapers of Poland confirm anew the spirit of resistance is well alive among Poles."

The agency said a Polish workman was sentenced to death for hiding three rifles and 67 rounds of ammunition, and two others for illegal possession of arms.

A similar sentence was imposed at Lodz upon a peasant who fired his farm rather than have it fall into German hands.

At Hohensalza, a German court sentenced an aged woman and her son for informing Polish authorities of German espionage work.

In Grudiadz, two Polish women were sentenced to three years and six months' imprisonment for hiding a Pole who was sentenced to death.

In Kalisz, the Germans sentenced a woman of 69 to a month in jail for sending to her daughter at a German farm letters containing news from the British Broadcasting Corporation's news bulletin in Polish. The daughter was given the same sentence for receiving the news.

CHAPTER 51

"COME OUT of here, then." Blair started toward the door, and Charlie, the sailor, smelling ready cash, followed him somewhat unsteadily.

Blair breathed more freely in the air again. The smoke and cheap liquor fumes in the room had nearly choked him.

"I ran away from the ship," Charlie informed him. "Couldn't stand it no longer. An' say, you won't tell on me, will ya? Promise?"

Blair promised.

"I....say, promise again?"

Impatient, Blair promised again. Time was passing rapidly, and Charlie was taking his time telling what he knew.

"I...ya know what...I jammed up that engine! Yes, I did, and I'm damn glad I did it. If I hadn't, God knows when we'd been off the ship. We'd been dead somewheres in the Pacific! Dropped a file in the engine ...that shows how bad I wanted to get off that ship! Say, she's a crazy ship...or maybe ya know. Had a helluva time doin' the damage, but I done 'er. An' I'd do it again, if I got on such a rig again."

"Where's the Wanderer now?"

But Charlie ignored the question.

"Yeh, I'd do 'er again. I seen some things on board that ship that was the devil's doin's I jus' tadda git off ...an' the other boys, too. Only me, I had the nerve, and they didn' ...but they suspect, I guess, that I done the trick. Soon's we anchored in the harbor...an' we had a devil of a time gettin' in....I....I jumped over and swum to shore. Some of the others did, too.

"I was hired as a waiter... an' to help in the galley....an' seen enough....enough. The gal she's a pretty one an' I liked her...always so gentle, so kind, so kinda sad. She didn't like the ship neither, but she hadda stay, I guess. Poor thing. First time I seen her, I liked her, sittin' all alone in her stateroom....

"But the other stateroom...where he was....him that had only a voice! Lord, how I used to shiver when I went in there wit' his meals!

"'You fergot me coffee,' he says to me, an' I can't see him! I was scared to bring back the coffee, and I went to Captain O'Malley and told him what I heard...and he says to fetch him the coffee. The Cap, he looks kinda serious like, too. So I bring back the coffee and left it on the table; then he, the voice says, "That'll be all. You kin come back in an hour and clear away the dishes.' An' I come back in an hour and everythin' was et up! An' me a God fearin' man!

"That was dinner the first day, and all the other days was the same...me tremblin' in me boots for fear I'd hear a voice in there ...in the stateroom nex' the gal's ...and oft'times hearin' it. Never seein' the guy, but hearin' him talk at my elbow! Wonder I ain't got a head full o' white hair! But the worst was when they was married ...the purty gal and that ghost man, wit' only a voice. I could see the captain didn't wanta do it.... he was nervous as a cat.... and dropped his book. I was a witness ....and I was that scared, I ain't never goin' to git over it. The gal, sayin' I do', in a small voice.... the ghost man sayin' 'I do', in a big voice, but we don' see him. Cap pickin' up a ring from the table an' puttin' it on the gal's hand....a ring full o' stones....an' the gal faintin' dead away....me rushin' fer water and smellin' salts...."

"Where is the Wanderer now?"

Again Charlie ignored Blair's question. His head was in his hands, and his eyes were staring straight ahead. There was a look of fear in his honest blue eyes.

"That's the night I drop the file. The gal, she never came out on deck at all. An' when I took her breakfast in to her, the mornin' after she was hocked up to the ghost...she didn't want nothin'....just asked fer a drink o' water. I never did see such a pale face. An' wit' her yaller hair fallin' on her pillow, she looked swell. She wuz purty....

"Nobody never seen this ghost man on board...not even Cap O'Malley. An' he was worried, let me tell you! He wasn' the same man when we pulled in here as when we started from Vancouver. Not on your life. He'd aged...and a lot.

"Took the helm hisself after I put the engines on the bum...an' all we could do was make for port... an' he got us in. Never asked how it got broke...he shoulda...never did nothin' but stand days and nights at the wheel...he's a pippin.

"Nobody never saw this ghost guy get on the ship...just the gal... and I was standin' all the time at the plank, watchin'. Yet, the boys said later that the gal gave orders when she was on that half the luggage was to go in one stateroom and half in the other. This seemed all right then....we was anxious to get off....trip looked like a fine thing....and we was to get paid double if we stayed the year out.

"The shutters on Stateroom B was never open, so we couldn' see in if we wanted to. An' we didn't want to. We kept clear o' that deck, all right ...after we found out there was funny business goin' on."

"When did the Wanderer get to port?"

Charlie heard this time.

"Yesterday mornin' about 10. I was on shore by 11, wringing' me clothes out. Didn't even ask fer me pay, and I won't. Don't care if I never go to sea again."

"Is she still here?"

"She's supposed to pull out last night....but I don't think she's gone. Have to put a whole new engine in....can't repair it....I done a good job. Prob'ly have to have one made."

"Come down and point her out to me!"

"Say...are you tryin' to get me on that ship again?" Charlie started away, but Blair caught him by the sleeve.

"See here...I'll raise your $10 to $50 if you lead me to the ship!"

"You ain't wantin' to get me back?"

"No, I only want to get the girl out!"

"Sold!" Charlie grasped Blair's hand. "Kinda far from here."

"I have my car."

"Ruther walk. Don't git me on that ship again," he said grimly, pushing back his stiff blond hair with a dirty hand.

Blair followed him for about a mile up the road, then turned with Charlie on to a dock. At the end of the pier, Charlie pointed out in the water where the lights of a ship could be seen dancing.

"She's ready to go, I guess. Smoke's comin' from her stacks. Gettin' up steam. It'll take about an hour more, I'd guess."

"Can I get a launch around here?"

"Suppose so. Are you goin' give me that $50?"

Blair gave him the bill, and thanked him for his information.

"You say you want a launch?"

"Yes."

"Well, I guess I can try and find one fer you. Wait here." Charlie vanished in the darkness, still a little unsteady, but running nevertheless. He came back in about 15 minutes. Blair heard him calling from the water, below the pier.

"Gotta a small one," Charlie said. "Payin' a dollar an hour. Hadda wake a guy up. Say, you know what ...guess I'll go out with you. You're a good skate and I'd like to see that gal git off that there hellship."

He waited while Blair clambered down into the boat, and then swung the small boat around and headed toward the yacht, at full speed.

The waters were dark beneath them...ahead was the slender outline of the Wanderer.

"She's goin' out, I'm sure...we gotta hurry!"

A slight spray was hitting Blair's face, and the salt water stung his eyes, as the boat, low in the water, plowed swiftly toward the vessel.

Charlie was right. The Wanderer was getting up steam. When the launch neared her, the two men could hear the engines turning.

"Better turn off the power," Blair warned. "They might hear us... we can row to her."

"They can't hear nothin'. The engines is turnin'." However, Charlie did turn off the power, and they ficated to the side of the Wanderer. Blair blessed the dark...otherwise the launch might be seen.

"How can we make it up the side?" Blair whispered softly to Charlie.

"Leave it to me, and hand me that rope!"

Blair obeyed and Charlie, curling the end into a lariat, with a mighty swing of his arm, threw the line. A soft thud, and Blair saw it around a rail post. Charlie made it fast to the launch. Then light as a cat the youth climbed the rope. Blair waited until he was up, before he started.

It was harder climbing for the older man. He had not tried to shinny up a rope since his boyhood.

However, he made it slowly, and when on the rail, let himself gently to the deck.

"The gal's stateroom is 'A' on the port side. 'B' is right next to it. You'd better go ahead. I'm gettin' scared."

Canadian Freighter Torpedoed In North Atlantic

The freighter St. Malo, which was commandeered by Canada after the French capitulation has been torpedoed in the North Atlantic, carrying a crew of Canadians. Sixteen survivors have been landed in England and 28 members of the crew are feared lost. The Maurienne, a sister ship of the St. Malo, is shown ABOVE, shortly after it also was commandeered by Canada. Both vessels formerly were engaged in the West Indies fruit trade before the war.

Where Greeks And Italians Fight

Italian troops claim to have pierced the Greek border (1) on the line to Salonika and in the Epirus region (2). The Greek high command have acknowledged that the Italian forces were striking hard in the Epirus region but did not confirm Italian claims of advances. Reports from Greece indicate that British forces have not seized Corfu (3), as reported several times, and are unlikely to occupy the island because of its vulnerability from Italian air attacks.

HE FELT MISERABLE AFTER MEALS

Acute Indigestion Relieved by Kruschen

The treatment which put this man right must surely be worth trying in every case of indigestion. Read what he says:—

"Two years ago I suffered very much from indigestion, loss of appetite, and a most severe pain in my back. Food soured in my stomach. I felt most miserable after meals, and had no desire or appetite for them. A friend advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and I am most happy to testify that after a short time I felt the greatest relief. I continued taking Kruschen till I felt myself quite better and a new man. I feel as light-hearted as I did twenty years ago."—W.B.

The several salts in Kruschen combine to get at the root of many common ills. They help promote regularity and help cleanse your system each day of poisons and impurities. Millions take the "little daily dose." At all drugstores.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1 — (AP).—The Los Angeles metropolitan area felt a jolting earthquake at 11.26 o'clock last night (12.26 a.m. Friday, EDT). The trembior lasted several seconds and came in a rolling motion. No damage was reported. In Glendale, sleepers were awakened and windows rattled. Santa Monica residents felt the shock, as did other beach cities in the West Bay area.

Greece along serviceable roads.

The Greek defences in the Phlorina area were said to be especially effective, but the Italians, should they get across the mountain, may play havoc with Greek rearline communications with their mechanized equipment.

Belgrade press reports indicated the only positive Italian success so far was in the Ioannina (Janina) sector at the opposite end of the battlefront, where the invaders were said to have reached the Kalmas River valley.

It was believed here, however, that this push was secondary in importance to the drive toward Salonika via Phlorina.

Reports from Greek sources that British Royal Air Force planes accompanied by a few Greek aircraft had bombed Tirana and Albanian ports were unconfirmed.

The British Fleet, however, was said to have completed its work of throwing a net of mines around Salonika and other Greek harbors and a steady stream of British supply ships and transports was reported steaming across the Mediterranean in convoy.

Thain To Die

to make your peace with the Omnipotent God, the Great Judge, whose mercy is everlasting. There remains for me to pass upon you the dreadful sentence of the law."

"You will be taken to the place whence you came and on Tuesday, January 14, taken to a place of execution and there hanged by the neck until you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul."

Thain entered the crowded courtroom with the ever-present smile on his face. He glanced quickly about the room, then relaxed in his seat, his arms folded across his breast. He appeared to lapse into brief periods of thought, staring absently at an object in front of him. At times he moistened his lips with his tongue. His glance swept over the jury as they filed into their seats.

Expression Never Changed

When the fateful word, "Guilty," rang out in the crowded courtroom, he closed his eyes for a fraction of a second, but his expression never changed. His hands dropped to his lap and remained clasped there. Again he moistened his lips, and a fleeting glance as if of pain flashed over his face. He quickly regained his composure, and again he glanced at the jury, this time smiling.

He stood firm and erect as sentence was passed. He left the courtroom with a quick steady step. The smile was still on his features as he disappeared from view.

The death-sentence was the finale to a dramatic sequence of events that followed one of the most shocking murders in Hastings county. Assistant Attorney-General Cecil L. Snyder, Toronto, conducted the prosecution, with Robert D. McCulloch, Belleville, representing the accused Thain. The dramatic story of the theft of grain, established by the crown to be the motive for the murder; followed by the double killings, the purchase of shotgun shells at a nearby country store, and the uncovering of other important evidence were some of the highlights of the brief trial.

Thain's boast of the killing of Arnold Wellman to fellow prisoners in the gaol here; his statement of confession to provincial police officers, and his story of the killing and theft to an officer of the law were threads in a dramatic pattern that finally wove the dread sentence of death about the accused man.

Charged With Double Murder

Thain was charged with the murder of both Arnold and Nancy Wellman on separate counts. The body of the former was found beside a blood-spattered cow in the Wellman stable, while the body of the aged farmer's wife was discovered in her bed where she had been writing a letter to her daughter. The gruesome finding was made by Edward Faulkner, rural mail-courier, who had been requested to "look in" on her parents by Dr. Victoria Wellman, daughter of the slain couple.

Thain was arrested at his home on February 2, while eating supper, by Inspector A. L. Ward, C.I.B. A shotgun that smelled strongly of powder and a bloodstained pair of overalls were found in the house. Spent shells were found in the Thain barn and also in the Wellman barn. A box of ammunition which included one proved by evidence to be those purchased by Thain was found beneath some boards in his barn.

The convicted man gave a voluntary statement to police officers in which he confessed to the theft of the grain and to the double killing. The fact that this statement was given voluntarily, proved a strong factor in the Crown's case. Defence consisted of Drs. E. A. Clarke, Ontario Hospital, Kingston, and George A. Tennant, Brockville Hospital, whose evidence revealed that Thain "was at all times normal and responsible for his actions."

Seymour Home, Contents Lost In Fire

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1. — (ENS).—The stone foundation walls are all that is left of a fine old Seymour township residence following a fire which completely razed the building early Thursday evening. Owned by James Nelson, famed breeder of Holstein cattle that are annually listed among the leading prize winners at all the fairs in this district, the building was a modernized frame structure that had stood as a landmark on the 6th concession for more than half a century.

The blaze is thought to have started sometime before five o'clock standard time while all of the occupants of the house were out. Mrs. Nelson and her daughter Helen were in the barn and happened to look out to see the smoke pouring from the summer kitchen. The smoke had already given way to flames which began licking around the eaves of the house before they were able to call the aid of Craig Nelson, a member of the same family who lives across the road, who in the meantime had already seen the smoke and called the Campbellford fire department, four miles away, in an effort to get help. James Nelson, who had been working in a field some distance from the house was last to reach the scene.

Attracted by the flames and requests for help which soon sped over the telephone from one farm to another, nearly one hundred farmers joined in a fruitless effort to save the building. The work of a bucket brigade was brought to an abrupt halt as the well, located two hundred yards away, went dry, while another pump located on the back verandah, was rendered useless by the heat.

So rapid was the spread of the flames that the only items saved were those in the front half of the house on the ground floor. Here friends assisted in removing a piano and Chesterfield suite before the heat and smoke made further entrance impossible. On arriving at the scene several members of the Campbellford fire department assisted with chemicals but the flames had progressed too far for their work to be of any help.

The steel roofed barn 600 feet east of the dwelling was undamaged by the flames while loss to the house and its contents, which is partially covered by insurance, was set at over $4,000.

Woman Suffers Injuries To Back

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1—(ENS)—Slowing down to give aid to a stranded motorist cost Mrs. Ross Stephens a trip to the doctor and minor injuries to her back. She was driving south along the Stirling Road at seven o'clock in the evening when she saw Tom Chadwick, who had run out of gas and parked on a side road, run out to signal her to stop. As she slowed down Fred Kirkpatrick, of Belleville, who was following, collided with the rear end of Mrs. Stephens' car. Damage to the Kirkpatrick car was estimated at $50, according to Police Constable George Hardy, who investigated the accident.

NOT SO SOON.

Committee members of the Saturday Night Club at the Y.M.C.A. had hoped to start the fall program this week, but now find that owing to the manifold preparations they will not be able to have the opening dance until Saturday, November 9.

ALL SAINTS DAY

Dick Ford was playing on the chimes of St. John's Church this morning at 10 o'clock, All Saints Day, the hymn "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

ENGINEER ARRIVES

Duncan A. MacIver, recently appointed county engineer and road superintendent in the absence of E. A. Chalmers on war service, was moving his furniture to Peterborough today, preparatory to beginning his new duties here.

OFFER ACCEPTED

Alderman Herb McCannan, reported Thursday night that Herb Tranter had offered $175.00 for a lot on Stewart street directly opposite a property already owned by Tranter. The offer was accepted. Mr. Tranter proposes to connect the sewer from Stewart street across this lot to the house on the other lot which is not suitably located for connection with the nearest street sewer.

COUNCIL APPROVED

Expressions of opinion from different members of the City Council on Thursday indicated the men are strongly in favor of a big drive for tourist trade. They approved an appropriation of $75 covering a dinner at the Empress at which resort owners in the district will be guests, and a colored film, "The Call of the Kawarthas" will be given its premier showing.

MAYOR IS ABSENT

Mayor James Hamilton was absent from the committee meetings Thursday night. He had gone to Waterloo to attend the funeral of his sister-in-law, the late Mrs. Walter Somerville, formerly Elizabeth Irwin, daughter of the late Bill Irwin of this city. Mayor Hamilton's wife, who died some years ago, was a sister of Mrs. Somerville.

MATERIAL IS READY.

Work is now proceeding at the present time on the large drill hall which is to be be built at the Exhibition Grounds for winter training of the soldiers. The concrete footings and floors have been completed, along with the chimney and the rest of the material is piled ready for the workers. The Engineers, however, along with the men supposed to complete the building are reported to have been transferred to Petawawa to complete a rush job.

SOUNDED REALISTIC.

A gramophone rigged like a radio in a local shop was rolling out from a record the eye-witness story of the Air Battle Over the English Channel as broadcast on July 24 by Charles Gardner. A woman customer listened intently apparently thinking this account was spot news coming in over the air. Then when the disc reached the end, a young clerk turned on a jitterbug dance number, and the woman, surprised by the intrusion, left the store in disgust.

HALLOWE'EN CONTRAST

Kindly people who are still young enough to enter into the spirit of the children's Hallowe'en would have had their reward if they could have watched the youngsters from four and five years to eight counting the evening's harvest, apples and candies, taffy and so on. There was bright-eyed innocence happy in the generosity of folks along the street, and by contrast shortly after eleven and on to midnight in the uptown centre were the hilarious adults, especially some beered and profane women to whom most ordinary folks simply can't get accustomed.

HE SHOULD CELEBRATE.

Today is All Saints' Day, a holy day of obligation, to the Roman Catholics, but to Spero Zakos, it is also most eventful. It is his birthday, and added to this his wedding anniversary. He was married four years ago today.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS UP

The receipts at the Customs House have shown an appreciable increase in the last year. The total receipts for the month of October were $274,893.13 while the returns for September were $219,108.37. The receipts for October last year were $173,846.50.

DRUNK ON BICYCLE.

Trying to ride a bicycle while under the influence of liquor proved a tough proposition for a local man yesterday. He managed to ride his bicycle into a parked car, and as a result faced a drunk charge in Police Court this morning, and was fined $10, and $3 costs.

BIG RAFT OF DUCKS.

Among the late arriving ducks at Rice Lake are big blue bills and grey backs, Hanlon Howard of Hiawatha told the Examiner to-day. Thousands of these wild fowl, their summer in the north behind them, are rafted out in the centre of the lake down toward Keene.

COWS LOOSE

Residents of that part of Ashburnham nearest the C.P.R. Bridge, may have thought that Hallowe'en was responsible for the mooing of cows that was heard Thursday night. The cows, belonging to Canada Packers, are grazing in the Peterborough Lumber Company's old mill yard, and some of them managed to walk around the fence at the lake, and until they were put back today were in danger of being struck by a train.

A FAIR OFFER.

Members of the Board of Works expressed gratitude last evening for the fair offer extended the Board by Mrs. R. Henry to sell a portion of a lot owned by her and fronting Rogers Street. The land is needed to permit widening of Clifton Street. One quarter of the lot was sold to the city for $50, and the total assessment price of the entire lot was $200.

SWITCH IS DAMAGED.

A C.N.R. switch on Bethune Street was damaged late last night when a car driven, according to the police report, by Leonard Godwin, a trainee at the local military camp, crashed into it. The automobile was also damaged by the impact. Godwin reported the accident to two young men, asking them to report to the police station, as he was in a hurry to get back to camp before his leave expired.

"LORDS OF THE AIR."

"England My Island Home" is a thematic line from a splendid record "Lords of the Air" played by His Majesty's Grenadier Guards Band, and sung by Dennis Noble and male quartette. With the indulgence of the advertising department for the sake of something stirringly patriotic that has genuine music value above the sentimentality of "There'll Always Be An England" this comment is passed along.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

A young man who pleaded guilty in Police Court on Thursday to stealing three pair of skis, two ski poles, and three sets of ski harness from the Peterborough Canoe Company, where he had been employed, was allowed to go on suspended sentence when Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry concurred in the decision of the Magistrate to give the youth another chance. It was the first offence for the accused, who was defended by John A. Bradshaw.

Cans Wanted On Account Of Steel Content

Scrap metal of every description, much of it valuable, is pouring into the city yard on Townsend Street in response to the city wide appeal made recently by the Women's Auxiliary War Services of Peterborough.

Every cent obtained from the sale of this metal will go to relieve distress in the large cities of Great Britain which have been subjected to enemy bombing.

City garbage collectors started the collecting of the metals last Monday and each day the piles at the city yard have been growing. Brass, bronze, copper, and aluminum command the best price in the scrap metal market to-day, and stove plate comes next.

Papers, rags, tin cans, and in short almost every type of waste materials in the form of metal or cloth is wanted in this drive. The plan is for each householder to place the scrap in a container or in a small pile beside the garbage cans, and it will be picked up by the garbage collectors and taken to the city yard scrap depot for sorting and piling.

A market has been obtained for tin cans, but they must be burned first. The burning gets rid of all the tin, and the steel that remains is of good quality, and can be baled and used over again after being melted down. If the cans are melted before burning, the tin gives considerable trouble, clogging furnaces and putting a scum on the top of the molten metal.

The drive is continuing and everyone should co-operate to the fullest extent posible. The response has been so great that it is likely city officials may consent to have Mr. Withers and his men use the truck for a few more days to cover the sections of the city that they have not been able to canvass this week.

All Ready For Battle But Fight Blew Up

John Brown, the bewhiskered transient, with the powerful voice, took almost complete command over the police court this morning when he appeared on remand on a charge of vagrancy. He began a tirade as soon as his name was called and kept it up for five minutes without taking a breath, during which time he expressed his opinion of the police, the magistrate and Canada's whole system of justice, in a loud voice and a very capable vocabulary in which the word "diabolical" was called upon several times.

When he finally stopped for breath and found that no evidence was being offered against him and that he was free to go, John looked a trifle disappointed. He was geared for battle and obviously hated to have the fight blow up in his face.

Police escorted him out on to the highway in a cruiser car to make sure that he got a good start out of town and Brown complained that "the judge didn't say anything about that."

OBITUARIES

JAMES FRANCIS McEVOY

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1 (ENS) —Funeral services were held here Thursday morning for the late James Francis McEvoy, 56, Centre street, who died on Tuesday following a brief illness. A resident of this town for the past thirty years the deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McEvoy, and was born in West Huntingdon. He had been an employee in the pulp mill here for many years. Mr. McEvoy was of a quiet disposition, a good father and a devout Catholic. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow and two sons, Vincent and Francis, and one daughter, Irene, all of town; one brother, Hugh of Vancouver, B.C., and a sister, Mrs. Mary Underdown, Bellevue, Ohio.

Requiem mass was sung by Rev. J. V. McAuley at St. Mary's church, and interment was made at St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. GEORGE WILKES

MARMORA, Nov. 1.—(ENS)—A shock was felt in the community on Wednesday as residents learned of the death in Belleville of Mrs. George Wilkes of Marmora.

In her forty-ninth year, Mrs. Wilkes was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rowan of Sidney Township, her maiden name being Margaret Ellen Rowan. She was well respected for many fine qualities, was of a friendly disposition and had a sympathetic heart for those in distress. She will be rembered as a good neighbor, both in the village and in the township where in turn she resided. Wide sympathy is extended her husband in the loss of a beloved wife.

In addition to being survived by her and three children, Pearl (Mrs. W. G. Chrysler,) John and Earl; she is also survived by one sister, Mrs. William Wickson of Sidney Township. The funeral left her late residence at 2 p.m. daylight saving time on Friday for service at St. Andrew's United Church at 2:30 p.m. Interment took place in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

15 Men Offered Services When Call Made

Many of the 21-year-olds taking the first month of compulsory military training at the Exhibition Grounds, Army Training Centre, No. 32, are active service minded.

This was revealed yesterday when Major W. E. Steenburg, Officer Commanding the 3rd 47th Medium Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery at Kingston, paid a visit to the camp and asked for recruits for the unit, to go on active service and act as signallers with the artillery.

Major Steenberg was en route to Lindsay with Major Williams to inspect the 4th Anti-Tank Regiment, at the Armouries there.

15 Applied

When the word was passed down from the officer commanding the camp to the company commanders and thence to the platoon sergeants, 15 men stepped out and asked for the chance of signing up. This was fifty per cent more than was actually needed. Ten of the fifteen have been selected and will go before an active service medical board on Monday. If they pass and they no doubt will because they passed a rigid medical test on admission to the camp, they will be ordered to report for duty at Kingston on Thursday, November 7. That is, they will complete their thirty day training period before moving into the active service bracket.

A communication came through from the recruiting officer in Kingston this morning seeking two buglers to go on active service with a Forestry unit, and this information will be posted on the bulletin boards. If any man in the camp has the qualifications he can step up into active service.

Late Leave

Last night the men were given late leave until 11.30 for the second time since being in camp, and according to camp officers not a trainee failed to appear when the roll call was made. The members of the permanent staff were out until twelve with the exception of the men who had to be on hand to take the roll call.

Training is proceeding apace and the boys are having fun doing it. Today the men training in platoons with rifles and web equipment, went through their paces smoothly, and with grins on their faces as the N.C.O.'s tried to cross them up with rapid commands.

Captain E. M. Jones, adjutant, answering a question, said no stripes would be given to men of the first draft who had shown exceptional promise and ability. This procedure had taken place at a camp in the Toronto area, where 40 men were given corporal's stripes and a raise in pay to meet the promotion.

Auto Caps Found In Mail Boxes; Fences Upset

Although there were some instances of inexcusable property damage, Peterborough's celebration of Hallowe'en Thursday night was pronounced by the police department as keeping within bounds fairly well. The police force, divided up into five squads and using five automobile patrolled the city, broke up gangs here and there and got by without making an arrest.

Chief damage was to fences and steps. Sections of fences were torn down or pushed over in different parts of the city, probably the worst damage being done to the fence on the Hamilton property on Rubidge street and to fences in the Homewood-Belmont sector.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. McCusker, 573 King street, were out for a while last night. They returned home to find seven panes of glass broken by hoodlums who had thrown stones through windows.

Removing Grates

A silly practice was the removal of grates and manhole covers from the streets. Several instances of that were reported during the night one grate being removed from near St. Andrew's church and another further west.

The Post Office reports a new form of Hallowe'en mischief. Mail boxes in the Normal School neighborhood were found to contain radiator caps unscred from automobiles and tossed into the mail boxes to get rid of them. Altogether 18 or 20 caps were found in the boxes. More serious was the breaking of glass on some boxes apparently with an air rifle.

Downtown hundreds of masqueraded around the business section wearing all kinds of striking costumes, some of them pneumonia-inviting in their airiness on a chilly October night. Trainees from the military camp, many of them wearing masks were prominent in the merry-making on the down town streets.

Earlier in the night young Peterborough, in costume, was out en masse in search of "shell-out" candy and apples. In all sections of the city homes were visited by the children and most of them "shelled out" promptly.

It was a big night for the kids—and for many who passed out of that category years ago.

It looked as though night raiders in full force had descended upon the fence of the Frank J. Hamilton property at Hall and Rubidge streets. Almost the entire frontage had been torn down.

The fenced-in vacant property on Weller street at the corner of Belmont received hard treatment during the night, and several sections of it were flattened, but none taken away.

Spaniards Keep Carol Worried

SEVILLE, Spain, Nov. 1—(AP)—Former King Carol of Rumania personally solicited an interview today with Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, to seek permission to proceed to Portugal. No reply has been received.

Carol and his companions, Mme. Magda Lupescu and Ernst Urdareanu, one-time Minister of the palace in Bucharest, have been under a polite form of arrest here for more than a week while Spain has debated their fate.

The former King also protested to the local governor against thte police preventing him from leaving his hotel quarters. Members of his entourage say he spends most of his time pacing his room, smoking, while Madame Lupescu knits.

Another problem faced Carol, when the servants who accompanied him from Rumania received notification they must return home or lose their citizenship.

Soldiers Enlisting With First Division Remind Council They Did Not Get Watches

Two letters from Peterborough soldiers in far-away England to Mayor Hamilton, read at the meeting of the Finance committee last night, made the members of council scratch their head in wonder at another new problem.

The gist of the two letters was that many Peterborough boys had enlisted in centres outside of this city, long before there was any recruiting done here, and that not one of these early recruits had received a watch from the city council. The letters explained that soldiers in England had received copies of The Examiner in which they read of the presentations to the Engineers, the 4th Anti-Tank, and the Glengarries.

The Mayor had also received letters from members of the Veterans' Guard of Canada, stating that they too would like mementos from the council. One letter included the names of every veteran from this city who is on guard duty at Fort Henry.

Alderman Dutton raised the question of whether it would be possible to ascertain the names of all local soldiers who are now serving in England, and it was decided to have City Clerk E. A. Outram write to the officer commanding District No. 3.

It was the opinion of the council members that the boys who enlisted early before any recruiting was done in this city had every right to a watch, if anything even more right, because they were so keen to do their bit, that they hiked many miles to don the uniform.

The question is to get ample consideration within the next month.

Canadian Is Plowing Champion

Fred Timbers, 33, who tills 112 acres of soil near Stouffville, Ont., here cleans his plow, after winning the first international plowing contest held near Davenport, Ia. He scored 92.95 of a possible 100 points to nose out Graeme Stewart, of Plainfield, Ill., with 92 points.

Snowplow Bids Are Higher

Years of service were taken into consideration at a meeting of the Board of Works Thursday night when tenders for snow and slush removal from city streets during the coming winter were considered.

In general all tenders submitted showed a tendency to higher bids, and there were a few new bidders in the number who sought contracts.

In No. 2 district, W. J. Stinson had the contract last year for $200, and was given it again this year at $225.

In No. 3 district, Gordon Frise, last year's snowplough man, submitted the lowest figure, $250, and got the job. He had been paid $230 last year.

No. 4 was plowed last year by R. J. Manley at a price of $300, but this year, J. A. Mason, a newcomer, took the contract with a low bid of $285.

No. 5, the Downer's Corners section, went to W. Withers again. He had it last year for $290, and this year the contract is ten dollars higher.

No. 6 was held last year by Charles Collins for $300, but this year there was no bidder on this section, and it was tentatively awarded to Robert J. Manley at the same figure as last year.

No. 7 went to Bob Mitchell, who had it last year at $125, and Jim Conroy submitted a bid of $124 for the same contract.

No. 8 also went to Bob Mitchell for $135, no change from last year, and he was the only bidder on No. 8 section.

RETRIBUTION

All in good spirit is the "horseplay" between the men at the Training Centre and the N.C.O.'s. The men have been thinking hard in the direction of tricks to even the score with the instructors, and the tricks include every thing from "French beds" to songs.

The making of French beds has become more than popular in the last week, and more than one N.C.O. has gone to bed a bit rumpled. The men fold the top-sheet back in such a manner, that when the occupant tries to really get into bed, he finds he can get no farthur than about half way. The joke is just what the name implies though, and is enjoyed by all, even the victim.—H.

EXPERIMENT IN SLEEP

Two of the trainees at the Exhibition camp, Army Training Centre No. 32, have decided to make an unusual request. It will be directed to Lt. Col. E. O. Keller, M.C., V.D.

Jack Jopling, and Max Reid have enjoyed the camp except for two things. First, they have not been pleased with the early rising, and restrictions as to late leave have been disappointing.

The two boys have decided to ask permission to return to the camp the night it is over for them, and they intend to come in at 2:00 a.m., and then to sleep in until noon. "Just to see how it feels."—H.

County Road Money Spent

A member of the county council told The Examiner recently that most of the road work has been suspended, excepting necessary repairs, for the paramount reason that "we have run out of funds."

Presumbaly this means that the appropriation for county road work has been expended, and when you have no more money you can't buy things, such as men's labor. The county's credit stands high, but county councillors don't like deficits. They have a disagreeable note to them as they re-echo into the townships.

"We bought a new grader this year; cost $8,000; and we paid for it out of pocket," this councillor said. "That meant we couldn't get a grant from the government, because they cut out the 50-50 they used to pay. They have got over helping counties to buy, and thereby invest money in high priced machinery that may not have been entirely necessary, and wasn't used half the time.

It seems to me we might have financed it differently, spread over some years, possibly, and that would have left us most of the $8,000, and we could have got 50-50 rebates from the government on the time actually used by the machine. They are willing to make that contribution to county road work because it is money spent on work done. And now the county money has run out and some repairs are being made, but the roads have a way of needing quite a bit of upkeep at this time of the year."

Erect Tablet To Memory Of Late Clerk

A marble or bronze tablet suitably inscribed may be placed in the City Council Chambers to honor the memory of the late S. R. Armstrong, city clerk for almost half a century, who passed away last week.

This suggestion was placed before the members of the Finance committee on Thursday evening by Alderman James Dutton, who moved that the committee recommend to the council such a step. He said he would like to see a tablet placed in the chambers as an expression of appreciation from the citizens of Peterborough and the members of the City Council and in commemoration of the splendid service given by Simon Armstrong during his long term of office. Alderman Dutton also said that a suitably framed picture of the late Mr. Armstrong, be placed in the council chambers. The motion was seconded by Alderman McIntyre, one of the council's veterans.

Committee Named

Discussion on the question revealed there were a few loose ends to be cleaned up, and there was also the question as to whether the recognition should take any other form. Because of this a committee composed of Alderman Dutton, Bradburn, Cotton and Mayor Hamilton, was named to consider the question.

Alderman McCannan raised the point that if any action was taken by a special committee to discuss the suitability of any type of memorial to the late city clerk, he felt the veteran members of the council, or the five committee chairmen should be accorded the honor of handling this question.

The suggestion made by Alderman Dutton will probably be given more thought and consideration at the regular meeting of the council next Monday.

Maurice Tolton, manager of the Ideal Dairy, appeared before the committee with a petition signed by several milk distributors. Mr. Tolton said these men objected to the recently passed by-law governing the hours during which milk distribution was permitted. He said it was causing inconvenience to distributors and citizens alike.

The petition was received by the committee and on motion of Aldermen Dutton and Bradburn it was decided to turn it over to the Milk Distributors' Association for their comments. This was done because the by-law was passed at the request of what they considered the great majority of the distributors, and the petition constituted a criticism of the by-law. The council will not act until the distributors send in a report on the question.

Various Talents Are Found In Canada's Book Winners

By WILLIAM H. HOGG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Three writers—differing widely in experience and personality—hold top places among the men and women of Canadian letters. They are a publicity man, a telegrapher's wife and an insurance company executive. Each is the holder of one of the Governor-General's literary awards for 1939.

Franklin Davey McDowell of Toronto, winner of the vice-regal medal for his historical romance "The Champlain Road," is the friend of newspapermen in all parts of Canada. A bright-eyed, thin-faced man of great energy, he is the Canadian National Railways publicity representative for the central region.

Laura Salverson of Winnipeg, twice winner of the awards founded by the late Lord Tweedsmuir, won recognition in the general literature class. Born in Winnipeg of Icelandic decent, her early life provided background for her latest book "Confession of an Immigrant's Daughter" which won the 1939 award.

Poetry As Hobby

Arthur S. Bourinot of Ottawa, who looks anything but the popular idea of a poet, carried off the poetry award with "Under the Sun," a volume of verse that runs the gamut of interpretative lyrics, character studies and lines of social protest.

Bourinot at 46 is tall and slim with greying hair. He was born in Ottawa, the son of the late Sir John Bourinot and was graduated from Osgoode Hall. He switched to business in 1929 after practising law in Ottawa and writes verse as a pleasant hobby.

His first work was published in The Varsity while he was a student at the University of Toronto. He and Merrill Denison, Canadian playwright, were sub-editors. "Dusk in the Laurentians" was his first work published professionaly and it was followed by "Laurentian Lyrics" in 1915, choice bits of verse put together on canoe trips around Ottawa.

"Poems" appeared in 1921 and "Lyrics from the Hills" two years later. Then came "Pattering Feet," a book of poems for children, in 1924. Bourinot, proving his versatility, has also written several books on law and history, among the latter "How Canada is Governed."

His wife is the former Nora Sherwood, daughter of Col. Sir Percy Sherwood, and they have two daughters. The elder, Suzette, is 17 and she writest poetry for the magazine of Ottawa's Elmwood School. Her father says it's "not bad."

Novel Of Experience

Laura Salverson's "The Dark Weaver," an exciting story of the life of Norse settlers in North America, captured the 1937 literature award and placed her in the forefront of Canadian authors. She was born in Winnipeg 50 years ago, the daughter of Larus Goodman who came to Canada from Iceland.

The family was often on the move and young Laura was kept busy packing up the household goods. She tells of these experiences in her "Confessions of an Immigrant's Daughter" and gives a picture, as seen through the eyes of a growing girl, of a new country being opened up.

Other Salverson novels inspired by the lives of the Norsemen in North America are "The Viking Heart" and "Johann Lind," but she has also written such period novels as "Lord of the Silver Dragon," dealing with the life of Lief Ericson; "The Dove," a story of Moroccan pirates; and "Black Lace," which describes the court of Louis XIV.

She began her story-telling career at 12, writing a short story for an American newspaper. Ill health kept her from the ordinary games of childhood and she turned to reading of which she says: "No one who has not spent such hours can ever know the grandeur to be found in literature, nor how helpful it can be to read to others who have had the courage to go on."

Frank McDowell did his first writing as a police reporter on the old Toronto Mail and Empire. "The Champlain Road," his first book, was written in a year at the rate of two pages a night. In its fifth edition in 11 months, according to the publishers, it has set a record in Canada for a book written by a Canadian.

McDowell has written short stories and articles for Canadian and United States publications in what little spare time he has. He doesn't care to have much written about himself and when asked recently whether he had another book on the griddle, he said: "Give me time."

His work with the C.N.R. has taken him to England and he has worked in Winnipeg and Toronto. His travels have made him conscious of the rich history that is Canada's.

"The Champlain Road" describes the lives of service and martyrdom of the Jesuit fathers in Huronia, Indian lands that spread across that part of Ontario now in the northern part of Simcoe County and including such towns as Barrie, Orillia, Midland, Penetanguishene and Collingwood Intertwined in the tale is the romance of a young musketeer and the loves of an Indian maiden and a white girl.

Sub Raid Fizzles

La Linea, Spain, Nov. 1

An Italian submarine damaged part of the metal under-water net which protects the harbor of Gibraltar with a torpedo yesterday; unconfirmed reports from the Rock said today.

The submarine was reported to have escaped after firing a second torpedo at ships in the harbor. This missile ran up on shore without exploding.

The harbor net was repaired quickly.

(A British naval announcement last night said the torpedoes, operated from "a special device," failed to do any damage.)

Early today a convoy of merchant ships left Gibraltar under escort of war vessels. A single plane circled the Rock, drawing anti-aircraft fire but dropping no bombs.

WESTINGHOUSE GAVE THE WORLD ITS FIRST BROADCASTING STATION

On November 2nd, 1920, the world's first broadcasting station went "on the air" for the first time.

The first broadcast was the report of the Presidential election of Warren G. Harding. The station was K D K A, founded and operated ever since by Westinghouse.

Tomorrow thus marks the Twentieth Birthday of radio broadcasting . . . the most potent force in all the history of communication and entertainment.

In celebrating its Twentieth Radio Anniversary, Westinghouse pays tribute to all who, following this humble beginning, have contributed to the technique of modern broadcasting and our great broadcasting systems.

During these twenty years, Westinghouse has continued to pioneer in radio development—not only in the field of broadcasting, but in the creation of new and better means of reception.

The development of the now universally used Superheterodyne Circuit, the first AC radio tube and the first International Short Wave Broadcast are among the important results of Westinghouse research.

Today, Westinghouse pioneers again in the creation of new and better world wide radio receivers and the latest radio-phonograph design. These outstanding scientific achievements are now available through Westinghouse dealers everywhere.

Millbrook Aid Plans Sale And Hot Supper

MILLBROOK, Nov. 1—(ENS). — Mrs. J. R. Thompson was hostess for the October meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace Presbyterian Church, held at her home east of the village on Wednesday at 3 p.m., the vice-president, Mrs. Suttle Pritchard, taking the chair. The attendance was large.

Mrs. Mervan Kinsman read "The Quilting Party," and all joined in singing, "There'll Always Be An England," Mrs. S. E. Eakins presiding at the piano. A "treasure trail" quiz was conducted by Mrs. Kinsman and Mrs. A. Miller, apples being given as prizes, this feature introducing a Hallowe'en atmosphere.

The roll was answered with a series of questions on "What do you know?" and proved both instructive and interesting. A flower committee, Mrs. A. Coyte, Mrs. S. Prichard, and Mrs. S. E. Eakins, was appointed to see that the church is properly decorated for the anniversary Sunday, November 10, when a former minister, Rev. W. Riddle, of Milton, will be the guest preacher for the day. The soloist will be Mrs. Chapman, of Lakefield.

The annual hot supper and baking sale, which will be held in the waiting room on Saturday, November 7, came up for discussion, Mrs. Miller and Miss Mona Gibson being appointed table conveners, with authority to secure their own help. The menu will include roast pork, hot potatoes, salads, pickles, jellies, biscuit, pies, etc., and the canvass will be made shortly. Each lady was notified to bring one extra article for the home baking table, which will be in charge of Mrs. Harry Ball and Mrs. H. A. Kerr.

Mrs. Suttle Pritchard's group was in charge of the tea hour, following the close of the business and devotional session, tables being daintily laid, and the hostess assisting the group with the service.

Over six dollars was received from this enjoyable feature, and the invitation of Mrs. E. L. Armstrong to hold the November meeting at her home was gratefully accepted.

Mrs. A. R. Gibson closed the gathering with prayer, and the usual votes of thanks were given before the guests left for home.

Mission Circle.

Mrs. David Lunn entertained the Golden Links Mission Circle for its October meeting at her home, Mill Street, on Wednesday at 8 p.m., the president, Mrs. E. J. Powell, occupying the chair.

The worship theme for the month, "The Way to Life Abundant," was carried out in the hymn, "Sing to the Lord of Harvest," and the prayer by Mary Dawson, together with a reading by Betty Lunn, "The Blind Child."

The president and Miss E. L. Hetherington offered to write the monthly letter to Margaret Luxon, and cards will also be sent another member, Marjorie Skitch, who is a patient in the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, following an operation for appendicitis. Marjorie is a valued member of the Circle, and had a birthday on Thursday, October 31.

Mrs. Lunn read the lesson from John 10: 1-8, and also a poem, "He Careth." Miss Hetherington giving an interesting talk on the first chapter of the study book, 'Stewardship of Life.' Mrs. Powell read the story of "An African Communion service," by Rev. Jessie Arnup, and the meeting was closed with the hymn, "O love that will not let me go," and the watchword in unison.

The hostess, assisted by her daughter, Betty, served ice cream and pie during the social hour.

Happy Landing Of Interlocked Warplanes.

The anti-climax of what aerial experts call "the most amazing feat in aviation history," is graphically pictured here a few moments after the happy ending to a near-tragic sky drama. Flying from the Forrest Hill aviation school, near Wagga, N.S.W., to Corowa, Flying Officer L. G. Fuller of the Royal Australian Air Force in a big reconnaissance plane collided with another plane of similar type, 1,000 feet above Brocklesby. The crashed warships were interlocked, with Fuller's plane on top, the other held fast underneath. Pilot and observer of the lower plane bailed out. So did the observer in Fuller's plane, but Pilot Fuller stuck to the controls and brought both ships down to a perfect landing and stepped out unhurt. On examination the warplanes were found to be only slightly damaged.

Desperate Minister Offers Shaft For Idea Upon Beaver Control

TORONTO, Nov. 1.— Harried by complaints of beavers cutting this and damming that, David J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Fish and Game, yesterday offered a monument from a grateful Government to the person who invents some simple way of cntrolling their actions on private property.

Funds for the monument, he intimated, would be drafted from the annual sale of seized beaver pelts, which yesterday brought in some $18,000 to the Department. Last year's sale of illegally trapped pelts amounted to about $20,000. The pelts are sold to the highest bid received in a sealed tender.

"Mind you," said Mr. Taylor, "we are not against beavers. They represent the backbone of Ontario's fur trade, and besides a beaver is a Canadian emblem — busy as a beaver and all that, you know."

But here is a sample of the trouble beavers cause. Recently a couple, wandering from no one knows where, got into Premier Hepburn's private little lake on his farm near St. Thomas and chawed down some willows on which he placed considerable value.

The wife of a Toronto lawyer, with fire in her eye, not so long ago declared beavers were cutting down every tree at their summer place, which is situated in a closed area.

The Paint Cure Fails.

"We thought she had something," recalled Mr. Taylor. "She was painting and she said she stuck some of the paint on a half-chewed-down tree. The beavers didn't come after that tree, so she painted the trunks of more trees. Then she advised us about the paint and we shipped in more paint and one of our overseers painted the trunks of all the trees he could find. We thought she was going to get the monument, because the beavers wouldn't eat the painted bark.

"But then the beavers got smart and they cut down the trees as usual, spitting out the painted bark, and then when the trees were lying flat they went along and ate the bark where it wasn't painted."

On Thursday the Deputy Minister received a plaintive note from a Northern Ontario farmer. Two years ago, wrote the farmer, two beavers came along a small river which bisects his farm. He thought that was wonderful, and he guarded them from trappers.

But in two years they multiplied exceedingly. "They have made several dams, flooded out my pasture fields, made the river so wide and deep that I can neither drive through it nor make a bridge over it, and I can't even plant a crop on my land across the river, which is the best land I have," he wrote.

"This fellow," explained Mr. Taylor, "two years ago thought he had a pair of swell pets. Now they are chasing him off his farm."

He said an overseer would be sent in to the farm next spring with a pack of dynamite. "He will blow down the dams every day until the beavers get tired of building them up and go away. It's all we can do," said the Deputy Minister.

Makes Specialty Growing Rhubarb

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 1. (ENS) A native of Seymour township, E. J. Cleugh, who recently made a hurried trip by air from California following the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Cleugh, was guest speaker at the noon-day luncheon of Rotarians here on Monday.

The speaker, who left this district about forty-two years ago and has been in the railroad service, later turning to agriculture which he has followed for the past ten years, classified California as the "greatest state in the Union."

Mr. Cleugh specializes in growing rhubarb, for which there is a very extensive market, on his 140-acre farm. Speaking of the numerous irrigation projects which have been made necessary by reason of the dry climate, he declared that every farm had its own pumps by which water was sent directly into the fields. His own rhubarb crop had to be irrigated every two weeks except during the rainy seasons in October and May. However, four crops are grown every year. He answered members who were left wondering why he did not grow oranges which most people associate with California by stating the tremendous competition both in the state and from Florida made profits small.

Rotarian N. Alex MacColl moved a vote of thanks to the speaker for his interesting address.

Street Gallery For Kibitzers Peps Hotel Job

OTTAWA, Nov. 1—(CP). — The capital's first "sidewalk superintendent's club," erected around an excavation in downtown Ottawa for a new hotel, is working out to the benefit of everybody. Contractor John Wilson said last night the spectators like it and the audience puts new snap into his workers

The gallery is built to accommodate about 100 and on nice bright mornings when the autumn air is not too chill the folks gather elbow to elbow to watch the show on downtown Elgin Street.

They can watch a steam shovel, concrete mixers and a fleet of trucks that travel the pit with the precision of ballet dancers.

"People are just naturally interested in that sort of thing," said Wilson. "We decided they might just as well have a good vantage point where they won't bother the workers.

"Actually it seems to do everybody good. When the crowd gathers the boys hop right to it and make things hum."

Wilson takes his own turn in the gallery, which runs along the top of one side of the excavation. Railings keep too-eager watchers from falling in.

Cod, Only Import

HALIFAX, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Cod is the only fish to be imported by Great Britain from Canada in future, according to advice received by the council of the Halifax Board of Trade yesterday from the Deputy Minister of Fisheries. The minister has been advised by the British Ministry of Foods that restrictions have been placed upon importing fresh and frozen fish excepting cod. Any shiploads of salmon and halibut now en route, however, will be admitted to Britain.

The contractor said the odd member of Parliament had been pointed out to him among the watchers "and we expect more when Parliament opens."

"If members of Parliament are as keen to watch a steam shovel as are Ottawa aldermen, there should be quite a few," he declared.

Alderman C. E. Pickering of the city industrial and publicity committee announced the new hotel will be named the Hotel King. Mr. Pickering said the hotel interests, in approving the name, felt it could always be identified with the British Sovereign and at present could be identified with Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

About Town with FLORA

Lyda Telford's distinctive new location at 186 Charlotte Street draws the wisely smart like steel to a magnet. Her feather-weight wool frocks are one excellent reason—the ideal of business girls, their prices are as simple as their classic lines. You'll love the deft touches of fur some wear, the new "whisper" shades, the two-tone color combinations. An individual collection of coats combines the rich and distinguished in material and fur to command instant attention, too. We exclaimed over an imported boucle collared in mink; a French nubby cloth model with draped fox collar; a beige diagonal weave with pockets and ascot of French beaver—but there's no room to say more, except mention to superbness of cut. The new 'phone number is 5245.

As usual, Olga Haskill is a wee bit ahead of your anticipations, and when you yield to the fascination of a little fur hat, will put your heart's desire right into your hands—or on your head. We saw a "pill box" that was nothing but an ingenious swirl of mink, and other chic numbers of Ocelot, sable, Persian or lamb fabric made to dip alluringly over one eye are draped to fit the head snugly, and safely, in back! You'll feel like a King in a jewelled crown when you perch a feather creation atop your curls. One green and scarlet model has veiling to tie over the face Victorian-fashion—another of nut-brown plumage boasts an equisite bird about to take off from the brim—but you must see them—at 312 George street.

Of course it's nice to listen to the new news in hats, to the ease with which you can wear those curls softly creeping around the nape of your neck, and to the fun it can be to try a pompadour or other important hair trend—but it's the wide-awake girl who does more than listen—who skips around to the Paris Beauty Salon at 184 Hunter street and has her hair designed to the hat she plans to wear, with skillful permanent to keep it at its most flattering best. No matter what type of texture your hair is, Paris Salon operators are experts in the art of planning a style that is definitely "you." 'Phone 5311 for appointments.

The old myth that home-cooked food is only to be found at home is now an exploded theory — at least since the Elite Restaurant opened its doors last Saturday to serve lunches and dinners that would make a home blush. Perhaps you have a new beau this Autumn — Army, Navy, Air Force—who says to you, "Where would you like to go for dinner?" There'll be wisdom in your answer to that question if you introduce him to the Elite. Since this is Friday, we're tipping you off that week-end dinners are just a little "extra-special," so warn him that he may make reservations by telephoning 9775. Clever catering for wedding parties or dinners is done here, too, in case you're THAT interested!

After you've tried on at least ten dresses and your eyes are getting wild, try heading for Levine's at 369 George Street, where a brand new collection of frocks will cheer your heart. Chic little sheers wools and novelty crepes in trim tailored styles, and afternoon frocks softly draped or shirred are in all the vital autumn shades—do ask particularly to see their smooth little jerseys, and the dressmaker suit of soft blue wool crepe with brown beaver pockets and yoke. The coats, soft dressmaker types, are lavishly befurred, with a special choice in nicely fitted styles for the shorter, stouter figure. If you prefer a tailored Kragshire tweed or beige English camelhair, you'll find it here, too.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
Mrs. MARY MOORE.

Question.—I would be very grateful if you would solve some problems for me;

1.—I would like a good recipe for Governor Sauce—a green tomato relish with onions and spices.

2.—My oven thermometer is marked off with the numbers from 1 to 12. Could you tell me what these numbers would represent in degrees Fahrenheit?

3—What proportion of all-purpose flour is used when a recipe calls for cake flour?

Thank you kindly and I trust I will receive an answer soon.—Margaret J. D., Rubidge street, Peterborough.

Answer.—Thank you for your letter.

In my files or cook books I can find no reference to the Sauce, but have two good green tomato relishes for you that you can choose from.

Green Tomato Pickles

One pack green tomatoes, 3 large onions, 3 sweet red peppers, ¼ cup salt, 2 tablespoons mustard seed, 1 tablespoon celery seed, and 1 quart hot vinegar, ½ lb. sugar. Chop or slice vegetables and spread in layers in enamel or earthern container, sprinkling each layer with salt until all vegetables and salt are used. Let stand overnight, and in morning drain. Add mustard seed, celery seed and hot vinegar and boil 5 minutes, then add sugar and cook slowly until vegetables are clear but not too limp, then seal hot in sterile jars.

Sliced Sweet Green Tomato Pickle.

One peck green tomatoes, 6 large onions or 3 lbs. Bermudas, 1 cup salt, 2 quarts water, 3 quarts vinegar, 2 lbs. sugar, 2 tablespoons whole cloves, 1 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons ginger 2 tablespoons whole allspice, 2 tablespoons mustard seed, 2 tablespoons cinnamon. Slice tomatoes and onions, sprinkle with the salt, let stand overnight and drain in morning. Add the water, 1 quart vinegar, and boil 15 minutes and drain. Add the sugar, the 2 quarts vinegar, and the spices tied in a thin bag. Boil carefully about 1 hour or until the syrup is somewhat thickened, then pour into sterile pint jars, and seal.

Answer to Question 2.—Since most oven thermometers register up to 600 deg. Fahr. I think it is reasonable to assume that each number on yours indicates 50 deg. of heat. For instance, when your indicator is at No. 6 your oven temperature is 300 deg. Fahr. The dealer from whom you bought the stove should be willing to come down and test your oven with a small oven thermometer to assure you that my assumptions are right.

Answer to Question 3—You should not use any proportion of all-purpose flour when cake flour is called for. But if you do use all purpose flour for "all purposes" use the same amount as called for of cake flour—it is wise to sift all-purpose flour at least three times when it is used in place of cake flour.

Question.—Will you please send me recipe for "Fresh Cucumber Pickle" like ——brand. It says on their label "Sugar sweetened, and seasoned with spices, tumeric- vinegar and salt"—they are the spiced unpeeled kind. Thank you—Lena A. B.

Answer.—Thank you for your letter.

Sliced Cucumber Pickle.

Select 25 medium sized cucumbers and wash them well and slice in half inch slices. Soak in brine for 3 hours—using 2 tablespoons salt to each quart of cold water—make enough to cover pickles. Drain well at end of 3 hours. Add 1 pint vinegar, 1 lb. white sugar, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 teaspoon turmeric, 1 teaspoon dry mustard. Bring to boiling point and boil hard for 5 minutes only, then seal in sterile jars.

Do You Know?

When black machine oil gets upon cloth, rub place with lard, let stand a few minutes, then wash with cold water and good laundry soap. Use this same method when oil soils the hands.

Save lemon and orange shells and fill them with gelatin desserts or sherberts.

Pour lemon juice over canned pineapple slices, drained of their syrup—allowing one tablespoon to each slice. Let stand in refigerator at least one hour. Sprinkle with grated lemon rind. Serve with meats and meat or fish salads.

Aids For Mothers

MELBOURNE, Nov. 1—(CP).—It took a woman to win the "If I Were M.P." competition, although more than 1,000 Australians, including many men, entered their letters on the subject.

War problems in Australia are apparently very similar to those of Canada. Mrs. E. A. Patterson of Seaford won the two guinea prize and this is what she would set out to accomplish if she were a member of parliament:

"Thorough organization of saving and waste collection and conservation of such commodities as gas and electricity. Increase growth, storage and preservation of all foodstuffs to alleviate post-war world famine. Give child endowment to sustenance and basic wage earners with more than two children.

"Organize trained home assistance for all mothers of more than two children under school age. Housing plans on a nation-wide scale to prevent post-war scarcity and slump, constructive work absorbing soldiers as they return. Legislate to make electricity a rated commodity."

Special prizes of half a guinea each were awarded to two men contestants.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, November 2

WITH concentrated energies focused upon the preparation, plans and launching of new projects on this day there is forecast for fair success, according to the lunar transits. The endorsement of those in power and standing will further accelerate quickened energies, sustaining faculties of initiative and productive ambitions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is should respond to high stimuli of the creative forces and faculties, probably entering into new propositions with vim and determination to succeed and route a few discordant or annoying situations. The cooperation or endorsement of those in place and power should greatly advance those ambitious projects pursued with progressive ideas and concentrated and practical effort.

A child born on this day should be energetic, enterprising, probably aggressive and strenuous in pursuit of its progressive objectives. It will overcome obstacles by its determination or indomitable will.

We Noticed . . .

. . . .When some one yells "mail's in," the scramble in training camps here or "somewhere in England" is evidence of just how much mail from home means to the soldier boys—it comes first in their lives, and 'leaves' second.

. . . .We can all do a lot to boost the morale of these boys by frequent letters with gosipy bits of home and friends sprinkled through them.

. . . .No small detail about life as they knew it before they volunteered their lives for their country is too trifling to be enjoyed, and it is these little atoms that help to recreate a picture of the home and people they have left behind. Let us adopt a sentence from one of the boy's own letters as our slogan—"There's no better boost to a fellow's morale than news from home."

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

DOROTHY DIX

You Are Appreciated Only As You Earn Right To Be. Are You One of Those Persons Who Constantly Cast a Shadow of Doubt or Discontent on Those About You?

Will any one be glad when you are dead? Will your funeral be the day of emancipation for somebody? You are shocked at the mere suggestion of such a thing and say, of course, not; that you haven't an an enemy in the world. And you point with pride to your record as a model citizen and a member of the church in good and regular standing. And you never stop to ask yourself if you are taking all the sweetness out of life for somebody; if you are not the shadow that shuts out the sunshine of some one's day, and to wonder if they are not humanly bound to look forward to a time when you will not be the fly in their ointment. Of course, neither you nor they put it that crudely. You wreathe the thought in glittering generalities. You say: "Of course, we can't make any changes in the house now because Grandma is against all newfangled ideas, but when she passes on we will make it over and put in air conditioning." Or you say: "If anything should happen to Maria, I'd spend my Winters in Florida." Or "If I wasn't tied down with James, I'd travel a lot." Or—but you get the idea.

Perhaps you are IT without knowing it, the stumbling block in somebody's happiness. Maybe you are nagging a wife. Maybe you treat your husband like a moron child. Maybe you tell him when to rise up and when to sit down, and when to speak and when to keep silence. Maybe you buy his clothes for him, and supervise his diet, and he hasn't as much personal liberty as a dog on a leash.

Watch Your Actions

Because he doesn't bat you over the head, or murder you in your bed you think he doesn't resent your henpecking. You may even delude yourself with the belief that he loves you and is grateful to you for running his life for him, and you wonder what will become of him if you should die.

Well, did you ever notice what happens to these poor, downtrodden slaves when their Marias are gathered to the angels? They straighten up their shoulders and get a collegiate haircut and buy some good clothes and look about 20 years younger. There is no such rejuvenating process known to science as becoming a widower.

Maybe you are a grouchy, tyrannical husband with a padlock on your pocketbook. You pat yourself on the back and think you deserve a medal for being a good husband because you clothe and feed your family, but you do it so begrudgingly that the very bread they eat is bitter and they would spit it in your face if they dared.

You treat your wife as if she were an unpaid servant: You never show her any affection or kindness. You say insulting things to her. She never has any personal liberty and she has to wheedle and cajole and use the methods of a courtesan to get the money for a new hat out of you. She takes your treatment because she has no means of supporting herself and the children, and you think that she is down on her knees thanking heaven for having given her such a husband.

But did you ever observe the wonderful Christian fortitude with which so many widows bear the loss of their husbands, and how soon they chirk up and begin to take notice?

Maybe you are one of the old people who think that age gives them the privilege of being disagreeable and selfish. Maybe you are one of the posessive mothers who has kept her daughter in slavery to her until she is old herself, or who has kept her son from marrying the woman he loves.

Don't Be Niggardly

Maybe you are one of the tight-fisted fathers who holds on to every dollar until death severs it from him. Maybe you see your children struggling, perishing for the help you are too stingy to give them. A sick daughter dying for the medical attention that would save her. Little children growing up without the education they should have. A son's business going into bankruptcy for the lack of a little financial backing.

You expect your children to love you and cherish you and be grateful to you, but how can they if you have been a killjoy in the home, and when they have waited so long for the help you could have given them when they needed it, and that they only get at last because there are no pockets in a shroud, and you couldn't take your money with you?

The moral of all of which is: That if we want any tears shed over our coffins we must earn them by the way we live.

Marry Woman Near Your Age

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a bachelor 42 years old. I never married because I had my darling mother to support, but now she is gone and I am very sad and lonesome and want to marry. But I want an old-fashioned girl who does not smoke, drink, or paint herself up like a clown, and I don't know where to find her. I have made the acquaintance of a pretty blonde widow with two children. I rather like her, but friends have advised me to marry a girl of 18 or 20. Should I listen to a friend's advice? PHILIP.

ANSWER — You have to live with the woman you marry, not your friends, so make your own selection of a wife. Don't, however, think of marrying a girl of 18 or 20. The difference in your ages is too great. You would have nothing in common and you would fight over everything from lipstick to the way she cooked.

There is no trouble in finding girls who don't smoke or drink. They live next door to you or across the street, and the reason you don't know them is because you have had your attention concentrated on the pretty-pretties who have just walked out of the beauty shops.

Kingly Approval For London's Girl Fire Fighters

A smiling King George greets the A.F.S. girls at fire headquarters in London as he acknowledges the fine work being done by the lassies in augmenting the fire-fighting forces of the metropolis. London's fire-fighters are the most important body of men in London today, ceaselessly on the alert against fires caused by German incendiary bombs.

Clothes Make Outdoor Girl In Cold Days

By AMY PORTER,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The right sports clothes can transform a shivery, radiator-hugging girl into a hearty young woman who seeks health and pleasure out of doors in wintry weather.

The shivery girl usually hates winter only because she won't prepare for it. A nice brisk walk outdoors against winter wind can't sound attractive to the girl whose outdoor costume consists of a thin crepe dress, a short fur jacket, high heels and sheer stockings.

Yet sports things needn't be expensive. You can limit your purchases to two costumes and still be warmly and smartly dressed for the outdoor week-end.

The first essential costume is a three-piece city-country tweed suit, consisting of a jacket, a skirt with pleats for comfortable walking, and a topcoat. The other essential is a ski suit, which is good for many things besides skiing. These come at big and little prices, but for a small sum a well-tailored navy blue gabardine suit is probably the best choice.

Gay and Warm.

The same warm accessories can be worn with both these costumes. One of those hood, scarf and mitten sets knitted in gay colors would serve to protect the three points most vulnerable to cold—neck, ears and wrists.

Or, for greater warmth, get a wool-lined leather hood and matching mittens. You'll want wool stocks for skiing or tobogganing and possibly long woollen stockings for hiking.

If, with all these protectors, you still shiver, consider the new cold-weather underwear. Have you seen those bright red pantie and bra sets made of lastex and lined with warm wool? They offer both warmth and figure control.

Or you can get knee-length pants of silk and wool knit, so sleekly made that they may be worn under an evening dress.

Warmest of all, and cut-looking too, are the new red flannels made too, are the new red flannels made like a child's sleepers. They cover you from head to toe, and are perfect under ski suits.

FASHIONS

SIDE-BUTTON FROCK With Distinctive Simplicity

Dramatic simplicity is achieved by this trim frock for day-times or afternoon. Buttons all the way down the side enable you to open it out flat for a jiffy pressing and also serve as smart and unexpected accents. Princess lines give you the new, long slim silhouette, and the square-neckline is just the thing for your favorite accessories. Wear the dress with or without the belt. The pattern includes both short and long sleeves and is adaptable to either silk or wool. Choose deep green or benedictine brown for a different and very welcome change from black.

Style No. 3423 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 38-inch material.

Norwood Church Calls Rev. Ferns

NORWOOD, Nov. 1 — (ENS). — The Rev. E. Ferns of Wainfleet and Perry Station, near Welland, has been called to take charge of the Baptist Church in Norwood and Indian River. Rev. Ferns will succeed the Rev. J. U. MacIntosh, who resigned early this Fall to enter the C.A.S.F. as a lieutenant with the Midland Regiment.

Rev. Ferns and Mrs. Ferns and family will arrive here this week to take up residence in the Baptist parsonage on Queen street, in readiness to commence his duties here on Sunday, November 3.

Y.P. Social Evening

The Young People's Society of the Norwood United Church were hosts to the young people of Trinity Church, Hastings, at a most enjoyable Hallowe'en social, held here Monday evening. Miss Irene Hagerman, social convenor of the local group, acted as chairman of a program presented by both societies in the Sunday school room.

Included on the program were the following items: a recitation by David McNeil; reading, Miss Laura Metcalfe; saxaphone solo, Wilfred Knight; reading, Mrs. Oliver; piano solo, Miss Doxsee; vocal solo, Marvyn Preston. A community sing was led by L. C. Gunstone, with Wesley Wildman as piano accompanist. Brief addresses were given also by Rev. M. I. Robinson and Rev. J. E. Glover.

Games and contests were conducted in the church basement, following the program, under the direction of Earle Bongard and John Hamblin.

Refreshments were afterwards served by the members of the Norwood group.

Fraserville W.A. Sponsors Party

FRASERVILLE, Nov. 1— (ENS). —A jolly event took place on Wednesday night in the Orange Hall, when the Fraserville W.A. sponsored a Hallowe'en masquerade.

The judges, Jean Holden, W. Waterman and Mr. Classin, had a hard time in coming to a decision, and the prizes were awarded: Comic class, Mrs. K. Larmer as grandma; Miss Connie Downs as grandma; fancy dress, Miss Eleanor Pue, sophisticated lady; Mrs. R. Downs, the well-dressed hobo.

The guests unmasked and a short program was enjoyed: Reading, "Hezekiah Bedott," by Miss Jean Holden; duet, by Mr. and Mrs. R. Finlay. Riddles, stunts, fortunes, games and forfeits brought lots of laughter and fun. Home-made candy was sold by the ladies. A dainty lunch brought the evening to a close.

Supper guests this week at the home of Mrs. Percy Moncrief included Mr. and Mrs. William Gainer and Eileen, Mr. and Mrs. James Johnston and family, Mr. S. Johnson and Miss Edna Johnston of Bailieboro, Mr. and Mrs. W. Moncrief and family, and James Trotter.

Mrs. John Moore has been spending a couple of weeks with her daughter, Mrs. R. Williamson, at Blackwater.

Dorothies Keen In Plane Find

MONTREAL, Nov. 1—(CP).—The nation's Dorothies are answering the call of the Canadian Dorothy Spitfire Fund for subscriptions to make up $25,000 to buy a fighting airplane in the defence of Britain.

Contributions are pouring in from all over the country, from Dorothies in all walks of life. A waitress gives a dollar saved from her tips, a woman on relief spares 50 cents. School children are earning money by washing dogs, holding candy sales or cleaning bicycles. School teachers are giving extra coaching, stenographers are helping in their spare time, leisured women, in addition to money, are giving their time or lending their cars. One Dorothy decided to contribute her cigarette money to the Fund.

The treasurer of the Fund, in care of the treasurer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Windsor Station, acknowledges many fine contributions but intimates that a lot more are needed to make up the $25,000.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. L. Howson of Otonabee wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Marjorie Geraldine, to John Allan, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Manley of Otonabee. The wedding will take place quietly early in November.

IN MEMORIAM

THOMPSON.—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. William Thompson, who died November 1, 1933.

Time may heal the broken hearted;
Years may make the wound less sore,
But it cannot still the longing
For the loved one gone before.
Who shall say the grief is lessened
Though the smile may hide the tears,
Memories keep the wound still open
Despite the passing of the years.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family.

BRISTOW.—In loving memory of Alec Bristow, who passed away two years ago to-day.

Gone, dear father, gone to rest
Away from sorrow, care and pain;
May you rest in peace, dear father,
Until we meet again.
—Ever remembered by his loving Daughters and Sons.

Badgett Quads Ready To Dance

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 1 (AP) —The Badgett quadruplets—as coy a batch of girls as ever smashed a toy—are nearing their second birthday in perfect trim, despite the absence of any unusual precautions to safeguard their health.

The Badgetts—Joan, Joyce, Jeraldine and Jeanette — are being reared in simple fashion. That's the way Mrs. W. Ellis Badgett, 38-year-old mother of the youngest quads in the United States, wants it.

The girls, born Feb. 1, 1939, are housed in one light, airy room of the Badgetts' bungalow. Their four trundle beds take up most of the room's space.

There is no nurse, no governess for the children — Mrs. Badgett takes care of them herself.

"And that is a full-time job; trying to look after four wild little girls keeps me on the jump," she says.

"They are rough; sometimes they get into fights. I can't let them have toys very much; they'll hit each other with them.

Joan is the heavyweight of the quartet and occasionally takes advantage of her bulk, bullying the others about. She tips the scales at 29 pounds; the others weigh in the neighborhood of 23.

The quads' physical and mental development has been so swift that Mrs. Badgett decided she would enter them in dancing school this winter.

The city of Galveston, in an effort to repay the Badgetts for the publicity they have brought the island resort, is endeavoring to raise $10,000 for the purchase of a home for the quadruplets.

The process is slow, but in less than a year the Badgetts are expected to be in their new domicile.

Suspense as Each Card Turns Up

Yes, telling fortunes, you have your crowd in the hollow of your hand. What a thrill as each card turns up! Will it mean a lucky break—a fond wish coming true?

You can easily learn the card meanings, tell an exciting story. Are a Six of Hearts, a Jack of Clubs followed by a Five of Spades? That looks as if the fortune seeker would go to a party, meet a brown-eyed young man who'd pay ardent court, and then, alas, there'd be a quarrel.

Quick—to the next card. It may be the Five of Clubs, saying marriage will be the happy ending, or a Nine of Hearts—that dearest wish comes true! Let's hope it won't be the Eight of Spades, a broken engagement.

You can have fun telling fortunes in other ways, too! In the "Mystic Circle" you toss three dice on a cardboard circle, then add numbers on tops of dice.

"Eleven, a knave with deceitful heart,
Twelve, a letter; 'twill joy impart."

For the rest of the "Mystic Circle" rhyme, see our 32-page booklet. Tells all the card meanings; has a horoscope for each month. Explains fortunes in tea-leaves, dominoes, the "crystal." Also fortune games.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of FUN WITH FORTUNE-TELLING to The Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet offer the declarer no chance to make a completely definite plan at the outset, but require him to plot a course which enables him to sound out the situation as it develops. If he keeps counting the probable number of cards in each suit in the hands of his opponents, he may ultimately uncover facts which show him the way to go home.

C. R. Rounds, of Trenton, one of New Jersey's real students of the game, had to feel his way gingerly, after West led the spade 5 and he got his first look at the dummy. Seven tricks were in sight, and if he could get through the diamond suit successfully, an eighth could come there. He could then watch developments and possibly cause a spade discard which would help.

Mr. Rounds therefore proceeded to take the spade Q with his A, having no reason for a hold-up, then played one of dummy's diamond honors. The rather high 7 from West made it look as if he was short, so the other dummy honor followed, then a marked finesse of the 10 and the A. West discarded the heart 3 on the third diamond and the spade 4 on the fourth. Counting West for originally five spades because with six he might have bid them, Mr. Rounds reckoned this discard left West only three spades, three hearts to probably the Q and very likely three clubs to an honor. If this was right, he could make his game.

The heart K and A were therefore taken and a third heart led to West. The latter cashed his three spades, declarer trashing two clubs and keeping his club A and the fourth heart. West had to lead to the club, so Mr. Rounds got the last two tricks. West could have set this, as Mr. Rounds points out, by holding his spades and baring the club K, but that would have been almost two much to ask of him. As it was, the declarer made the maximum of what looked like a bad situation.

Just Vague Reports

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 31.—(AP). — Continuous heavy artillery fire was heard from across the Greek frontier to-day, but the only reports of the Italian-Greek fighting reaching here were vague.

Numerous unidentified aircraft were sighted over Greek territory, and from both sides came reports of the increasing use of planes to assist infantry unity in Northern Greece.

June Miller And John Hicks Lead Millbrook Oratory Preliminaries

MILLBROOK, Nov. 1.—(ENS)—An interesting event of Tuesday afternoon at the Public School was the preliminary elimination contest in public speaking, in preparation for the competition to be held in the Town Hall on Wednesday, November 6, at 8 p.m., for the school pupils of Millbrook and South Cavan under the auspices of the Durham County Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association.

P. Hamilton, principal of the Public School, was the presiding officer, and twenty-one contestants were entered, thirteen from the Intermediate Room, Miss Jean L. Burnham, teacher, and eight from the Senior Room.

The judges, Archdeacon William Simpson, B.A., Mrs. W. R. Howard, a former member of the local Continuation School staff, and Mrs. Edmund Ball, had a difficult task in reaching their decisions, particularly among the senior pupils, the following eventually being chosen: In Miss Burnham's Room, June Miller, whose theme was 'The Progress Made in Agriculture during the last one hundred years"; and second, Conrad Stinson, who gave a personal incident in connection with 'How We Helped the Red Cross." In Mr. Hamilton's Room first place went to John Hicks, who told in well-chosen language and with excellent material "The Story of Our Flag," illustrating his talk with drawings of the several crosses that make up the national emblem; Gertrude Forsyth came second, with "The Red Cross" as her topic, credit being especially due to this pupil inasmuch as she was probably the tenth, at least, who had chosen this particular theme on which to speak.

According to the teachers, practically all of the pupils, and particularly the younger ones, had prepared their own material on which they spoke, and it was evident that the training now being received will bear fruit in producing capable public speakers in later years.

The speaking was interspersed with singing of popular choruses, "There'll Always Be An England" being the last number, before the National Anthem. The successful pupils of Tuesday's contest will appear at the public competition in the Town Hall on November 6, when it is expected several others from the South Cavan schools will also be entrants.

I.O.O.F. Euchre.

A successful euchre, in aid of Canada's War Fund was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Tuesday at 8 p.m. the local Oddfellows' Lodge having chosen this means of reaching its allocation in connection with raising the $50,000 which the Government has requested from this fraternity throughout the province. Unfortunately, the attendance was not large, the lack of sufficient advertising apparently being responsible for this feature, an error which will be corrected before the next euchre on November 26 is held.

Mrs. Roy Greer of South Monaghan won the ladies' prize for high score, and George Fletcher of Baillieboro the gentleman's award. The social committee served lunch when play was completed, and the Noble Grand Brother Harold Tate took the chair, extending a warm welcome to the guests of the evening, several of whom came from Peterborough and other outside points.

Relatives of the Hetherington family who were present on Sunday for the dedication of the Hetherington memorial organ at St. Andrew's Church, included: Miss M. E. Hetherington, one of the donors, who presented the keys to Miss E. L. Hetherington, church organist; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hetherington of Peterborough; Mrs. Maud Hetherington, Millbrook; R. C. Thompson-Curry, his daughter Mrs. C. R. Hagerman, and his grandson Bobbie Hagerman of Peterborough, these being members of the family of the late Carrie Hetherington Thompson-Currie, the first organist of the present church; Miss Emma Might, Peterborough; Mrs. (Rev.) C. E. Cagg, P. G. Might, Mr. and Mrs. George Might and daughters Eunice, Norma and Wilma, all of Toronto, and members of the family of the late Eunice Hetherington Might of Peterborough; Mrs. George Hetherington and Miss Estella Hetherington, last of the family of W. Guy Hetherington and his wife Mary Estella Wallace, and whose brother, the late Walter G. Hetherington, was for over forty years recording steward of St. Andrew's Church.

There were also present a large number of relatives of the late Joshua Whitfield and his wife Edith Hetherington Whitfield. Those from a distance were guests of Miss E. L. Hetherington and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Douglas.

Nazis Pound Convoys; Raids Spotty

Hint New British Gun Used In Bagging Five Night Bombers

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP). — While long-range German guns on the French coast pounded away at a British convoy in the Channel this morning, large formations of Nazi bombers roared across Britain's southeast coast to follow up widespread but sporadic night raids.

London had its first daylight alarm of the day shortly before 9 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT), but it was of brief duration and no bombs were dropped.

Residents on the English coast were awakened at dawn by the thunder of the German cross-Channel firing, and many gathered along the shore to watch geysers of water sent up by bursting shells. Nazi planes joined in the attack on the convoy.

Watchers saw a dozen ships, with barrage balloons trailing overhead, emerge from the Channel mist and steam slowly northward, apparently unharmed.

The unusual success of British anti-aircraft batteries, officially credited with shooting down five German raiders during the night, stirred speculation meanwhile that a new type of gun might have been perfected and added to the island's defences.

Watched In London

London, Nov. 2 (CP)

NEWS of the United States presidential campaign competed today with war reports for the attention of a public eagerly watching the politics of a nation to which they look for planes and guns.

Although British commentators frequently say "No matter which side wins it's all right for us," the press features news of the campaign second only to war developments.

A prominent headline in the News Chronicle informed readers today that "odds on Roosevelt are now 5 to 4," while a Daily Mail heading said: "Roosevelt and Willkie neck and neck."

Thinks Japanese Air Force Better Than U.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 — (AP). — Charles Healy Day, aircraft plant manager, who has lived through 35 Japanese bombing raids in China, has brought back to the United States a belief that the Japanese air force is better than that of the United States "in quantity and quality."

"We have consistently underrated the Japanese in the air," he said today in an interview. "They have splendid airplanes and lots of them. In China alone they are operating between 800 and 900 first-line planes."

He added he had no doubt the United States has better designs on drawing boards than the Japanese actually have in service.

"Americans are too supine in their belief that the Japanese copy Occidental airplanes," Day said.

"I examined one Japanese pursuit plane shot down in the Chinese war. It resembled nothing made abroad. It had been designed by the Japanese themselves and was good for 315 miles an hour. It did have a Japanese adaptation of an American engine."

Day went to Canton, China, in 1934 at the invitation of the Cantonese government to take charge of an aircraft plant. When the Japanese armies moved south in 1937 to extend their conquest of China, he transported his entire factory 700 miles inland. It is operating now "somewhere in Yunnan Province."

Day described the morale of Nationalist China as "strong, and getting stronger all the time."

"But," he added, "the Chinese need things to fight with. The only weapons they can make in quantity are rifles and ammunition."

Nab 50 Nazis In Raid On Greenland

Caught By Norwegians Seeking To Seize Weather Station

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP)— A German-language broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation today said a German expedition of 50 men had been captured in an unsuccessful attempt to seize the Metereological Observation Station at Greenland. The Norwegian patrol boat Fritjof Nansen made them prisoners, the broadcast said.

The broadcast was heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York.

(There was no immediate comment from any other sources on the incident.)

The broadcast, quoting a report from Stockholm, Sweden, said "for a long time the German air force has been experiencing the lack of exact weather forecasts, hindering successful air operations because Berlin did not get much support from the Danish and Norwegian personnel of the weather bureau at Greenland.

"Therefore it decided upon the capture of the wireless station in Greenland, or the erection of a new station under German control.

"An armed German expedition left Norway for Greenland, but was intercepted by the Fritjof Nansen when it reached the ice zone. The Germans are said to have offered no resistance."

Ciano Boasted In Bomber Van

ROME, Nov. 2.—(AP).—The Stefani News and Propaganda Agency reported to-day that Italian air attacks on Greece are being led by Foreign Minister Ciano.

The agency said Ciano headed the planes which bombed the Greek naval base of Salonika, the Fascist fliers dropping "many tons of explosives" on military and naval objectives which were "completely destroyed."

Out Hunting

BERLIN, Nov. 2. —(AP)— Franz Von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, has been in Berlin and left again to go pheasant hunting, it was reported today. Nazi spokesmen said they were unable to divulge whether he would reach the same hunting grounds as Foreign Minister Ciano of Italy.

Rome reports said Ciano was planning a hunting trip in Germany.

An Understanding?

Tokyo, Nov. 2 (AP)

ICHIZO KOBAYASHI, special Japanese envoy to the Netherlands East Indies, asserted today on his return here from Batavia, Java, that a "certain understanding" has been reached in discussions by which Japan seeks to obtain East Indian oil. He added, however, that there was "no final conclusion."

Kobayashi said in an interview that Netherlands bargaining was being conducted on a purely business basis.

Legions Massing For Heavy Coastal Attack

LONDON, Nov. 2.—(CP)—Authoritative military sources say they expect Italy to launch a big scale offensive against the Greek defence line on the southwest wing of the Albanian-Greek frontier battle line.

The Italians were reported to be moving up artillery along the coastal flank.

These sources said the fighting, after almost a week, still is a "battle of outposts."

On the Greek right (northeast) wing in the Phlorina sector the Greeks are reported to have advanced about five kilometres into Albania on the main Phlorina-Biloj road.

Farther southwest, in the Pindus mountain area, the Greeks yesterday regained a ridge which they lost the day before, it was reported.

The sources said the Greeks "are fighting well, and we believe they will continue to fight well."

One reason for the belief that the Italians are preparing for their main drive on the southeast battle wing is that the country there would be better adapable for mechanized warfare.

Attack Packs Shelters For Night

Early Evening Swoop Upsets Capital Report Many Killed

LONDON, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Royal Air Force bombers last night carried out a "sustained and successful" attack on railway communications in Berlin, the Air Ministry reported to-day.

At the same time other bombers struck anew at the Krupp armament works in Essen, synthetic oil plants in Magdeburg, and an industrial factory near Gelsetnkirchen, the Air Ministry said.

BERLIN, Nov. 2 — (AP). — A surprise attack on Berlin by Royal Air Force raiders shortly after other British planes had bombed German-held Amsterdam, caught thousands of Berliners in cafes, theatres, and on the streets last night and set the capital's defence guns thundering in a volume not often equalled here.

A communique to-day alleged at least 26 persons were killed in Amsterdam while "several" Berlin civilians were killed and injured.

The extent of damage in Berlin was not immediately disclosed.

The Royal Air Force came over at an unexpectedly early evening hour.

At some points the surprise was so complete that numbers of Berliners were turned away from the public refuges jammed to overflowing and had to take shelter in doorways until a lull permitted them to seek safer quarters or hurry home.

At one time early in the attack a British plane was caught in the searchlights and held there for a minute or so of harrowing fire, but apparently escaped. The official communique made no mention of any plane being shot down.

The communique claimed a military hospital at Amsterdam was damaged and 19 wounded German soldiers undergoing treatment there were allegedly killed, together with seven Netherlands residents in other parts of the city.

Greek Fliers Stab At Albania While Italians Shower Explosives On Dozen Cities

R.A.F. Bags 8 Planes As Heavy Desert Fighting Is Renewed

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 2—(AP). — Italy's long-stalled invasion of Egypt came to life Friday in a new burst of fighting across the sands of the Western Desert, indicating Mussolini may be unfolding a plan to co-ordinate this drive with his campaign against Greece.

In a revival of heavy desert fighting, the Royal Air Force said eight Italian warplanes were downed and four more so badly damaged they probably failed to reach their bases, yesterday, in a battle over Matruh, British advance base blocking the Fascist drive toward the Nile and the Suez Canal.

The R.A.F. lost two plane. Two others collided, but the pilots parachuted to safety.

Elsewhere in the Battle of Africa, British military authorities took the initiative with eleven air raids on Italian targets in Ethiopia and Libya, and patrol attacks on Italian camel trains and outposts. The Italians struck back with a bombing of the Island of Perim, at the southern entrance of the Red Sea.

The Italian attack on Matruh, biggest air operation in Egypt in weeks, apparently was an attempt to discourage British authorities from sending planes to Greece.

Matruh, a desert resort town on the Mediterranean shore, is known in history as Cleopatra's favored bathing place. Its civilian population moved out weeks ago when the Italians began frequent air bombardments.

In all, British authorities said there were eleven raids and numerous reconnaissonce flight yesterday, to more than even the score. Their increased air activity reflected recently big air reinforcements reaching the Near East.

Last Minute News

BERNE, Nov. 2.—(AP)—The Swiss Department of economics today forbade mention of price increases or shortages of merchandise in newspapers, letters or by word of mouth which might lead to excessive purchases.

VICTORIA, Nov . 2.—(CP).—Legislation which would permit the government to refuse provincial licenses to persons declining to conform with Dominion or Provincial statutes is being drafted for presentation to the British Columbia Legislature, it was learned yesterday.

The measure would force aliens or disaffected groups to comply with existing laws such as national registration and registration of firearms.

2nd Palace Hit

London, Nov. 2 (CP)

AUTHORITIES today allowed announcement that Kensington Palace, a royal residence from the time of William III, was damaged recently by incendiary bombs, but no members of the Royal family were there and no casualties resulted.

The Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada, and Princess Alice have a residence in palace.

Side Issue List Beclouding U.S. Vote Result

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (CP)—Political observers wonder whether a mass of incalculable factors is beclouding the main issues in the United States presidential election and the possibility developed today that victory may go to the side most efficiently organized to get its supporters to the polls.

Some of the campaign sideshows are these: Throwing of eggs, tomatoes and other missiles at the Republican nominee, Wendell Willkie, charges and counter-charges of "smear" tactics, the "kneeing" of a negro policeman in New York city. These are only side issues but are held likely by veteran observers to cause many voters to lose sight of the main election controversy, the third term and foreign policy.

Capitalizing every "break," Willkie has conducted a whirlwind tour of the country, making more than 500 speeches, travelling some 18,000 miles by train, 8,000 by plane and 1,500 by automobile. His last major address will be given in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Republicans say the Willkie cause undoubtedly has benefitted by the incidents in which irresponsible persons threw vegetables in his direction. Both he and his wife were struck by eggs in Chicago. But the extent of the Republican swing caused by such incidents is imponderable.

The "Knee" Incident.

James Sloan, Negro policeman, suffered a groin injury last Monday night in an altercation that developed when police attempted to prevent Stephen Early, presidential secretary, and a group of newspapermen from boarding the presidential train. Sloan alleged he was kicked. Early said he "gave the knee" to one of a group of officers who shoved him.

Hint Big Scale Action By British Fleet Near in 'Mare Nostrum'

ATHENS, Nov. 2—(AP). — Italy, apparently making slow headway in her invasion of Greece, was reported today to have unleased her air force on this little kingdom in a widespread series of raids which the Greek government said had killed or wounded almost 300 civilians.

The strategic city of Salonika was reported hardest hit in the sudden burst of aerial warfare, with 59 killed and 84 injured in four raids yesterday. The government said "generally, no military target was hit" and charged that "all the raids were directed against civilians."

Fourteen persons were killed and 10 wounded at Larisa, while eight were killed and 87 injured in five raids on Corfu, where a communique said the Jewish quarter, an Italian school and clinics were bombed. A Catholic church was said to have been hit at Salonika.

Other cities which felt the Fascist raids were Canea, Crete, where six died; Piraeus, the port of Athens; Corinth, Metsovon, Megara, Kastoria Thebes Milea, Perama, and Retimo, Crete.

Over the Epirus district in the northwest the Italians dropped pamphlets declaring the invaders had "good dispositions" toward the Greeks and would respect their women, traditions and customs.

Spitfires Chase Italian Raiders

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP).—A bomb struck a crowded bus and probably killed several persons in a night raid on London, it was reported today as Britain's fighters beat off three day attacks on the capital.

The raiders, including some Italians, were pounced upon and scattered by patrols of Royal Air Force Spitfires which swooped from high cloud ambushes along the southeast coast.

The Air Ministry said seven raiders were shot down before noon, in addition to five downed by anti-aircraft gunners overnight.

In a morning air battle over Hythe, on the coast, two raiding planes were shot down, one crashing on land and the other in the sea.

In the London area rescuers brought to safety 50 persons huddled in the basement shelter of a factory which was damaged and fired by a big bomb. Three of the factory fire

Hotel 'Shaved' 2 Nights – Visitor Leaves

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP).—Bomb splinters from the Battle of Britain:

The night John R. Sturdy, Montreal newspaper man, arrived in London a bomb landed at the back of his hotel, blowing out all the windows. Another bomb landed in front of the hotel the second night. He didn't go home the third!

"Not this time, Adolf!" reads a sign on the edge of a crater in front of a London store that two bombs missed by a couple of yards. The store staff put a big papier mache bulldog and a Union Jack on top of the rubble thrown up by the bombs.

Classes for school children at Hove will end at 1 p.m. during the winter so that students will have plenty of time to get home before the air raids.

Douglas Stairs, 26, and Phyllis Evans, 24, had dinner together the night before they were to be married. A bomb scored a direct hit on the house where they were dining. They were buried on their wedding day.

A nine-weeks-old baby, blown from a bombed hospital, was found uninjured on a plank floating in a pool from a burst hot water tank.

Children of Victoria, B.C., cabled $1,337 for the Lord Mayor's London Air Raid Distress Fund.

Tommy's chief worry when his home was bombed was his pet gold fish left behind in the ruins. The next day the 12-year-old and a playmate turned over heaps of debris. After three hours' digging they found the fish bowl, half filled with plaster but intact, and three gold fish swimming around in shallow water.

Gunfire Finishes Margaree

Bow Takes All 142 But Fraser Hero Down–Stern Keeps Afloat

By FORD BAXTER
(Canadian Press Correspondent.)

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 1.—(Delayed)—(CP)—All but one of the 142 men lost with the Canadian destroyer Margaree went down when the fore part of the ship dropped to the ocean floor, survivors told newspapermen today.

Those on the forward section, sliced from the afterpart by a merchantman the Margaree was escorting through the stormy North Atlantic night of Oct. 22, had virtually no chance.

Almost immediately after the Canadian destroyer, replacement for the collision-sunk Fraser, was hit about midnight, the high seas closed over the forward part of the boat taking to the bottom the men of the Margaree who were sleeping or on duty there.

Among them was Cmdr. J. W. R. Roy of Ottawa, believed to have been on the bridge.

Everybody in the after section, tossed about in the Atlantic's combers, gained the safety of the unnamed merchant ship's broad deck except young Alfred Jones of Cloverdale, B.C. Boy seaman and a hero of the Fraser disaster which cost 45 lives.

Jones was lost, survivors said, as the men transferred from their half-a-ship to the merchantman, using three ladders and some ropes tossed from the merchant vessel.

Leading stoker Ernest Parsons of Vancouver, said he was right behind the boy seaman when the two of them tried to gain the merchant vessel's deck. Al got hold of the wrong end of the rope as he tried to pull himself up and fell into the sea," Parsons said.

Ab. John A. McKinnon of Wadena, Sask., also told of seeing young Jones lost. Clustered about him as he talked to newspapermen were several others who survived both the Fraser and Margaree.

Dim-eyed, they nodded their heads vehemently as McKinnon identified

Industrial Boom Due In U.S.

Great Drive For War Goods To Follow Election Of Either Party

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—(CP).—A great industrial expansion concentrated upon production of aircraft, ships, munitions and all the paraphernalia of war, much of it for Great Britain, is impending in the United States—either under Franklin D. Roosevelt or Wendell Willkie.

If the Democratic party is successful in returning President Roosevelt for a third term in next Tuesday's voting, the expansion will come almost immediately.

A victory for the Republican candidate and a corresponding upset in congressional representation might delay the new program, but only slightly.

Permanent officials and experienced observers in Washington declare it to be a certainty that the needs of the American defence plan, coupled with British requirements, will mean a monumental expenditure for new plant development.

With the country in a political frenzy natural to the last days of a presidential election campaign it is difficult to get any real picture of what is going on and what is contemplated.

But it is known that William S. Knudsen's defence advisory commission, charged with the task of mobilizing industry and co-ordinating production, is studying plans for nearly a score of new aircraft plants, possibly in the form of transformed automobile factories, and a huge shipbuilding program.

In addition to the supplies needed to carry out the pledges of American political leaders to make the United States impregnable, vast new orders are being received from the United Kingdom.

It is believed that at least $50,000,000 in British money will be spent here for new, standard-type freighters, and it is a matter of record that a recent 12,000-plane order, mostly bombers, will increase total British aircraft requirements to 26,000 units.

34 Margaree Men Prefer Canada To Bermuda

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, Nov. 1. —(Delayed)—(CP).— Main worry of 34 survivors of the sunken Canadian destroyer Margaree is whether or not they'll be home in the Dominion for Christmas.

They met newspapermen to-day and told their stories of collision in the North Atlantic, of scrambling to safety from part of a stricken destroyer to the deck of the merchant vessel which rammed them, of battling the Atlantic's bristling combers. But their thoughts were of home and Christmas.

Stewart Earl Brown of Halifax said the Bermuda sunshine was nice in its way, "but boy, I want to be back in Canada for Christ-

Labor Morale Essential To War Effort

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 — (CP). — There is a need for sound industrial relations if the working men are to fulfill their duty of providing an uninterrupted flow of munitions and supplies to the defenders of democratic rights and freedom, Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, said last night.

Mr. Moore spoke on a CBC network at the invitation of the Joint Committee of the Senate, which has arranged several such talks.

He referred to a recent statement by Major-General H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff, which stressed the importance of this flow of munitions and supplies.

"This being so, it is just a important to maintain the health and morale of the industrial worker as that of the Army," said Mr. Moore.

"The need to keep an army well fed and contented has long been recognized, and human nature being what it is—the same consideration is essential for industrial workers if production is to be raised to its highest point."

Where opportunity for voluntary co-operation was offered there need be no doubt as to a willing and enthusiastic response on the part of the workers. The other way of approaching the question was the old paternalistic and often autocratic method of telling the workers what they must do and what is good for them.

Mr. Moore termed voluntary co-operation "the sounder and more British method," adding: "In fact, failure to adopt this voluntary method remains one of the most common causes of labor unrest."

Canada was a united nation and must remain so and Mr. Moore held it was no doubt a recognition of this fact, so far as industrial relations were concerned, that brought the Order-in-Council of June declaring principles for the regulation of labor conditions during the war.

"One of our needs now is that all concerned—workers, employers and Government alike — should refresh their memories and seek to give practical effect to both the letter and spirit of the principles enunciated in the Order."

The Order called for fair and reasonable standards of wages and working conditions; that hours of work should not be unduly extended, but so far as practical increased output should be obtained by adoption of additional shifts.

"Recently," added Mr. Moore, "there has been a gratifying reduction in unemployment figures and considerable has been done in fitting workers for jobs through youth training and similar schemes."

There remained, however, a pressing need for more training facilities, not only for youth, but also for those older men who only require refresher courses to restore their skill partially lost through long years of unemployment.

"The need of the hour is to persist with tolerance and patience to get smooth teamwork between organized labor, employers and Government so that all can pull the load equally," he said.

Jones as a hero of the Fraser sinking off the French coast last June.

All survivors praised the rescue work of the merchant seaman. There was plenty of time to leave their hulk of the vessel—it had to be sunk by gunfire — but the tossing seas and inky blackness called for every bit of skill.

Anxiously, not knowing how long their portion of the destroyer would stay afloat, they watched the merchant vessel draw near. They aided it and themselves by pulling on lines tossed down to them from the boat's decks.

A Cool Crew

There was no sign of any panic —just every man working to help himself and his mate. First the floating part of the Margaree, her funnels belching black smoke, keeled upward at a sharp angle after the bow was sheared away. Then she settled back in the trough of the waves.

One after another, without the aid of lights, 30 of the survivors climbed to safety, using the ladders tossed down to them—"shaky ladders" to quote Steward Earl Brown of Halifax, a Fraser survivor.

"I knew we were hit," said Brown. "It was similar to the Fraser. When everything started falling that was the first thing that came to my mind. I waited there and didn't say a word.

"I heard someone shout 'Where's a flashlight?' I didn't get a flashlight. I just grabbed some cigarettes and a lifebelt. Then I went up the ladder to the merchant ship.

"Believe me, I wasn't waiting for any flashlight."

In addition to those who transferred by ladders and ropes, the last four to leave the remains of the Margaree slipped into the sea aboard a raft, the high seas having forced the merchantman away from the destroyer.

These men, three officers and Able Seaman Victor Hardwick Holman of Duncan, B.C., were in the water for about an hour before being picked up.

Didn't Know What Hit Them.

The survivors of the Fraser sinking who gained the warm safety of this Bermuda port after the Margaree disaster said they knew their vessel had been hit by something but at the time they thought it might be anything from a torpedo to another vessel.

Those who had not experienced the Fraser sinking thought the jolt was just the impact of the high seas.

"I was on the Fraser and I knew we'd been hit again," said Leading Cook James Edward Wickes of Victoria. He was in the aft room asleep. "I found my lifebelt and one for Martell (Steward Gordon Martell of Halifax) and then I climbed aboard the merchantman."

Ab. Stan Meddings of Toronto, not a veteran of the Fraser, was on duty with the depth charge crew and said until he realized the extent of the collision he wasn't much concerned with it.

"I didn't think much of it at all," he said. "As a matter of fact I thought it was just a graze."

Even after they were safe aboard the merchant vessel the survivors worried over the Margaree and the danger her floating remains might be to shipping.

Cpo. Writer Paul Dubois of Montreal, said Lieut. Patrick F. X. Russell of Victoria, Lieut. William Landymore of Brantford, Ont., and Lieut. E. J. Sawdy, the latter a Royal Navy officer, requested the merchant vessel go back and sink what remained of the destroyer.

The merchant captain at first would not grant the request but when morning came Lieut. Russell with Ab. Holman, Ls. Harry F. Leggett of Halifax and Victoria and some of the merchant crew, lowered a boat and attempted to get alongside the Margaree.

Used Guns on Her

"The sea was running too high," said Dubois.

Eventually the attempt to board the wreckage was abandoned and the after section of the destroyer went down under gunfire from the merchant vessel, to remove a menace to navigation.

Stoker George Proulx of Melville, Sask., said he was down in the engine room when the crash occurred. The jolt threw him against a compressor. He was told to get up top and once on the Margaree he saw the merchant vessel looming alongside and he hoisted himself aboard.

"Tons of smoke" belched from the vessel's innards as the bow was severed, O.S. Don Snelgrove of Regina said.

O.S. Doug Watson of Toronto said he was between the funnels up forward doing duty watch when the vessels struck.

"The ship keeled up and I climbed on the depth charge throwers and waited until the ship came down. Then I got aboard the merchantman—and fast."

Union administration.

Four of the five Social Credit members of the House have given their support to the Premier's plan and it is expected Mr. Bracken will make a definite statement shortly on the set-up of his Union Cabinet.

Bracken's Reason.

The following points were stressed by Mr. Bracken as the reasons for the proposed political union;

1. Maximum co-operation with the Dominion in Canada's war effort.

2. Implementation of the Sirois report on Dominion-Provincial relations as an indispensable item in the war effort.

3. A fair deal for all those engaged in agriculture by the adoption of national policies which will afford to producers at least some margin of compensation for their products over and above the cost of production.

4. Provision as far as it lies within the power of the Manitoba legislature that the sacrifices which war and economic crisis brings to Canadians shall be distributed as equitably as possible between all classes and should not be left to lie "entirely where they fall."

5. The disposition of Manitoba problems in the provincial sphere and the advocacy of the province's interests in the federal sphere during the last war and post-war period.

The correspondence released by Mr. Bracken revealed also that consideration has been given to a plan under which all major business services of the government would be brought under one minister who would be aided by a budget committee of the executive council.

mas."

Lounging at ease in the dockyard the rest of the Margaree survivors smilingly echoed his words.

Stoker Francis Stapley of Montreal, married in Halifax a week before he sailed from that port, was serving his first hitch aboard a destroyer. Prior to his joining the Margaree he was in the merchant marine and when the collision occurred he was on duty in the stokehold.

"It didn't seem as if we were bumped," he said. "Water came down and the lights went out. As I had been in the merchant marine before and had taken some hard bumps I didn't think anything had happened.

"When the lights went out I felt for the ladders and once I'd got my hands onto them it was easy to grab and get out."

Ab. Stan Meddings of Toronto, expressed a desire to get home now that the experience was all behind him "and get married some day." Meddings didn't get much of a jolt out of the collision—"I thought it was just a graze."

President Roosevelt has let it be known that immediately after the election, when Congress resumes business sessions, a new American defence construction and manufacturing program will be launched.

Willkie, in his campaign speeches, has indicated the administration he would head, if elected, would go even farther in this direction than Roosevelt has planned.

Meanwhile rumors continue to fly about regarding the secret bombsight of the United States air force. From time to time there are reports that it has been already placed at the disposal of the British Government, but never any official statement.

Holds Russia Balks Turkey

LINDSAY, Nov. 2.—The British people should be under no illusions regarding Russian assistance to Turkey and Greece against Axis aggression, Tracy Phillips of Toronto, traveller, author and scientist, declared here last night in addressing the Canadian Club.

Mr. Phillips said that "Turkey is not actively helping Greece at present, because her entire foreign policy is dominated by Russia.

"Russia," he continued, "will not fight any major war except on her immediate borders, and Turkey, looking back at German aggression in Poland and Scandinavia, is aware that Russia has entered the back door of these nations while Germany has been pressing against the front."

While the Islamic people of the Near East resent the intrusion of the European nations, nevertheless the British people are popular and have the sympathetic support of all Moslems, who realize that their destiny is black indeed if Germany gains control, he added.

More Big Planes But No Seat 13

OTTAWA, Nov. 2—(CP)— Trans-Canada Air Lines' passenger fleet will be increased by arrival of six sleek new airplanes—but, technically, they still won't carry that 13th passenger.

An Air Lines spokesman said the new plane—the Lockheed Lodestar—would carry 14 passengers and a crew of three, but the seats will number from one to 15 because 13 will be omitted.

"I guess you could call it superstition," the spokesman said. "People making their first flight probably would object to sitting in a seat number 13."

The planes now in use—the Lockheed Super-Electras—carry 10 passengers and a crew of three, and the seats number to 10. The Lodestars, considered faster and more efficient than the present model, will be delivered from the Lockheed factory in Los Angeles, Calif. Arrival of the machines will bring the TCA passenger fleet strength to 21.

Ottawa Opening To Lack Frills

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 (CP)—Utmost simplicity will mark Parliament Hill ceremonies next Tuesday when parliament reconvenes only to prorogue. The same wartime simplicity will feature the open of a new session of parliament two days later.

The historic ceremonies have been stripped of their scarlet tunics and gold braid for the duration. There will be no mounted escort for His Majesty's representative, no guard of honor, no salute of guns; merely an escort of five motorcycle officers.

Morning coats and service uniforms will take the place of the brilliant Windsor uniforms of government leaders and dress uniforms of the defence services. The few women attending will wear afternoon gowns, instead of rainbow-hued evening gowns.

Honor of officiating at the two ceremonies is being shared by the Governor-General and his deputy, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff. The Chief Justice will preside at Tuesday's prorogation, and the Earle of Athlone at Thursday's opening.

For prorogation, members of the Senate and the House of Commons will meet at 3 p.m. in their respective chambers. In the Commons the speaker will announce that four vacancies have been filled by by-elections since parliament adjourned Aug. 7. The four new members will be introduced: Navy Minister Macdonald (Lib.-Kingston), Louis Breithaupt (Lib.-Wellington South), A. H. Bence (Con.-Saskatoon) and G. Russell Boucher (Con.-Carleton).

On being summoned to the upper chamber by the gentleman usher of the Black Rod, members of the Commons will proceed to the Senate to hear His Majesty's representative read the speech from the throne thanking members for their services during the past session. When they are dismissed there, they will not return to the Commons chamber but disperse.

No Honorary Order.

The Chief Justice of Canada, as Deputy Governor-General, will be attended only by a field officer in waiting, two aides and three members of the Governor-General's staff.

There will be no honorary aides. Sir Lyman, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other members of the government will wear morning coats, not Windsor uniforms.

At Thursday's opening, the procedure will be practically the same. The Earl of Athlone, accompanied by Princess Alice, will arrive at the Parliament Buildings by automobile, escorted by five motorcycle officers, three in front, two behind, as the Chief Justice will do Tuesday.

The ceremonial in the Chamber will be the same as for prorogation except the Governor-General will have in his procession the headquarters staffs of the three defence services, officers commanding the various units in the capital and eight or nine honorary aides, in addition to his own full staff.

Instead of placing invited guests on the floor of the Senate, the Senators will occupy their regular desks, with members of the Commons massed before the bar of the Upper House. Diplomatic and other guests will be placed in the south gallery.

Present plans are to admit the general public to the Parliament Buildings for these two events but admission to available public gallery seats to witness the ceremony will be only by ticket.

Channel-Biscay Closed By Mines

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP).—Laying of a great new minefield which closes the English Channel and the Bay of Biscay to enemy shipping was reported by the British Broadcasting Corporation last night, quoting an announcement by the Admiralty.

The new minefield stretches from Bishop's Rock Light to the Sicilly Isles to the French coast near the Spanish border, the B.B.C. said.

"This minefield closes the English Channel, and the Bay of Miscay to enemy shipping and completes the cast net with which the Royal Navy has enclosed the German-occupied coast," it added.

"The mines were laid by the Royal Navy, and by aircraft of the coastal command, who will see to it that they are renewed continually."

The B.B.C. said the Admiralty announcements warned masters of ships bound for Channel ports in England that they should get routing instructions from British consuls in foreign ports, or from the naval control service officer in a British port.

"Any vessel which fails to do this may enter dangerous waters at her risk and peril," the Admiralty said.

The B.B.C. said British mines now enclose the Norwegian, Dutch, Danish and Belgian coasts, and the southern waters of the Baltic. In addition mines bar the Bristol and Irish Channels.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Dealers in the wheat pit at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday reported one of the dullest sessions in months and prices closed unchanged with the December future at 71⅝ cents a bushel and May at 75⅞ cents. Trading was authorized in the July future, but no trades were posted.

Canadian and United States mills were credited with a few purchases and elevators made hedging sales. Buenos Aires market was on holiday.

Exporters and shippers purchased approximately 750,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern in the cash wheat market. There was a good demand for other grades, but business was limited to odd cars by light offerings. Spreads were generally unchanged.

Hedging sales appeared in oats and barley in the coarse grain pit, while crushers supported flax and there was a suggestion of outside interest in rye. The price range was narrow except in flax, which gained more than a cent at one stage.

Lakefield Ladies Enjoy W.A. Meeting

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 2—(ENS). — A delightful afternoon tea was held at the home of Mrs. George H. Spence, Regent Street, Lakefield, on Thursday for members of Group B of the W.A. of the Lakefield United Church.

After the members had assembled everyone joined in singing several old familiar hymns with Mrs. H. C. Moore at the piano.

Mrs. Spence in a few well-chosen words, welcomed the ladies and assured them of the pleasure it is for her to open her home for gatherings of this nature.

A short program was then presented A humorous reading, "St. Peter at the Gate," was given by Mrs. H. J. Kemp. Mrs. Davidson gave a short paper, entitled "A Living Likeness." A vocal duet by Mesdames R. W. Little and J. R. Hull, entitled "The Sun Will Shine," was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. D. H. Webster's reading was entitled "Our Aim."

The dedicatory service followed. Mrs. Albert Darling led the members of the group by reading the prayer card. Prayer was then offered by Mrs. G. H. Spence, after which the offering was received. While it was being counted, "My Calendar for 1941" was presented by twelve ladies, representing each month of the year, beginning at January as follows:

"I would begin this year, by ridding my heart and mind of all the little petty things that intended to make me small, I would write off all the old grudges and dislikes, knowing that my friends must have a few good points.

December lady gave her part as follows: I would try to live this year as though it were the last one left to me; as though there were no other chances, no more tomorrows in which to do the things I should do and repair the things I have done.

Mrs. H. J. Kemp, treasurer, gave a report of the year's work, the results being most gratifying.

Dainty refreshments were then served by the hostess, assisted by Mesdames R. C. Chittick and R. W. Little. A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Miss Isabella Hamilton, seconded by Mrs. R. G. Charlton, to Mrs. Spence for her kindness and hospitality.

Mrs. C. S. Tanner, head convener of the group, spoke very briefly, thanking the members for their co-operation and help during the year.

3 Planes To One

LONDON, Nov. 2—(CP).—In the past 12 weeks the Germans have lost three planes and 14 airmen for every British plane and airman lost, the Air Ministry news service said today and put Nazi losses at 2,433 bombers and fighters since August 8.

The Germans' fighter and bomber losses have been about equal, it said.

"If we allow the usual number of pilots, observers and gunners to the various types destroyed, over 6,000 German airmen have been killed or taken prisoners," the service said.

Jesus Declares His Mission To Seek and Save the Lost

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for November 3 is Luke 4 and 5, the Golden Text being Luke 19:10, "For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost.")

THERE ARE so many interesting stories of Christ's life on earth in this lesson that we shall hardly be able to cover them all.

First, last week we mentioned His temptation in the wilderness. We told of His days of hunger and of Satan asking Him why he did not turn the stones at their feet into bread, as He could so easily have done. Jesus' answer, you remember, was: "Man does not live by bread alone."

Then Satan took Jesus up into a high mountain and showed Him all the glory of the earth, telling Him that all that should be His if He would worship Satan. Jesus replied: "Get thee behind me, Satan." Taking Him to the top of the temple in Jerusalem, Satan then told Jesus to cast Himself down, if He really was the Son of God, for the Lord would give His angels charge over Him and would save Him. Jesus said: "It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." Jesus never argued with evil, you see. He denounced it.

Satan left Jesus after this, and He "returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee." People had heard about Him by now, and He went about, teaching in the synagogues. He came to Nazareth, where He was brought up, and, as was His custom, went to the synagogue on the Sabbath. As He stood up to read, a book was handed Him, and He read from it:

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath annointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

Nazarenes Are Angered.

He closed the book and everyone looked at Him. They wondered at His gracious words. They said among themselves, "Was not this Joseph's son?" Then He reminded them that God had not favored them especially. That He had, when a great famine had been on the land, favored a widow of the city of Sidon; that a Syrian was cured of leprosy. At that the people became so angry that they turned Him out of the temple and took Him to a hill that overlooked the city, with the intention of casting Him down. But Jesus, who had reminded them that "no prophet is accepted in his own country," calmly slipped through the crowd and went His way.

In Capernaum, a city of Galilee, he cast out a devil from a sorely afflicted man, and all wondered. In Simon Peter's house He cured Simon's wife's mother of a fever, so that she regained her strength and "ministered unto them." And so He went, healing the sick, casting out evil spirits, and even when He went into the desert to rest, multitudes followed Him.

As the people pressed upon Him to hear the word of God, Jesus saw two ships standing empty by the lake of Galilee, the fishermen being near by cleaning and mending their nets. Jesus preached to the people from the boat, and Simon entering the boat, Jesus told him to go out from land and cast his net. Simon said: "Master, we have toiled all night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless, at Thy word I will let down the net." He did so, and when he hauled it up it was so full of fish that the net broke and Simon called his partners to help him. There were enough fish to fill two boats. When Simon Peter saw this he fell on his knees before the Master, saying: "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." He felt that he was not worthy to associate with his Lord. Jesus answered Simon, "Fear not; from thenceforth thou shalt catch men."

This was the first mention of His disciples, for when James and John and Simon saw this miracle, they left their work and followed the Master.

Heals Man of Palsy.

One day when He was preaching in a house friends brought a man afflicted with palsy. They could not get through the people with the man on his bed; so they took him on the roof and let him down, on his couch, through the tiling, and Jesus healed him. The scribes and Pharisees said among themselves that this man—meaning Jesus — blasphemed, for Jesus had told the sick man that his sins were forgiven. Only God could forgive sins, the Pharisees reasoned. But Jesus said:

"Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?" Both deeds are impossible for man, but easy for God.

The calling of Levi (later called Matthew) was next. Levi was a publican, or tax collector, for the Romans, and hated by his own people. He gladly left his work and followed the Master. He made a great feast in his house, which was another cause of fault finding by the priests. Why should these followers of Jesus feast? John the Baptist and his followers had fasted. Moreover, Jesus and His disciples ate with publicans and sinners.

Jesus answered them that He had not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Also that there was no need to fast and be sorrowful when He was in their midst and had brought them "tidings of great joy."

Always Jesus, in His short time on earth, lovingly helped the distressed, saving His rebukes for those who oppressed others and who thought more of traditions and customs than they did of human rights. For truly, "the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

Israel's Soul Often Saved By Teaching of Prophets

By REV. E. R. JAMES

Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; I sent unto you all my servants, the prophets.
Jer. 44; 4.

What is your idea of a prophet? The popular opinion is that he foretells the future—a sort of spiritual fortune teller. We are all interested in the future otherwise the astrologers, palmists, crystals gazers and such like would shut up shop. They would not be paying for the air or advertising if they were not making a tremendous harvest. The earliest mention of such a character is seen in the name of "Seer" given to Samuel. Saul goes to him to enquire about the loss of his asses. Even in those earliest days such a man had but a limited influence. No doubt part of the prophetic office was the power of fore-telling something of the future. But this was not the chief work. The prophet was a man who told forth the mind of God to his generation. He had a vision or ideal of God which he burned to reveal to his people. He is a man who has felt the sense of God's presence. Elijah was sure he stood in the presence of Jehovah. Such a sense gave him courage in the presence of the great ones of his nation. Dr. Davidson, the famous Old Testament scholar, reminds us that the Jewish prophets saved Israel's soul by their teaching of the deep truths of God's character. This was their great and important work. It is also that of the modern prophet or preacher to impress upon his people the importance of the deep things of God; here a little, there a little, line upon line, precept upon precept, as they are able to bear it.

Let us meditate upon the particular truth revealed to Isaiah, the greatest of the Old Testament prophets. He was a member of an important family and moved in the highest circles. He felt and saw the awful political dangers of his people. Their leaders were playing politics; first with Egypt in the south and then with Assyria in the East. How modern. Isaiah's heart is heavy with the coming calamity. He takes his trouble into the House of God. There he receives the vision of God's holiness. He hears the cherubim crying: "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord God of Hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory". A deep emotion fills his heart as he cries: "Woe is me for I am a man of unclean lips." He has a revelation of the meaning of holiness. To the Hebrew mind of that day the holy man was a separated person, separated primarily for some work in the temple and service of his god. It did not mean essentially moral purity. We see the same idea today in the religions of India where the holy men and holy women are generally the most immoral but are looked upon by the multitudes as holy and separated for the service of their god.

So to Isaiah there comes a new meaning the word holy. Jehovah is morally pure and His servants also must be morally pure. God is separated by His purity; His worshippers must be separated by their purity from their neighbours. They are to be a separated people in the highest sense of the word.

He has had a vision of God's purity and in that light he sees the darkness of his own character and utters the bitter cry:

"Woe is me for I am a man of unclean lips. Perhaps you have had the experience of meeting some saint of God, showing something of the loveliness of the Christ, Who is being formed in him. You go away feeling your own unworthiness. God in His great mercy has given you a vision of His own moral purity. It is the best robe God has cast upon His child and you will be either a better man or a worse for that vision.

Isaiah spends the rest of his life in preaching to his people that God is holy, morally pure. It was a new idea; and everlasting truth. It was sufficient for Isaiah and for his people. God was teaching Isaiah and his people according to the principle He reveals: "Here a little, there a little". Slowly He is training His people through His prophets to be able to receive the greater truth that God's Son, Jesus Christ, is indeed the pure One, the Image of the invisible God.

Perhaps it is your privilege to sit under some prophet of God whose burning words thrill and move you. Can you confess: "The Lord God hath opened mine ear and I was not disobedient"? If so, thanks be unto the Lord.

THOU CHILD SHALL BE CALLED THE PROPHET OF THE HIGHEST TO GUIDE OUR FEET INTO THE WAY OF PEACE.

Bringing Gospel Message To Labrador Inhabitants

There has been renewed interest in recent years in Labrador and Newfoundland. The coast line runs for about 300 miles. The rocks rise out of the ocean, and the visitor travels for miles with practically no timber and no settlement in view. The solemn, austere loneliness of the landscape even from a boat is appalling.

There are various classes of people in Labrador, most of them are engaged in fishing. There are Eskimos in the far north, whose civilization is different from the people in the south. Then there are little colonies of people from the old land, mainly from Scotland, who settled in this strange country many years ago and still remain. There are also some Indians who live mainly by trapping in the interior of the country.

Amongst this varied population there are missionaries at work who risk their lives in their little craft to bring the gospel to these lonely people, converts have been won, and modest churches have been built on this barren coast line. Doctors and nurses, too, give their services in caring for the sick. Some specialists from New York take their holidays there in order that they may help these folk, by performing critical operations which the local surgeons would not attempt. This strange land and people will be the subject of a picture sermon in St. Andrew's church on next Sunday night.

Jesus Declares His Mission — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 4, 5.

After His baptism and temptation in the wilderness, Jesus visited His home town of Nazareth. On the Sabbath day He went to the synagogue and stood up to read.

When He read from the book, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me because He hath annointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor," all marvelled.

"Is not this Joseph's son?" people asked. They grew angry, and took Jesus to a high hill to cast Him down, but He slipped through the throng and went His way.

Jesus went about preaching, healing the sick and casting out devils. He also called James and John, Simon and Levi to leave their work and follow Him. (GOLDEN TEXT—Luke 19:10.)

There's So Much Silence

We are not at all convinced that the move made by Italy against Greece is as simple as it appears. We have read that an Italian corps was hurled back and that its members broke and fled when attacked by the Greeks. We can only hope that is repeated many times. But Greece is not what can be termed a military power, and Italy claims to be in that class and has been working toward that end for years. It actually started years before Hitler was known or heard of.

There is too much silence in the situation. Stalin has not said a word, and we have no reason at all to believe that a democracy can trust Stalin. Nor is there anything from Turkey to indicate positively what is going to be done. From Ankara comes word that Turkish officials have been in conference with the British, and there is also reference to "our ally, Britain." That has a pleasant sound, but it actually tells little.

Bulgaria borders on Greece, but no one has any faith in that country. Bulgaria is ambitious and wants a piece of Greece to give access to the Aegean Sea. Such a promise might be sufficient to allow Bulgaria to give Nazi troops the right to cross Bulgaria on the way to attack Greece. The one hope there is that if Bulgaria makes a move Turkey will act.

As usual when there is a call sent out to honor a contract, Britain has gone to the assistance of the Greeks. It is quite true she is thus fighting Italy and Germany, and it might be argued she might as well fight them one place as another.

But Britain is fighting at home; fighting for her life, and Britain is also guarding the approaches to the Suez canal and her Eastern territory, and it is not possible to become deeply taken up with warfare on too many fronts.

From the Turkish capital, Ankara, there comes word of the friendly attitude of Moscow. What that means we do not profess to know because we have failed to discover any attitude in Moscow which can be termed friendly to anything except Moscow itself.

No Visible Mark Of Guilt

The murder trial at Belleville, at the conclusion of which Frederick Thain was found guilty of having shot to death Arnold Wellman and Nancy Wellman, his wife, was reported for the Examiner by a staff writer, Harry Theobald. He sat in court where he had opportunity to see the man who was finally counted as a murderer in a dual way; he had opportunity to compare his appearance with that of other folk. We suggested that Mr. Theobald furnish the answer to the question: "Was there anything in the appearance or manner of Fred Thain to suggest that he would do such a thing?" This was the reply:

"The notion that a man's character is stamped on his features setting him apart from his fellows was belied in the appearance of Fred Thain, the Rawdon township man who was found guilty at Belleville Friday afternoon of the murder of two elderly neighbors. The enormity of the crime and the hard brutality in the hand that did it would have suggested that some discernible brand revealing a criminal heart and nature should be recognizable in the eyes and face of the man who confessed the deed and was found guilty of it. The brand of Cain would surely be upon him. But, looking at Fred Thain you felt certain that he could have been placed among the three hundred spectators in the courtroom and you would have passed him by as one of the least likely to be suspected. To two experts in mental cases and to the average layman, Thain looked to be just an average man, and rather kindly in the little glint of a smile that played about his eyes continually, a rather trusting smile it seemed. There didn't seem to be a harsh line in the reflections of his personality, no nervousness about him, nothing to indicate that he could be capable of taking a human life.

"And that strong impression left spectators of the trial baffled, so contrary was this man Thain, in his appearance, to all the usual opinions that a killing instinct should be plainly written upon the criminal. That persistent question of how such an awful contradiction could exist and yet not be somehow visible was the challenging story running through this trial, and in the end it went unanswered. Even those two doctors, heads of two Ontario hospitals for mental patients, could offer no explanation, and the silence left a strange uneasiness about dark corners of the human mind that may never be thought to exist."

They Should Be Present

What under the sun is the use of having conferences regarding accidents on the highways? The people who cause accidents are not present, and if they were they could probably add nothing of intelligence to the proceedings.

In the early hours of a new day there were eight cars and a traffic officer's motorcycle wrecked on the Queen Elizabeth Highway. Seven persons were injured; car damage is estimated at $10,000; one man was arrested for reckless driving and charged with being intoxicated.

And that highway is about the last word in up-to-date construction. One of those big two-lane affairs where it is not possible to meet car coming from the other direction. And yet right there they crack up eight cars and seven people in remarkably short space.

Those are the people who ought to attend conferences about the safe driving of a car. If they were to tell the truth there might be revealed a form of stupidity or indifference which would give authorities something definite on which to work.

No Exactly Modest

Mayor La Guardia of New York has received a summons. It told him he would have to appear in court to answer to a charge by Benjamin H. Owens of Detroit.

The Mayor of New York was in Detroit on October 21 addressing a political rally. Mr. Owens said something which the peppery man from New York did not like. The result was that the robust La Guardia seized Owens' necktie and gave it a serious yank.

Now we learn that according to Mr. Owens' way of compiling things such a yank is worth $350,000. That is the amount of currency for which he is going to ask judgment. It's a big amount and it seems to be as foolish as it is big. People who go to meetings and proceed to say pointed things should not complain much if the point happens to turn in their direction.

Moreover we doubt if courts were instituted in United States in the first place to become cluttered up with claims which are so exaggerated that they look foolish.

That Word "Kibitzers"

The word "kibitzer" has been with us for some time. Your dictionary will not shed light on its origin because it is one of those words without pedigree. And possibly that should indicate that those who are meticulous about the grammatical purity of their utterance should leave it alone.

But that strange word will not stay down. We hear it used to tell of the individual who looks over the shoulder of some person who is reading a paper; he wants to read too even if he possesses no paper. We have heard it again when speaking of people who look over the shoulders of those who are playing cards because they are curious to know what they have in their hand. Possibly they are responding to an untamed natural impulse; they are just plain curious and cannot conceal it.

The word is making its way into the papers, and it is getting into fairly large type in the headings. We noticed it in the Globe and Mail where there was this heading:

Contractor Builds Gallery
For Kibitzers on Ottawa Job.

The story tells of the erection of a new hotel in Ottawa. (We believe it is needed too). Like all structures of that sort it is necessary to gouge out a great hole in the earth, so the contractor built the so-called gallery along the edge of the excavation. We learn there is a firm railing against which they can lean, and the gallery is well patronized. It is filled with kibitzers, or sidewalk superintendents, if you prefer that phrase.

We rather like the idea. There is something worth looking at when one comes to a big scoop shovel and a fleet of trucks working in a hole in the ground. Never have we enjoyed the temper or the vision of the man who erected a large board fence around such a place and put a sign on the door "Keep Out." Always have we wanted to go in or find a knot hole through which a kibitzer could squint even to a limited degree.

Whether Ottawa could pass an Order in Council making it obligatory to provide galleries for kibitzers on all construction work is something on which we have no information and also faint hope. But we like the idea and we have a fondness for the contractor who did that kindly thing. In fact we feel a trifle sorry for the individual who is content to pass along the street and cheerfully ignore men and machines who are combining to gouge great holes in the earth.

It's Easy To Fill The Paper

People often wonder where the newspapers get material enough to fill their wages day after day. Actually it is very easy, and in these hectic times the problem is even diminishing.

This way: The morning papers carried a report that Neville Chamberlain, retired Prime Minister of Britain, had left for California. What route he had taken was not known, but he had been at sea about ten days. The doctor said he needed sunshine and he was off to California to seek it.

The afternoon papers (same day) announced that Mr. Chamberlain had not left England and had no intention of doing so. In that way there are two stories where apparently there should have been no story at all.

Then there was the report (yesterday) of 140 Russian airplanes which had been forwarded to Greece; a nice assortment of bombers and fighters, and of assorted sizes. Then (today) there is the announcement from Moscow via Tass, the official news agency, that the story is a mere fantasy. So you see how easy it is to fill up the paper.

One Man Can Hold a Meeting

Ontario Court of Appeals had to decide whether one man could hold a meeting, and the answer was that he could. It was in the case of an estate at London. In the usual way there would have been a meeting of creditors and that meeting would have named a trustee.

In this case there was but one creditor, so the registrar in bankruptcy made an appointment, and against that step complaint was made. So in the end we find that one man can hold a meeting, provided of course that in such circumstances he is the only creditor.

There have been other cases of one man holding a meeting or a conference or a consultation. Nehemiah did it when he was rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. Complaint was made that high usury rates were being charged within the city, and it is recorded in Nehemiah 5 that: "I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words. Then I consulted with myself and I rebuked the nobles." So there is nothing new about one man holding a meeting.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A pig must be surprised to know that he is worth $11 per hundred dressed today and $11.50 yesterday.

We may be out in the count, but at the moment we can think of no nation which has not been recently threatened by some other.

In court at Windsor 100 radio owners were fined from $1 to $5 for not having licenses, so it looks as though the war had broken out on a new front.

The Communist Club of Chicago University has disbanded because of lack of interest. There used to be a membership of 80 in the days before people had a chance to see communism in action.

More recruits are wanted for the R.C.M.P., and they must be British subjects and single men. That makes it more difficult as we have always understood that the best men are married.

In some sections turnips are selling for as little as ten to twelve cents per bushel. If you know nothing about turnips we advise going out in the country and working on the business of taking them in for half a day. Then next day, using the pain in your back as the basis of compilation, figure for yourself what the price per bushel should be.

CHRONIC

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When John sits down to ham and eggs, he kicks upon the table legs, he has strange things to say; he sees no evidence of brains, and in his own rough way he claims, we had this yesterday.

¶ When John sits down to slabs of beef, he seems to sink in pits of grief, at times he'll sort of roar; why do they fix his meals up so, it's scarce more than two days ago, he had that stuff before.

¶ Then when a meat loaf comes along, he acts as though all things went wrong, he glares upon the stuff; just recently they had the same, it's common as an April rain, John's words come very gruff.

¶ Bread pudding makes him turn his nose, you'd think the man might come to blows, or he might have the mange; there's nothing good in stuff like that, it leaves him feeling stale and flat, it's high time for a change.

¶ When he lights into apple pie, John heaves another heavy sigh, had pies three days ago; says he can tell almost each day, which way the food is going to lay, can name it in a row.

¶ And does this John stop to suggest, the sort of victuals he'd like best, or speak in helpful tones?; you couldn't pry from him a word, the only sound that's ever heard—is when he starts to groan.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

WHEN Thomas Wolfe died at the age of 37 he left behind him material for two novels. The first of these, "The Web and the Rock," appeared in 1939; the second, "You Can't Go Home Again," has recently been published by Harpers. It has been greeted with enthusiasm by the critics. The words 'greatness', 'genius', and 'immortal', have flashed like gems in the reviews of the large American papers, and as usual Canadian criticism has echoed their cries with the eagerness of a little girl who hopes to gain tolerance by endorsing the opinions of her older brother. While willing to grant that the book is fine and provocative, the present reviewer declines to join in the apotheosis of Thomas Wolfe, and hopes that he will be able to explain why this is so to the satisfaction of his readers.

C & B

It is no compliment to a writer of Wolfe's great ability to describe him as a genius or an immortal if time is unwilling to justify those words. Works of genius live for many hundreds of years. They are read and re-read. Parts of them pass into the common knowledge of the race. Will this ever be so with "You Can't Go Home Again"? It is doubtful. Let us see how many people read it in twenty years time; more important, let us see how many people have re-read it. Genius is not a word to be used lightly; when a reviewer employs it we are reminded of Sam Goldwyn's reply when asked how business was in Hollywood: "Colossal—but its picking up."

"You Can't Go Home Again" is a large and formless book. It is described as a Novel About a Lost Modern Who Found Himself; sometimes the reader feels that he could show this Lost Modern a few short-cuts, but on the whole the book holds the interest most successfully. It is, like all Wolfe's books, autobiographical, and it has the authentic tone of experience in almost every page. But the progress of the book is as clumsy and lumbering as the antics of a dancing bear. It mixes passages of narrative with great chunks of introspection and social satire. A book written in this chaotic manner can only be successful when the reader, having fought its way through it, is left with a large and complete impression of the author's subject. This is the case with "War and Peace," which is exasperating to read, but when finished leaves the reader with a tremendous sense of enriched experience. "You Can't Go Home Again" fails to do this, but fails by a very narrow margin.

The book contains some passages of magnificent insight. The description of the effect of the stock-market crash of October, 1929, on the town of Libya sums up admirably the spirit of mad greed which infected the whole of this continent in those days when it seemed that dreams had come true and that money did grow on bushes. The bitter contempt which Wolfe expresses for the ethics and spirit of Big Business will find an echo in the hearts of many readers. Having anatomized the effect of the Big Boom on a small town Wolfe gives us an equally minute picture of the same influence at work in New York. The Jack family are wealthy friends of the hero, George Webber, and they give a large party a week before the Crash. The chief attraction is a Mr. Piggy Logan, who shows off his puppet-circus to the enraptured guests. On this frame Wolfe hangs an amazing tapestry of High Life in the GoldenAge.

Wolfe was American to the very core of his being. It is his love of his homeland which inspires some of the finest parts of his book. He is bitter and violent in his denunciation of the frauds who infest his country—business frauds and artistics frauds. It is impossible not to be stirred and refreshed by his invective. When he is lashing out at the enemies of what he considers best in America Wolfe reveals what is best in himself, and we are filled with admiration for his power and with regret for his early death. This Americanism, however, is responsible for his misunderstanding of England, which must worry British readers. We wish that Thomas Wolfe could have been more our friend.

SOME of the American reviewers wrote enthusiastically of Wolfe's ability to draw character, as shown in this book. This enthusiasm is difficult to understand. Even the hero, George Webber, whose soul's growth we are expected to watch, is a shadowy creature to the last. It is amazing that so much self-revelation should produce so little result. The portrait of Sinclair Lewis is tantalizing. We hope for great things, but it is as flat and colorless as a photograph. The long and elaborate study of Maxwell Perkins, Wolfe's intimate friend and publisher, is somewhat embarrassing; his admiration for his editor has produced a picture of a sugar-plum elf with a whimsy-whamsy detestation of women. We are quite certain that Mr. Perkins is nothing of the kind; Wolfe's devotion has served him ill.

This book is large and turbulent and well worth the time it takes to read it; if one hesitates to call it great it is not because there are not elements of greatness in it. The reader wishes desperately at times that Wolfe had been able to discipline his talent, but in a way this is ungrateful, for the magnitude of his talent could not have survived much confinement. The lack of discipline in the book fits in with its lack of humour. Wolfe could be satiric and he could be funny in a Germanic, lumpish way, but he could not sustain a passage of humour for ten lines. His work is the outcome of much feeling and little thinking; in this respect he may be likened to his much-admired Tolstoy, who was never at his best when he began to analyze. Wolfe was a man of remarkable sensitivity; he suffered deeply, and it is of his suffering that he writes. His works have the faults which are inseparable from his virtues, but his was a rare ability, and we are deeply grateful for the record which he has left us of his own spiritual growth and of the America of his day.

• China Seems To Be Full of Fight

DISPATCHES from China during the past week report that the Chinese armies have burst into activity again, attacking the Japanese at a number of points along hundreds of miles of front and meeting with substantial successes. Perhaps this has something to do with the admitted Japanese efforts to negotiate peace so as to bring the "Chinese incident" to a close; an "incident" which the hot-headed Japanese militarists, to say nothing of the oppressed masses in Nippon, must be heartily sick of. When Hankow and Canton fell, it seemed as if the Chinese were near the end of their resistance, but that nation has displayed a resilence and a determination to endure and win that astonished the world, and flabbergasted and dismayed the Japanese in particular.

General Chiang Kai-shek has revealed himself as not only a great military leader, but an astute statesman, for he is virtually the head of both branches of the country's services. So far, he has refused to treat with his opponents, and it is probable he will refuse to treat with them now. It is a significant sign when a supposedly conquering nation throws out feelers for peace. It is a sign of failure and not of victory. Now is the time for Chiang to put the pressure on the Japanese, for he will feel that he has got them in the hollow of his hand. No doubt he is anxious for peace in order to save his people further suffering and to rebuild, but unless the proposed terms are really fair he will have nothing to do with them. One basic condition will be the withdrawal of every Japanese soldier, for the Chinese cannot trust the Japs to keep their promises so long as they maintain an army on Chinese soil.

The war has united the whole Chinese race in a manner contrary to all precedent, and with peace pourparlers in the offing, the generalissimo has taken steps to mend his political fences. Early in the year there was renewed friction between the Nationalist forces and the Communists. The Japanese have striven to widen the rift, but the Chinese leader has just concluded an agreement with his internal opponents, they nevertheless being true patriots, by which five more counties have been recognized as within the Communist sphere. He has supplied them with more armament, which is evidence of this increased solidarity against the common enemy.

Today, says the Shanghai correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, Randall Gould, the generalissimo represents as never before the one great symbol of China's fight to remain free.

So tremendous is the feeling in this respect, says Mr. Gould, that even Chiang could not manoeuver a "sell-out peace" if he were to desire to do so, which no one whatever will concede now as within the range of possibility. The increasing inconveniences, hardships, and trade route closures are being taken patiently as inevitable but temporary handicaps. As rapidly as possible means are being found to cope with each new obstacle in turn.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

• Moscow Chiefly Interested In Russia

THE ubiquitous question mark, Russia, pops up again in still another place as Greece fights off the Italian attack. Now what will Russia do? That is the question: On it depends in large part what Turkey will do, and whether the Axis is to gain one more advantage in its war against the British Empire or suffer what could be the decisive defeat of this war.

If the Soviets act as they have in other similar situations, as in Poland and the Baltic and Rumania, they will not move to support anybody in particular, but will sit quietly on the sidelines until an opportunity to seize in the area now opened up to aggression by the Italian attack?

The control of the Dardanelles is the great prize in this region. It has been suggested Russia might take "protective custody" over the points commanding this outlet from the Black Sea into the Aegean and Mediterranean. However, this would involve a most delicate situation with Turkey, and pressure might only cause Turkey to take its risk with Britain and Greece rather than to submit, especially should the British-Greek forces show staying power.

If, on the other hand, Russia should succeed in establishing its control over this passageway between seas, it still would hardly draw Moscow any nearer to Berlin. The ambitions of these two countries have traditionally crossed at Istanbul, Germany's proceeding by rail toward Bagdad, Russia's by water through "the Straits." The Axis in Greece would threaten Russia's position in Turkey and by threatening Turkey's control of the Dardanelles would also menace the interests of Russia in the Black Sea.

Of course, agreements can be written on paper to cover such questions. But agreements, in the lexicon of the Nazis, are necessarily temporary. Stalin knows this. That is one reason why he demanded something more than paper in Poland and the Baltic and in Bessarabia. As the war moves into the Balkans it will become harder for the Axis to find the tangible tokens of friendship that Moscow desires, and harder for Moscow to accept them since they may be available only at the expense of countries who are now Russia's good friends.—Christian Science Monitor.

• Who Are These "Big Shot" People?

DISTINGUISHED citizens sometimes look good to the public as occupants of public offices but it has happened that some of these notables in office have not come up to expectations. In fact some of them have proved keen disappointments for perfectly natural reasons.

Former Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, Democratic candidate for Governor, is a man with much business experience and he is frank enough to declare on the stump that he is going to move slowly when it comes to putting specially notable citizens on honorary, non-salaried positions in the state government in case he is elected Governor.

Very frankly Edison says:

"It is in theory a fine idea to obtain without cost to the taxpayer the services of distinguished citizens. But in some instances the distinguished citizens are the busiest people in the state. Public business waits on private. They govern, so to speak, with their left hands, while with their right hands they carry on the occupation that made them distinguished. I think that the state would often do better to take people, when necessary, that are not so well known in order to obtain persons—probably equally competent—who are not so busy."

In making this declaration Edison in no way minimizes the value of virtue in office. He does not lose sight of the fact that the public is entitled to the best men available. But he also makes the point that the best men, the most capable men, need not always be men who are especially distinguished or wearers of nicely adjusted haloes.

A man classed as just an ordinary man may, when put to the test in public life, prove to be a real "big shot."—Jersey Journal.

COINCIDENCE

ELSEWHERE on this page is recorded the coincidence that, just as young Alan Bemrose 2d was speaking to England by radio at the Herald Tribune Forum on Thursday, a letter from his mother was put in the desk of Mrs. May Lambertson Becker, who had the lad in charge.

Mrs. Bemrose, whose letter was three weeks on the way, expressed the hope that it might be possible for her son to speak to her by means of the new British Broadcasting North Atlantic Service. He was actually doing so at the time his mother's letter was delivered in New York.

This is another striking circumstance which marked the dramatic appearance of this 11-year-old lad before an audience of 3,000 persons. —New York Herald Tribune.

LONDON'S FIRE CHIEF

A HEAVY responsibility has fallen during the past few days on Comdr. Aylmer N. G. Firebrace, head of the London Fire Brigade.

As he took over his present post two years ago, he has had the lion's share in building up the Auxiliary Fire Service, and he must have been gratified in common with every London citizen, by the untiring heroism of the men under his command.

Comdr. Firebrace is an ex-naval man, and looks it. His tall, broad-shouldered figure, keen blue eyes and clean-shaven face radiate self-reliance and inspire confidence in his subordinates.

He fought at Jutland as gunnery officer in Centurion, and joined the Fire Brigade as principal officer in 1919. He is 54. — News of the World.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the Lord is clothed with strength wherewith he has girded himself; the world also is established that it cannot be moved.

Thy throne is established of old; thou are from everlasting.

The floods have lifted up, O Lord, the floods have lifted up their voice, the floods lift up their waves.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In the papers recently appeared an article regarding one "Miserable Critter" shooting ten partridge recently freed at the Nephaline Mine, Blue Mountains. I wonder if the person who marked this paragraph with four X's, put a stamp on it and had it mailed to me would be the "Miserable Critter" who hasn't yet polished his own doorstep?

I haven't been to the Nephaline Mine for three years, and further more just three days ago sixteen of these partridge were seen in one flock.

Boys Of Seventh Compose Own Song Hit

Col. Keeler, officer commanding the Army Training Centre at the Exhibition Grounds, along with Sergt. Bob Ross from Peterborough and Corporal Jack Low also from here have been eulogised in a marching song composed by members of the 7th platoon in camp.

The boys sing this song with vigor to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia" and the words for the marching air started when Ken Gibson, of Peterborough, one of the trainees was in a poetic mood. After singing the song for two reporters this morning, the boys voiced one regret, they had not included Lieut. Dick Stewart, their company commander, because they couldn't get anything on him.

In the seventh platoon are boys from this district, many of them from the city, and they are one of the smartest units on the grounds.

The songs is as follows:

When the Government decided that we would have to train,
We found that Adolph Hitler was the guy we had to blame;
So we take the thirty days learning
how to shoot,
So we won't be mangled by the Nazi boot.

Chorus:
We're the members of the Seventh,
We're the members of the Seventh,
We're the members of the Seventh,
The best of the bunch are we.

When we were in a factory we thought we had a boss,
We thought he was a real tough
guy, till we got Sergeant Ross;
For he keeps on a-yelling from dawn until the night,
"By the holy here and there, you guys are sure a sight."

Second chorus:
We're the members of the Seventh,
the best one of the bunch,
Even though the corporal always keeps us late for lunch;
We never falter when they holler
rise and shine,
But we wish they'd jump into the salty brine.

We never talk at night, we never get a chance,
Cause if we did the corporals would all begin to prance;
Then Corporal French he yells,
Come on get to sleep."
He surely doesn't mean it, but we never make a peep.

We like the thirty days, we think
it's lots of fun,
But there are a lot of things we
rather would have done.
When the time has come to leave
we may not want to go,
Because we will be sorry that we're leaving Corporal Low.

Colonel Keeler is the guy we'll have to cultivate,
If we want the passes that will let us stay out late.
We won't be thinking of the fences anymore,
But we'll use the gate as we should have done before.

THE DEVIL'S MANSION

By REX JARDIN

CHAPTER 52.

Blair took his revolver out of his pocket and held it tightly in his hand, then stepped ahead on his tip-toes. When he had walked to the prow, he looked back for Charlie. He had not heard the boy coming after him. Yes, there he was, at his elbow....

"A"....the letter danced in front of his eyes when he saw it, shiny brass against a white door. Janett was in there! Janet!

Blair's heart leaped, when he turned again to Charlie. 'Is there another entrance?"

"Yeh, one from the saloon, and one from stateroom 'B'."

Putting his hand on the brass knob, Blair found the door to stateroom "A" from the deck locked.

"Better try the saloon."

Charlie led the way there. The salon was dark. Taking Blair by the hand, he drew him through the room, and before Blair knew it, his hand was touching cold metal! A doorknob. This, too, would not turn. It must be locked from the inside!

"Hell. We're sailin'" he heard Charlie hiss behind him. True, the yacht was moving.

The window on the deck! This might be open! Blair, half stumbling over a chair, turned to leave. It was getting lighter. The dawn was breaking. He could see dimly the objects in the saloon.

In a few moments the two were on deck again....and Blair was standing under the window of the stateroom "A." It was open a crack.

Unfastening the shutters, he peered into the stateroom. Someone was lying on the bed....Janet! It must be Janet!

If he could get her out and down the rope while the yacht was moving slowly....they could get into the launch and be away....but if the yacht were to speed up!

He lurched against the window. The Wanderer was speeding up!

"Janet," he called softly, so softly he hardly heard his own voice. "Janet!"

The figure on the bed rose. Janet was looking toward the window, her eyes opened wide, staring at him.

"It's I....Blair!" Pushing open the window, he leaped into the stateroom and Janet was in his arms, her face pressed close to his.

He was kissing her lips, her eyes, her hair....

"I've a launch outside....it may be dangerous....but we can try it...."

"Who's there?" a voice demanded. Blair, his arms still around Janet, looked around. The voice seemed at his side.

Janet covered her face and started to moan.

"Who's there?" came the question again.

Blair looked bewildered at Janet. Where was the voice coming from. Her eyes met his, and then moved to the door which was just a few feet from where they were standing. The door evidently led into stateroom "B."

Gently taking his arms from the girl, Blair's fingers tightened around his revolver, and tiptoeing to the door, he flung it open and stepped in.

There was a scream, and then silence....

The light switch was near the door. So snapping it on, Blair looked at the thing on the floor....the thing that had screamed and then fallen at his feet.

Recoiling a little, he knelt for a moment. A man? Heavens!

Maurice Boisevain.....was this he? The love child of Morelle Boisevain, the child of Morelle and Maurice Creel?

The head of a man, yes. A head bristling with red hair like Morelle Boisevain's, except more vivid, more brilliant....hair such as Blair had never seen before. Coarse, almost like bristles....

A head as big as his own....the features were not badly formed, except that the face seemed evil, horrible, the mouth twisted, the lips bluish in hue.

A face that might have been handsome if it had not carried so much hate, so much vengeance in its expression.

But the body....

It could not be more than two and a half feet in height; strongly built regardless of the stature. The limbs were wiry but muscular. The small hands were clinched, the muscles of the arms knotted.

The body was clad in a red velvet robe, a robe that might have fitted a small child. Green slippers were on the feet.

He put his hand on the wrist of the dwarf at his feet.

Maurice had fallen when he had come in....screamed and fallen. He might have fainted.

But no, there was no pulse, nothing to indicate the man was alive, although the green eyes were open.

Hesitating a moment, Blair closed the eyes. Maurice was dead. Probably of fright, he thought. He who had been so fearless in the dark....

Glancing around the room, Blair noticed a well-bound leather box, with straps for carrying. In the side were two small apertures. Perhaps this was the way Maurice had entered the boat....unseen by the crew. As luggage.

Perhaps this was the way he had travelled, afraid that anyone would see him....

Closing the door behind him Rodman was in stateroom "A."

"He's dead, Janet. He must have died of heart failure, when I came in."

The girl clung to Blair and put shaking arms around his neck: 'Darling, it was so terrible...." she kept murmuring.

"We'll go now. I'll call the captain and tell him to stop." Blair gently put Janet on the bed, and reached for the phone. Yes, O'Malley was willing to stop. Glad to, if the fiend in stateroom "B" was dead, as Mr. Rodman said.

"I never really saw him in there ....Maurice I mean," Janet was saying...."Twice I saw his face in Miss Boisevain's crystal.....even that was terrible...."

"He's dead, Janet, darling, don't worry any more...."

"But, Blair, he fitted into a leather box! I nearly died when I got into the car at Miss Boisevain's, the car that took us to Vancouver. I thought I was alone at first, until I heard him talk, and discovered he was in the box....I broke a string of diamonds he gave me, and threw them out. It was the only thing I could think of. Did you find them?"

"Yes, that's how I finally came here."

"And Blair, at the hotel he used to come into my room at night, after dark and talk to me. He could see better in the dark, he said, than in the light. But I, I could not see him...."

"Here on the ship, he spent hours at night with me, sitting on that stool...." and she pointed to a small footstool on the floor...."telling me how much he loved me. He made Captain O'Malley marry us ....in here. Maurice was in the next room, but he could throw his voice any place. That's what used to frighten me the most, because at first I thought he was right beside me. Then I realized he was not, that he only had the power of throwing his voice....He used to tell me he loved me because he could not mould my mind to his.

"You see he gave me all the orders and then was near so he could hear me repeat them. I don't know what he would have done if I had tried to escape, or disobey him...."

"He's dead, dear, and the Wanderer has stopped. Shall we go?"

"Yes! But what shall we do with his things? His money? He has a trunk full of it. And all the jewels he gave me? Every night when he came in, I would find on the bed the next morning some jewel, a ring, a necklace, something.

"Rightfully they would be yours, wouldn't they?"

"No! Let's take them to Nita...she's stood for so much from him."

While Janet was gathering her things, Blair looked around the stateroom. It was luxuriously furnished, but the mirrors, there were many of them, were all opaque.

"Maurice painted them with something the first night. I heard him," Janet said. "He did the same thing at the hotel in Vancouver."

There was a little silence, and Janet began agin. "Blair, one night he read to me....some poems of Shelley's....in the hotel. It was as dark as pitch in the room. Another time he acted out a whole play for me....here. If I had not been so frightened I would have marvelled at it...."

In half an hour, Janet and Blair were in the big launch which belonged to the Wanderer, Janet's luggage and Maurice's belongings beside them. Charlie was in the small boat waving to them happily.

"Maurice told me, Blair, that before he met me he hated everyone, even his mother, for he blamed her for all his troubles, although he did not tell me what they were. He said he did not know then what love meant. And that, through me, he would be regenerated...."

Blair interposed:

"Captain O'Malley is going to take him out to sea and bury him, Janet. It's best, I think. And we're not going to lose any time getting back to New York!"

"Are you quite sure he's dead, Blair?" Janet asked as she snuggled up to him.

"Quite. Shall we be married here in Seattle now.....as soon as we land?"

"Why....I guess so."

Blair kissed her upturned lips, and patted her golden hair.

AUCKLAND, N.Z., Nov. 2—(CP)—The most astonished person in New Zealand when the nation's first conscription ballot was drawn was a Maori woman who found herself called up among the conscripts for the territorial army. AUCKLAND, N.Z., Nov. 1—(CP)—New Zealnd, most distant of the Dominions, has welcomed many official parties of British children evacuated from their homeland to stay for the duration of the war with New Zealand families. Many times more applications to take children have been received than the numbers of children being sent. Despite the suspension of the evacuation scheme parties would be assured of a warm welcome here.

Suez Canal Is Subject Of Kiwanis Talk

The Suez Canal was the subject of an address to the Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel Friday, and the speaker was Charles Saunders, manager of the Richard Hall Company.

Mr. Saunders began his talk with a quotation from a paragraph from a book written by the French author, Andre Sigfried. The author contended that any power ambitious of world domination must have a foothold around the Canal, and said if he knew who would control the Canal in the next century, he would be able to tell who would be the master of the world.

The Germans, said the speaker, had, before the war began, worked out a clever scheme, their plans of battle were well organized when the war began, and they have been amazingly successful, to date, in carrying them out. The plan has now struck a snag in the Battle of Britain, and the German type of plan demands that the army be kept going; the morale of the Germans will not stand up under the lack of activity, and for that reason it is to be expected that the theatre of war may change. Since the army is having what may be unexpected difficulty in the attempt upon Britain, it may be used in a campaign aginst the British interests in Africa, with the Suez Canal as the objective.

Always Jealous of Britain.

Germany has always been jealous of the connections England has in the Canal area, and the importance with which the connections are attached are more or less summed up in a statement written in German some years ago. The writer said that England could be mortally wounded in one place, and in one place only. That place is Egypt.

The speaker believes that the German army would have little trouble in an advance through the small countries between her and Egypt. The result of such a campaign is doubtful, but Mr. Churchill has been a keen observer, and may be counted upon to see the writing on the wall, if writing on the wall there is.

The Canal has been important for thousands of years; 4,000 years ago it was first built. From time to time it was let go to ruin, but it always restored as some more progressive Pharoah became ruler of Egypt. It had been out of operation, the speaker said, for about one thousand years before Count Ferdinand de Lesseps began the construction of the Canal as it is today.

Describing the difficulty the builder had in the course of the construction, the speaker went into the details surrounding the British gaining of control, and apparently authorities differ on the original outlay of capital. The price the British paid for shares that today are worth over $300,000,000.00, was something over $3,000,000.00, the speaker said. The deal was one of the master strokes in the annals of British statesmanship, however, and England, the nation that tried to handicap the builder, has, through the ages, been the one that has most benefitted from its construction.

In 1871 the shares that had originally been 500 francs, were worth 163 francs, and in 1937 they were worth 28,000 francs. Sadly to relate, the value of the shares has dropped to about one half that figure since the outbreak of war.

The Canal was constructed with the view to its being of use to all nations, and even through the Great War the ships of the German navy were quite free to pass through it. The ships of the British navy were, however, at the outside of the Canal, at either end, and immediately pounced upon the enemy as it emerged. During the Italian campaign against Ethiopia, the Italian ships were permitted to use the Canal. The customary fee for the transportation was insisted upon, and in the carrying of so many troops, it became quite an item. It was a thorn in the side of the Italian rulers, and one that brought forth many complaints.

Mr. Saunders advanced a thought that the Germans might begin an assault upon Gibraltar in the hope of distracting Britain from the Suez, while her forces, and those of Italy made for the Canal. The Italians and the Spanish are tools for the clever Hitler, and although Spain is not of much use so far, are nevertheless pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for the Germans.

It is expected that if the Germans get sufficiently close to the Canal to be a menace to the interests of the British, the Canal would be destroyed by the British. This view is held, the speaker said, in many circles.

Salonika Reported Occupied By British

Fear New Bacon Contract May Cut Price

OTTAWA, Nov. 2—The British bacon agreement ended last night and there is still no word of a new agreement being signed. Supporting the growing feeling that serious difficulties were being encountered in negotiations in Britain came word that Hon. J. G. Gardiner and J. G. Taggart, Bacon Board chairman, had delayed their return to Canada. Mr. Gardiner had been expected home for the opening of Parliament next week.

In the meantime hogs in record quantities are moving into the packing houses to be processed for export to Britain. The contract ceased to cover hog purchases two weeks ago, but the Bacon Board is committed for all purchases at the rate set a year ago. Already there are more than 15,000,000 pounds of what is being called interim bacon, and the total is moving up rapidly.

Deliveries this week will reach the all-time record figure of 157,000 hogs, of which more than two-thirds will be for export. Should the price in the new contract, as is now feared, be lower, the Bacon Board stands to meet a heavy loss on the hog purchases of the last two weeks.

There is a large surplus from which this loss can be paid. A month ago it was estimated that this surplus was large enough to increase prices by half a cent a pound for a whole year, but there was then no thought of a heavy, immediate drain upon it.

Yield Farmer 9 Cents

At present hogs are bringing around nine cents to farmers on the Toronto market. The price has slipped a little in the last week, but it will not slip very much as long as the board continues to carry the load of shipping bacon at an unnamed price. How long the board can do this is problematic. In the United States the price is around six cents.

Last fall there was a profit on the interim bacon shipped, which was divided between the packers and the Bacon Board. Then the contract price was set higher than the prevailing price when the war started. The situation is different now.

Politically, any reduction in the price paid, even if there is an increase in the amount taken, as is likely, will mean a storm of protest from Ontario and Western Canada. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture, through its president, H. H. Hannam, has already made its stand clear.

Other agricultural organizations are equally determined that Ottawa must put through as good or better a deal than the one which expired last night.

Shipments recently have averaged just under 8,000,000 pounds a week, which is 40 per cent in excess of the quota set a year ago. It is still hoped that this figure will be the basis of quantities in the new agreement, but there has been no word from overseas to support this hope. It is stated a larger output would compensate the producer for a lower price. Farm organizations don't agree.

STEVE BELLOISE FAILS TO GET DECISION BUT WINS SPECTATORS

Overlin Given Decision As Crowd Boos

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP). — Young Steve Belloise still doesn't own a single one of the various middleweight boxing title, but the boy from the Bronx staked a claim on one in his losing fight against wily Ken Overlin in the Garden last night.

For a 21-year-old engaging in only his 33rd bout, Steve made a great showing against the veteran who hold the 160-pound crown (New York and California variety), and the crowd of 13,000 rewarded him by booing the verdict for a good five minutes.

The youngster with the big punch knocked Overlin down with a terrific right in the sixth round and gave the champ an awful going-over in that heat. But he punched himself out, let Overlin get away and recover, and in the end the decision was the only one it could have been.

Promoter Mike Jacobs liked Steve's fight so well that he crowded into the dressing room to offer him another shot at Overlin. Steve was more than willing, but Chris Dundee, Overlin's manager, said he wanted time to think it over thoroughly.

Referee Favored a Draw

And well he might. The referee last night thought Belloise earned a draw. The two judges, however, voted in a solid bloc for Overlin, one of them awarding him 11 rounds to Steve's four.

Overlin, this time, was just a little too cute for Belloise. Whether he will be six months from now is doubtful.

Overlin made him look like a sap for rounds at a time, but the Bronx boy never became discouraged and never ceased to be dangerous. As late as the 12th round he caught Overlin a couple that staggered the veteran and had him in trouble. Overlin appeared to be a goner in the sixth. When he hopped right up without taking a count after being clipped, he ran into terrible punishment. Belloise must have measured him with 30 clean shots on the jaw as he reeled around, helpless. But he wouldn't go down again, and with 30 seconds of the round still to go Belloise suddenly ran out of steam.

That was his last chance to win the crown last night.

Order Fr. Divine Pay Back $5,949

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(AP).—The Appellate Division Friday unanimously upheld a Superior Court decision ordering Father Divine, Negro religious leader, to pay $5,949 to Verinda Brown, a former follower, who sought to recover money she said she had been induced to contribute to Divine's "heavenly treasury."

The higher court also ordered Father Divine to return to Mrs. Brown certain furniture, linens, ruge and bric-a-brac delivered to the Father Divine peace mission in 1930.

At the trial Mrs. Brown contended that Father Divine's teachings had influenced her and her husband, Thomas Brown, to give up their earthly names and assume "spiritual" names of "Rebecca Grace" and "Onward Universe" and to sacrifice "all worldly possessions and place everything in his safekeeping for an everlasting life."

She testified that Father Divine told her and other "angels" to "store your material possessions for safekeeping in my heavenly treasury, where moth nor rust do not corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal.

Two Leaf Players Go To Providence

TORONTO, Nov. 2—Toronto Leafs took the first steps toward paring their roster to N.H.L. limits yesterday by announcing that Defenceman Bucko McDonald and Centre Normie Mann had been sent to Providence of the American League on option.

McDonald's departure leaves the Leafs with four rearguards—Jack Church, Walter Stanowski, Reg Hamilton and Bingo Kampman.

Both players left immediately for Providence.

Not Worrying About Hitler

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 2. — (CP)— L. F. Draper, window-cleaner, who was deported from Canada to England, has been registered as a conscientious objector at a tribunal here.

Draper says he joined the army in 1927 and was bought out by his uncle four years later. To repay his uncle, Draper said he worked for him several years in Canada.

"I am not concerned if Hitler gets here tomorrow," Draper told the tribunal.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Hockey's big top, the National Hockey League gets under way tonight with the world champion New York Rangers clashing with the Maple Leafs in Toronto. Sunday night there will be two games, Boston Bruins opening against the revamped Canadiens in Montreal while Red Dutton's 1940 Amerks will be the guests of the Red Wings in Detroit. We perhaps should get excited over the annual prying off of the lid but somehow it leaves us rather cold. Possibly because of the conviction that while the cash customers pay mid-season admission prices, the clubs start the season only half trained and play themselves into condition at the expense of the public. It has been so every season and now that the opening date gets earlier every year it is probable that the teams will start in worse shape even than they were accustomed to do. Old Man John Q Public seems to like being kidded along however, for a sellout is expected for tonight's game in Toronto.

* * * * * *

Lester Patrick, veteran pilot of the Rangers rather let the cat out of the bag in an interview yesterday when he declared that his club was perhaps two weeks away from their best form and then added: "But then, I guess, most of the clubs will be in the same boat." That unusual frankness confirmed an old suspicion that the training period is not long enough to get the N.H.L. machines clicking properly and that the teams do not hit their real peak for weeks after the opening. Early games mean little or nothing so far as getting a line on the real strength of the contenders is concerned. Last year the Rangers who were to go on and win the Stanley Cup and who ran up a string of nineteen starts without a defeat at one stage in the campaign had a whale of a lot of difficulty in getting started. Their showing in their first half dozen games didn't give a hint of the power and polish they later displayed.

* * * * * *

Some of the most famous names in modern hockey are disappearing from the N.H.L. roster this season. Eddie Shore and Nels Stewart have gone. So too, have the well known French-Canadian stars Armond Mondou and George Mantha. And now comes word from Detroit that Cecil Dillon, long one of the smoothest workmen along the right boards is being shipped back to the American Association. Dillon starred for years with the Rangers. He was the first of the left-wingers that Patrick converted into right-wingers and among the best of them in effectiveness. For years he was up in the first flight of scorers and even after he was traded to Detroit was a menace to goalkeepers. It was thought that he would stick with the Red Wings for one more season as an extra forward but its thumbs down for Mister Dillon.

Sponsorship Is Lacking

One of the problems in the path of successful sport promotion in Peterborough, especially among the minors, is the difficulty of getting sponsors. There is a dearth of men of the proper calibre to supply leadership, and financial and other support. The result is that junior sport here is perishing from malnutrition and pernicious anaemia. The situation is frankly serious, especially in the outlook for baseball and to a lesser degree for hockey. Other centres are more fortunate. From Kingston comes the announcement that the movement to sponsor hockey among the 'teen age players in the Limestone City is broadening out. In addition the Kingston Lions' Club has undertaken to take the junior "B" squad under its wing, Wally Elmer has been engaged as coach and new blue, red and gold sweaters have been ordered.

* * * * * *

In Oshawa, too, the youngsters are not being neglected. The Motor City has developed into one of the country leading hockey centres and the secret of its success is not hard to find. The Oshawa City League is a flourishing organization that has produced one Ontario juvenile championship club and has been represented in the Ontario finals on three other occasions. This year some of the enthusiastic workers for the welfare of the league are tied up in war work or on active service but like Old Man River the loop goes right along. "Hockey has in its following in Oshawa" writes George Campbell, sports columnist, "many earnest and capable men who will gladly do their part to foster the game among the boys of the city and with the service clubs and several local business firms ready to bear the financial end of the load there should be no trouble in getting enough workers to assure the success of the City League."

* * * * * *

It is true that Oshawa has always imported hockey stars and that the ability to attract players of the right calibre has been the main factor in the great showing made by the Oshawa Generals. But at the same time it should not be forgotten that in all Oshawa's winning hockey machines there have always been homebrew players who came into faster company from the nursery provided by the City League. Oshawa, Kitchener, Kingston and other centres are pointing the way. Consistent support and encouragement of minor players is essential. It is because of the lack of that support and encouragement that sport has reached the doldrums in Peterborough.

In This Corner Is Tony Galento

The announcement that Joe Louis was stumping for Wendell Willkie as a presidential candidate had about the effect that might have been expected. The Democratic organization has now lined up Tony Galento as its fighting champion. He's for Roosevelt and doesn't care who knows it. Yesterday we had something to say about the folly of expecting anyone to take political advice from the Brown Bomber. Anything we may have said in reference to Mister Louis can be taken double in the case of Mister Galento. If anyone could get those two birds on a joint broadcast giving their views on politics, Jack Benny, Fred Allen and the other comedians would have to take to the woods. The political organizations are getting so desperate that we expect to see Superman and Dick Tracey getting into the fight over the week-end.

There will be quick action in Y.M.C.A. basketball tonight when the House League will be organized and begin the fall schedule for the Dominion Life trophy. The meeting to draw up the teams and make the arrangements for the season will be held at 7.30 o'clock and immediately after the meeting the first two games on the schedule will be played. It is important therefore that ever player who anticipates taking part in the House League this season should be on hand at 7.30 o'clock. This must be the first case on record of a league being organized and the schedule started on the same night. That is speed plus.

Dave Castilloux, Canada's hope for the lightweight boxing title continues to do all right by himself. The clever Montrealer added another championship to his list last night when he won the New England title by a clean cut victory over Paul Junior, veteran Lewiston fighter. It was a twelve-round battle fought at Portland, Maine, and Castilloux had the unanimous verdict winning from the first bell. The Montrealer is compiling quite a record and is one of the best boys in his division that Canada has ever produced.

Seven Bombers Catch All-Star Team

WINNIPEG, Nov. 2 (CP)—Two lieutenants in the Canadian Active Service Force, who did not forget strategy when they exchanged khaki for moleskins, were awarded commissions by coaches and sports editors who chose the fourth annual Canadian press all-star Western Inter-Provincial Football Union team.

Lieut. Jeff Nicklin of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who soldiers with the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, won all-star rating as flying wing on the dream team, while Lieut. Paul Rowe of Calgary Bronks was named the union's fanciest fullback. Rowe is a member of a Calgary anti-aircraft unit.

Winnipeg's blond bombshell, Fritzie Hanson, played only the last four games of the eight-game schedule, but showed enough in those battles to win recognition as the union's best left half-back. Another Bomber, Art Stevenson, who with his teammate, Halfback Andy Bieber, topped the league's scorers this fall with twenty-six points, was placed at right half-back.

Selectors gave seven of the all-star positions to the Bombers, while Calgary, and Regina Rough Riders each placed three. The thirteenth gridiron great popped up when Bud Marquardt and Ches McCance of Bombers came out even in a vote battle for the second outside spot.

Flying wing—Jeff Nicklin, Winnipeg.
Left halfback—Fritz Hanson, Winnipeg.
Right halfback — Art Stevenson, Winnipeg.
Fullback—Paul Rowe, Calgary.
Quarterback—Greg Kabat, Winnipeg.
Snap—Dean Griffing, Regina.
Inside—Maurice Williams, Regina
Inside—Bill Ceretti, Winnipeg.
Middle—Gordon Gelhaye, Calgary
Middle—Toar Springstein, Regina
Outside—Larry Haynes, Calgary.
Outside — Bud Marquardt and Ches McCance, Winnipeg.

Nicklin's churning legs and powerful arms have won him a place on every Western all-star team since they were inaugurated in 1937. During the first two years he was chosen for his deadly tackling at end, while last season he was picked at flying wing.

Smashing plunges and accurate convert kicks won the fullback spot for Rowe, an all-star halfback last season.

Choice of Hanson, who was lured out of a self-imposed retirement in mid-season, kept intact his record of all-star selection every year since 1937.

Bieber was not the only Union standout who missed all-star selection in the backfield. Jimmy Gilkes of Bronks, whose 25 points gave him runner-up position in the scoring race, had just as many supporters as Stevenson at right halfback, but the versatile Bomber edged him out by registering votes also as left halfback, fullback and quarterback.

Three other players selected on last year's Western all-star squad and picked again are Greg Kabat of Bombers, Calgary's Gordon Gelhaye, who repeated as a middle wing, and Marquardt.

Cool, calculating Greg Kabat piled up 17 points during the regular season and showed he is just as adept at quarterback as he was as all-conference flying wing in 1938 and guard last year.

Dean Griffing, Regina's burly coach, regained his 1937-38 standing as the league's finest snap. Selectors honored the driving sixty-minute man with an almost unanimous vote.

They Don't Like It

FAYETTE CITY, Pa., Nov. 2 — (AP)—Some 50 persons asked the Fayette county court to prevent transfer of next Tuesday's polling place from the borough building to quarters once occupied by a bank. "A lot of people lost money in the bank and they won't go near it again—not even to vote," said Pat F. Hynes, one of the petitioners.

CAHA To Stage WarFund Games

MIDLAND, Nov. 2 (Special). — George S. Dudley, dynamic president of the C.A.H.A., who is responsible for bringing about the recent reforms in Canadian amateur hockey, told the Midland Lions Club at a banquet Friday night that exhibition hockey games would be arranged in every town and hamlet in Canada that has a C.A.H.A. entry during the week of January 6 to raise a giant war fund, which he predicted would come to a total of $100,000. The fund would be turned over to the Red Cross for administration.

Mr. Dudley pointed out that the war has ruined the International Hockey Association, which was controlled principally by European countries, and predicted that the new International Hockey Association consisting of United States, Canada and Great Britain would control the hockey picture of the world at the conclusion of the present war.

The C.A.H.A. president also predicted that the O.H.A would have the fastest hockey this year than in the past fifteen or twenty years, as the players absorbed in England and Europe are all returning back home

Policy Change?

Montreal, Nov. 2' (CP).

McGILL UNIVERSITY Athletic Council will meet next week to discuss a possible change in present wartime intercollegiate agreements to allow McGill students to form a team to fill a vacant berth in an intermediate hockey league here, it was announced Friday.

Under present agreements such a move would be inconsistent with the univerities' attitude toward extramural sports during wartime, but Athletic Manager Hay Finlay announced that McGill officials would confer with University of Torfonto, Queen's of Kingston, Ont., and Western athletic men to exchange views on the matter.

Will Take The Ice With Americans This Sunday

Tommy Anderson, Earl Robertson and Hooley Smith are three of Red Dutton's veterans who will make sure that the Americans are in there fighting when they open their 1940-41 season at Detroit this Sunday. Manager Dutton has also added a flock of promising youngsters to his squad this season and they may prove a stumbling block to some of their veteran opponents.

PRECEDENT BROKEN AS CHALLEDON WINS THE PIMLICO SPECIAL

Maryland Horse Never Had Lead Threatened

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Challedon, W.L. Brann's great Maryland-bred champion, proved yesterday that he has a right to be called the best horse in training.

He defeated Myron Selznick's Can't Wait by two lengths in the Pimlico Special before 12,000 fans in a duel that was the dullest in the four-year history of the "dream race" simply because Challedon was so much the better horse.

Challedon led all the way in the mile and three-sixteenths test, never was under a threat from Can't Wait and came loping home in 2:03 1-5, slowest time for the Special since it was inaugurated in 1937.

The victory, gained over a slow track and in a slight drizzle of rain, while a brisk, cold wind whistled over the grounds, was Challedon's second consecutive triumph in the Special and put him in line again for the "horse of the year" title.

It also was the second victory in the Special for Jockey George Woolf of Cardston, Alta., who rode Challedon. Woolf was up on Seabiscuit in 1938 when he beat War Admiral in their famous match race.

That race broke War Admiral's heart and supposedly established a jinx against the favorite in a Pimlico Special duel. But Challedon stamped that precedent into the ground.

Earnings Now $322,860

The $10,000 winner-take-all purse increased Challedon's lifetime earnings to $322,860 and put him sixth on the list of all-time money winners. He goes now to California to shoot at Seabiscuit's record of $437,370.

Owner Brann was presented with the Maryland Jockey Club gold cup for the second year by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the club. Trainer Don Cameron received $1,500 and a silver plate. The heavily favored Challedon paid $2.40 for $2.

Challedon, who usually stays back of the early pace and comes from behind with a powerful rush, got the jump on Can't Wait and went into a two-length lead shortly after the start.

Can't Wait, ridden by Jockey Alfred Robertson of Toronto, made only one move to catch Challedon. He gained about half a length on the Brann runner in the back stretch. Challedon quickly pulled away again and wouldn't give an inch after that.

Coming down the home stretch Robertson put Can't Wait to a hard drive—a drive that was unavailing.

Equally as easily as Challedon's victory was the triumph that Mrs. Marie Evans' one-time plater, Shot Put, scored in the $5,000 added Exterminator, co-feature with the Special.

Shot Put, recent winner of the rich New York Handicap, won by four lengths over J. C. Vidal's Russia, with Tower Stable's Memory Book third in the field of nine.

Shot Put ran the gruelling two miles and seventy yards in the sparkling time of 3 minutes 37 3-5 seconds, only one-fifth of a second off the track record. The favorite, he paid $3.90 for $2 while picking up a purse of $4,570.

Challedon Wins Pimlico Special

Before 12,000 fans in a duel that was the dullest in the four-year history of the "dream race," Pimlico Special Challedon for the second year in succession captured easily over Can't Wait. Challedon led all the way and was never under any real threat.

Castilloux Wins Another Crown

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 2—(AP). —Dave Castilloux of Montreal, Canadian lightweight champion, won the New England lightweight crown last night from Paul Junior, Lewiston veteran, with a unanimous 12-round decision. Castilloux weighed 133½; Junior 139.

Castilloux' left jabbed the 33-year-old Lewistonian from ring post to ring post until the 11th round, when Junior, his face bloody from the pummelling, courageously flung desperate rights in a vain attempt to turn the tide. There were no knockdowns.

Prize Rookie Is Found For Every Team

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

If the pre-season claims of every National Hockey league manager were laid end to end, there would be a Stanley Cup in every city, a prize rookie on every front door and a league championship in every backyard.

Having been filled for several weeks with nothing but words of praise about the teams, the fans can toss it all aside and begin to see for themselves just what is what. The N.H.L. opens its 1940-41 season tonight.

The schedule makers have thrown a "natural" on their first roll, picking up the new season just where the old left off. Finalists for the Stanley Cup, New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs kick the opening gong in Toronto—where the Rangers were crowned world champions a short seven months ago.

The rest of the league will swing into action swiftly after the opening, and by next Tuesday night all seven clubs will have had their baptism of fire. Canadiens play Boston Bruins at Montreal and New York Americans visit Detroit Red Wings Sunday night. Chicago opens in its home arena against the Americans Tuesday.

League Strengthened

Hope is high and promise is abundant with every club. The league has been strengthened where strengthening was needed; its solid foundations show no signs of cracking and the combination should enable the circuit to operate through a banner year despite the war.

The known quantities, as usual, are the old perennials, the Leafs, Rangers and Boston Bruins. These are machine tested by time, blends of youth and veteran to make their challenges as strong as ever. And it is because of their known quantities that the early-season interest lies in seeing just what the reinforced tail-enders can do.

For instance, there are the Canadiens so radically different from last year's cellar club that no one can say honestly just what will happen to them. They can be no worse than the season gone by, and there is every indication they may be a whole sight better. They've scrapped the old machine, brought in new mechanics to turn wheels and given the mechanics new wheels to turn.

Johnny Quilty, Jack Adams, Bert Gardiner, Elmer Lach— these are only a few of the new faces on the Canadien roster. It is the same with Red Dutton's Americans, no longer an ancient vehicle but a streamlined model with a whole new forward line among the five amateurs who will start with the club.

Have New Goal Keeper

Detroit, too, have rebuilt, aiming a notch or two higher than fifth place, which they gained only because the Canadiens and Americans were so weak. They have brought in a young goalkeeper, Johnny Mowers, from the amateur ranks to replace the retired Tiny Thompson. They are gambling with Jud McAtee, a junior last season.

Paul Thompson's Chicago Black Hawks remain almost as they were in their surprising run to fourth place last season. They have several fellows such as Doug Bentley, Bill Carse, Johnny Chad and Phil Hergesheimer starting their second year. If they continue to improve they will make the Hawks a tough lot.

There isn't a single new player with the Rangers, or the Leafs. But they have such fine collections of experienced men that to go out on a limb and say they won't finish one-two-three, with any one of them liable to be on top, would be silly.

Niagara Falls Win Opener From Sailors

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 2.—Niagara Falls Brights ushered in the 1940-41 O.H.A. Senior "A" season with a 2-0 victory over Port Colborne Sailors here Fridty night. A crowd of 1,200 saw the favored homesters score twice in the second period to draw down the decision in a game as evenly contested as the score indicates.

Sailors provided stubborn opposition, and had an edge throughout the hectic, though goalless, first period. Seven minor penalties were meted out, and the Sailors took advantage to pepper Goalie Mel Carey of the Falls with numerous shots, but with no avail. Lee in the Port Colborne cage also featured in the opening session, and made one grand stop when Walton broke right through. Brenchley of Brights was forced to retire for the remainder of the game when he was injured atfer being crashed heavily into the boards by Swanson of the Tars.

Niagara Falls got the jump in the second session due to too much offensive enthusiasm on the part of the Sailors. Gallinger was left stranded after a rush and on a Brights' breakaway, Joey Catlin took Stirling's relay to score the first goal of the game.

The second Niagara score was scored in almost identical fashion. Swanson was left behind when Stuart and McQuade broke up a Port Colborne play and Stuart went through to score.

Walton, McAndrew, Stuart, McQuade, Boston and Catlin were prominent performers for Niagara Falls; Fitzgerald, Hepworth, McLeod, Dickson and Swanson played clever hockey for the Sailors.

Canadian Takes Over Squadron And Pilots Down Five Nazis

LONDON, Nov. 2 — (CP Cable). —Leading his squadron for the first time, a daring Canadian — whose name may not be disclosed—sent a Messerschmitt 109 plummeting into the Chanel as his squadron formed the spearhead of a British counter-attack against Nazi planes striking at a convoy in the Thames Estuary.

Since service regulations prevent the naming of the Canadian, the only description possible is the Air Ministry's statement that he recently was a flight commander with the Polish squadron, which has shot down more than 100 Nazi planes in a month.

The Canadian's victim was a fighter plane escorting Junkers 87 dive bombers. His Spitfire squadron was flying at 21,000 feet when tell-tale vapor trails gave away the position of ten yellow-nosed Messerschmitts — the pride of Goering's fighters — flying 9,000 feet below. Some Spitfires dived to attack the fighters, while others later followed to tackle the Junkers bombers.

Picking out one Messerschmitt to attack, the Canadian made for him, but the Nazi pilot wheeled round so quickly that the two fighters almost collided.

'As I went by him I saw the German pilot's face quite clearly," the Canadian said. "He looked rather grim. We were so close that neither of us could fire, but I whipped round again and got on his tail. The Nazi went screaming down toward a shelter cloud.

"I dived after him, firing several short bursts. He was hit before entering the cloudbank. I followed.

"When I came out into clear sky I saw the Messerschmitt crash into the sea."

A sergeant-pilot downed a second Messerschmitt, while a third, attacked by three Spitfires, crashed on land. Two pilot officers destroyed a Junkers 87 and a Junkers 88 in the same attack.

2 Seamen Drift For 70 Days

NASSAU, The Bahamas, Nov. 2 (CP Cable)—Two British seamen from the freighter Anglo-Saxon, reported sunk by a Nazi raider 500 miles southwest of the Azores, came to the end yesterday of a 70-day 2,500-mile Odyssey in an open 16-foot boat, during which their five companions perished.

They were Robert George Tapscott of Cardiff, 19, and Wilbert Roy Widdicombe, 24, of Newport, who drifted Wednesday night into Governor's Harbor at near-by Eleuthera Island, and were flown here by plane yesterday.

Their principal article of diet had been seaweed. Two of their companions, wounded when the raider machine-gunned the boat, died. Two others, crazed by heat and thirst, jumped overboard. The fifth cut his throat with a razor.

When their water supply was exhausted they managed to catch some rain water, but during the last eight days they had nothing to drink. Supplementing their diet of seaweed had been one flying fish and one gar fish, which they were able to catch.

Both were burnt black by the sun.

The Anglo - Saxon, 5,596 - ton freighter, built in 1929 and belonging to the Nitrade Steamship Company, Ltd., with home port at London, was sighted by the raider Aug. 21, the men said. They took to the boat and the vessel was sunk.

(History records many cases of seamen drifting great distances in open boats, but the best-known voyage in an open boat is probably that of Capt. William Bligh of the Bounty, who was set adrift by his men fater their historic mutiny in the eighteenth century. He sailed 4,000 miles from the South Sea Islands to Timor in the East Indies in what was regarded as a remarkable feat of navigation.)

Wednesday a farmer saw the men crawling along the beach on Eleuthera Island, attempting to reach some trees. They were given nourishment and first aid before being transferred here. Widdicombe, who lost 80 pounds during his open-boat voyage, was able to walk yesterday when he arrived, but Tapscott had to be supported.

A raider reported as the Narvik has been operating in southern waters. She has been described as a 10,000-ton ship capable of 19 knots, faster than most freighters in the West Indies. She carries 300 men, according to reports of British sailors, and flies the Swedish flag. She has been reported to have disappearing six-inch guns under canvas which is hauled up for action.

On July 26 sailors on the Norwegian vessel Leif, arriving in New York, reported they had obtained this description of the raider from British sailors. They reported that the freighter Davisian was attacked by her 240 miles northeast of the Virgin Islands, July 10. The crew was said to have been taken prisoner. On July 13 she sighted another freighter, the King John, attacked her and put sixty-six of her crew in three leaky lifeboats.

YOUR CARRIER BOY OR GIRL
Is the Finest Type of Canadian Youth

May we all pause a moment to think of the boy or girl who delivers each issue of the "Examiner" to your home or place of business. The Peterborough "Examiner" has set aside TO-DAY as the day to honour and entertain its city carrier salesmen. We know that you as their friend and one of their customers would also like to join us in honouring them.

Out of over 50,000 Canadian boys and girls carrying newspaper routes, the 152 "above average" boys and girls in Central Ontario are best known to you.

Below are personal statements from some of our carrier salesmen which will tell you just what a newspaper route means to them.

VALUE OF FRIENDSHIP

My paper route has given me a valuable insight into judging character of people which will be of great help to me in the future no matter what business I go into after leaving school. I have also learned to associate with people and made a larger number of friends among my customers. I have found how necessary it is to treat all people with courtesy and consideration. I receive the same in return from the many friends on my route.

JIM SHARPE

RESPONSIBILITY

For the past three years I have carried a route for the "Examiner" and I have not only made a profit in money but I have learned to assume responsibility in many ways. I have been able to take the burden of responsibility of providing many things for myself which previously my parents had to look after. I wish to thank you for the privilege of carrying one of your routes for this length of time and my customers for the kindness they have always shown me.

DON ROODE

HELP IN SCHOOL WORK

My experience in carrying a paper route has been of great value to me in many ways, not the least of which is the practice which comes with addressing and talking to people about our paper and its worth to the community. I have found it of considerable help in ridding me of the handicap of self-consciousness. In this way it has been very helpful in school work which involves making speeches of any kind. This is only one of a dozen ways in which I have appreciated the business training gained in carrying a newspaper route.

STROYAN LEITH

BUSINESS TRAINING

I believe that I can safely say my experience in carrying my paper route has meant as much to me as a good business course. It has taught me that one must be quick and accurate in handling money and how different people handle, save and use their money. The experience has been one which I am glad not to have missed. I believe that its lessons will be of help to me right through my college life and afterwards in the profession I hope to follow.

TOM LA PLANTE

IMPROVED HEALTH

I feel that carrying the "Examiner" paper route has benefitted me in several ways, especially in my health, which has been particularly good since I began taking it. I realize the benefits of walking and riding a bicycle in the open air and my parents are very pleased with the way in which I have grown in height and weight since I took over my route about two years ago.

JIM LAING

THRIFT AND SAVINGS

In my three years of carrying the "Examiner" I have learned something useful to everyone, particularly a young person, the ability to save. With the money I have been able to make through my route I have bought many personal needs and am still adding to my savings account. When a boy takes over a route of the "Examiner" he is asked to pay a bond of a certain amount on which he is paid generous interest. This is returned to him, of course, when he gives up the route. From this beginning I came to realize how small amounts regularly saved mount up to a respectable sum in a very short time.

BOB SHADGETT

THE GIRL'S POINT OF VIEW

There are many reasons why I am grateful for the opportunity of carrying an "Examiner" paper route. I am sure that I have derived much benefit from the exercise in the open air, winter and summer; the contact with and friendship of my many customers; the degree of independence I have had through my earnings and the all-round benefits of a general business training the newspaper route gives. I do believe that girls generally are very reliable and have a keen sense of responsibility in such a job.

RUBY HARDING

Prominent Men Pay Tribute to Carrier Salesmen

The Examiner carrier boys and girls (I am informed there are about a half dozen newspaper girls) are Peterborough's youngest business people, and I am pleased to have an opportunity to convey to them my best wishes for their continued success as young merchants.

As carrier boys and girls these young people will learn many of the basic principles under which all businesses, large and small, operate. They will learn how important it is to be honorable in all their dealings with the public. Then, too, these boys and girls will learn why merchants have the maxim "Courtesy and Service" as a principle in their business.

These young merchants are also having lessons daily in self-reliance, and probably too they must learn something of simple bookkeeping. Many a business has foundered because its books were kept haphazardly.

I want to remind the carrier boys in particular, that many of the greatest men in our country started their business careers as newsboys.

To these young people who daily bring to our homes a much-appreciated service, I convey the thanks of the citizens of Peterborough

JAMES HAMILTON, Mayor.

It is a pleasure to be able to pay tribute to the carrier salesmen of our home town paper. I have always appreciated the service rendered by these boys and girls, and realize that it needs ambition and perseverance to carry newspapers during every season of the year regardless of weather conditions, and the inevitable trials and troubles which go with any business enterprise, however small. The Peterborough Examiner does well to set aside this day to honour them and give them all due credit fo the splendid service they are rendering this community.

LEWIS H. INGRAM,
Quaker Oats Co., Ltd

Newsboys or carrier salesmen have a wonderful opportunity. It is a well-known fact that many of our statesmen and great industrialists of to-day started as newsboys, where they developed initiative, personality and ambition, which are a few of the essentials needed in every walk of life. We have found this type of boy, having started his life's work as a newsboy, makes an invaluable employee. By him applying his first training to industry he will go far as a leader.

H. A. CRANFIELD,
Supervisor,
Industrial Service Dept.
Can. Gen. Electric Co. Ltd.

I am glad to add my few words of appreciation for the splendid type of boys and girls serving the people of Peterborough in the capacity of Carrier Salesmen for the "Examiner."

Many of them previously employed as such have come under my supervision. They invariably have been a fine type of youth and have shown the value of the business experience gained in carrying a newspaper route.

W. C. HUGHES,
President, Business Men's Association
General Manager, Grafton & Co., Ltd.

It seems only a few years since I was delivering the evening paper in my own home town. It had to be done, rain or shine, freezing or sweltering. The "Examiner" newsboy or girl does a better job than I did, for my paper is on the front mat when I look for it. Some day, among our most respectable citizens, I expect to find the boys who to-day are part of that greatest of all public services—the dissemination of news.

Every member of the "Examiner's" staff, and in particular those boys who actually put the work of others in the hands of the public, may well feel proud of their achievement.

J. H. VERNOR,
Vice-President and General Manager,
Western Clock Co., Ltd.

PARENTS APPROVE OF LESSONS LEARNED BY THEIR SONS AND DAUGHTERS

From the large numbers of applications and the remarks of the parents of our carriers we are assured of their co-operation and support in our efforts to make them into the self-reliant business men and women of tomorrow. Typical Canadian youths have accepted at a very early age the task of the perpetuation of the Canadian way of life. They deserve our honor and respect. We are glad in this small way to pay our tribute to all our carrier boys and girls, both in the city and across the broad territory which the "Examiner" serves. We are proud to have a part in training this group of boys, and may we, their newspaper, and you, their friend and customer, always deserve their trust and co-operation.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

A transient, Charles Rutherford, who pleaded guilty in police court this morning to a charge of vagrancy and who said that he was ill was sentenced by Magistrate Langley to twenty days in jail. The magistrate told the man the jail physician would look after him.

CYCLIST INJURED

Keith Mahood, 552 Stewart street, sustained cuts on the right leg and bruises on the right arm early this morning when the bicycle on which he was riding met in collision with an automobile driven by Leonard Millard, 156 Cameron street. On Albert street Millard was turning into a C.G.E. driveway when the accident occurred. Both men are C.G.E. employees.

STOLEN CAR FOUND

Constable Ray Morden of Lindsay in a ditch on No. 7 Highway between Fowler's Corners and Omemee early this morning in a damaged condition.

TAPS

Most people are familiar with the term "taps", and those in military circles welcome it as an indication that the days work is over, and that sleep is the order. It is believed that this bugle call is little known, however, concerned the words involved. The lyrics to this haunting call are: "Day is done; sun is gone; From the lake, from the hill, from the sky; All is well, safely rest, God is nigh."

THESE MILITARY TERMS

As a matter for the record, some of the terms, and especially the initials used in connection with the army are a little confusion to the civilian. Some of the most commonly misinterpreted are the following: R.S.M. which means Regimental Sergeant Major; R.Q.M.S.—Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant; C.S.M.—Company Sergeant Major and C.Q.M.S. — Company Quartermaster Sergeant.

DON'T BURN THE CANS

An article dealing with the scrap metals in Friday night's Examiner described that tin cans were burned to get rid of the tin, and leave the steel. Some people may have thought they were supposed to burn the tin cans before putting them out for garbage. This is not so, the cans can be burned handily at the city incinerator.

WITH THE ROYAL NAVY.

Among other members of yacht clubs to join the Royal Navy is Lieut. G. D. Cook, formerly of Lakefield. Mr. Cook is well known throughout this district as a sailor and a maker of sailboats. There have been 50 experienced yachtsmen from all over the Dominion taken in the Royal Navy. All are now in United Kingdom, and are undergoing training.

GETS A MONTH

William Saunders, Sault Ste Marie Indian, who has been a visitor in court circles here on several occasions, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to a second offence drunk charge and was fined $50 or a month in jail. He took the jail sentence.

MORE DAMAGE REPORTED

Citizens yesterday reported additional damage as a result of Hallowe'en activities. Mrs. Fine, Charlotte street, had two cement flower pots pulled down on her verandah, one of them being broken. Twenty feet of fence belonging to B. Weese, London and Harvey streets, was knocked down and broken and a verandah at 98-100 London street pulled off by the same gang.

WILL GLADLY CALL.

Bert Withers reports that the volume of scrap metal has been heavy during the week, and he has been kept quite busy. He would be unable to work at it all next week, but claims the truck will call at any house that has been missed if a phone call is made to 7572. This afternoon he is picking up a ton of steel from a farmhouse on the Lindsay highway.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

For the past three weeks members of the Peterborough Women's Service Corps have been trying to train in the basement of the Normal School. There are 200 members turning out regularly and when they all get into the basement, the place is almost jampacked. It is an impossible task to go through the drill in such confined quarters and an attempt is being made to find a hall more suitable for training purposes.

Named Members Spitfire Fund

Three members of the Peterborough police department have been made members of the Dominion Police Spitfire Fund, Inspector Jim Wilkinson of Windsor, chairman of the fund announced this morning. They are Chief Constable Sam Newhall. Inspector James F. Reid and Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher. Inspector Reid and Sergt. Meagher will look after the duties of treasurer and secretary of the fund throughout the Dominion, the chairman who is visiting Peterborough today stated.

"We hope to get support not only from police all over the Dominion but from many police forces in the United States" Mr. Wilkinson stated. "If the fund grows as we expect we may be able to buy a bomber or possibly a couple of Spitfires."

Among members of the committee are Chief Tom Brown, Hamilton; Chief Harold Nash, Guelph; George Shea, head of the C.N.R. police, Montreal; Chief George Smith, Winnipeg and Chief Justin Conrad, Halifax.

Monsignor Kelly Beloved Priest Dies In Cobourg

COBOURG, Nov. 2.—Right Reverend Monsignor Alexander Francis Kelly, D.P., pastor of St. Michael's parish and church, died here this morning. He was born on August 2, 1866, made his ecclesiastical studies at Ottawa College, St. Therese, Que., and the Grand Seminary, Montreal, and was ordained to the priesthood on December 17, 1892.

Monsignor Kelly was parish priest at Trout Creek and its missions from 1894 to 1926, a long pastorate in the northern section of the diocese of Peterborough. In July 1926 he was appointed pastor at Cobourg, and retained that office until his death. His missionary activities and outstanding merits were recognized by the Holy See when in 1925 he was named Domestic Prelate. On the death of Very Rev. Dean Scanlan in 1933, Monsignor Kelly was named Dean of Durham and Northumberland.

The funeral will take place at Cobourg Tuesday, November 5 with solemn Pontifical Mass at 10 a.m. (D.S.T.)

Remembrance Day Service Planned

The Canadian Legion Remembrance Day services will begin on Sunday night, November 10. The members of the Legion will fall in at the Legion Hall at 6.15 p.m., and will move off at 6.30 p.m. to Trinity United Church.

On Monday morning the members will fall in at the Legion Hall at 10 o'clock and will move off at 10.15 for the services at the Cenotaph. Capt. Thomas Magladery, Provincial President, Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion, will speak at the morning services with Rev. Capt. G. S. Easton and Rev. Dr. P. J. Kelly.

It is expected that Capt. Magladery will be in Peterborough to address the meeting at Trinity United Church, on Sunday night, but plans are not yet completed, and it is not a certainty.

Captain Magladery was among the speakers at the district convention of the Legion, on October 21st, and at that time he gave his promise that he would be in Peterborough for the Remembrance Day services.

Crashes Into Car, Fails To Stop

A hit-and-run driver crashed his car into the rear of another automobile on Charlotte street last night, drove the vehicle that had been hit against a tree and then sped off without stopping.

The victim was H. R. Keatley, 15 Bartlett street, Kingston, who was driving east along Charlotte street. Near Frederick avenue, the hit-and-run machine hit the rear of his car at a high rate of speed, with the result that Keating's machine was spun around and slammed into a tree, the rear end being almost completely wrecked.

Keatley was unable to say much about the other machine except that it was travelling very fast. Eye witnesses failed to get the number of the car.

Presbytery Visits All Congregations

The Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church of Canada is visiting the churches within its bounds. The scheme is being carried out in alphabetical order. A commission consisting of Rev. Dr. George Easton, Mr. K. F. Downie and the Rev. E. W. Rowland will visit St. Andrew's congregation on Monday night, November 4. The session and the Board of Managers will give a warm welcome to the visitors, and key members of the different organizations of the church will be present to answer questions relating to the work.

The scheme is modelled upon the system practised by the Presbyterian Church of Britain. In most cases a member of the visiting commission presents a report of their findings to the congregation concerned at one of the Sunday services immediately following the visit.

HE HELPED ONE NATION

Bert Withers and his helper stood bewildered in the hall of a west-end home this week, after the lady of the house had given them a large quantity of scrap metal, then halted them with the statement that they might as well take George too. While Bert and his man waited they heard the lady say "Well, George, you have been here a long time, but I think you can do more good in the war." The two men were ready to bolt figuring the lady was going to junk her husband, but in a few minutes their fears were allayed. George turned out to be a four foot tall iron statue of George Washington, the saviour of his country. Mr. Withers figures the statue would bring more money as a curio than as scrap, and so far it has not been broken up.—Mcg.

Mrs. James Reid Wins 1st Prize

Mrs. James F. Reid, wife of Police Inspector Reid, was the winner of the major prize in the police Spitfire draw held at the Capitol Theatre Friday night. She was the holder of the ticket bearing the lucky number pulled out of the churn by Ald. Cotton and as a result wins the electric refrigerator which was the first prize on the list.

The draw was conducted by Ald. Robert Cotton and Ald. Malcolm McIntyre, the former briefly referring to the Spitfire fund being carried on by police throughout the country and declared that the Peterborough department which had secured nearly $2,000 through the draw was the first to complete its quota.

When the first prize ticket was drawn it was handed to Inspector Reid, who is treasurer of the fund, to read out to the big audience. "My wife", exclaimed the officer in surprise, "Mrs. Reid, 513 Murray street."

The other prizes were won as follows:

Twin Johnson outboard motor — Miss Cora Davis, 233 Lake street.

Brinton rug—Mrs. A. Medland, 176 Charlotte street.

Kroehler rocker—W. Wright, 163 Morrow street.

Ton of coal—R. Woodward, 1001 Water street.

"Mayor Of Buckhorn" Leaves For South

One of Canada's most ardent supporters, an American citizen, has left. He is W. A. "Bill" Atkinson, unofficial mayor of Buckhorn, and he has gone to his home in Pittsburgh for the winter.

Bill is one of the best known sportsmen in this district, and one of the most loyal, the swallows that have made Capastrano famous have nothing on him, for as sure as the spring will be here after the winter, so will Bill.

Mr. Atkinson has spent his summers in Buckhorn for many years, and it is always with regret that the residents, and his many friends in Peterborough say goodbye. One of the best fishermen ever to throw a plug, and strangely, one of the least boastful, he fishes for the recreation rather than the glory.

Last year, Mr. Atkinson was in Canada almost all winter, and it is hoped that he will return before the snow has gone. It is suspected that the third term for Roosevelt has had an affect upon his present whereabouts, and he will be "ribbed" upon his return, no matter which way the election in the United States goes.

OBITUARIES

KEVIN JOSEPH SHAUGHNESSY

The funeral of Kevin Joseph Shaughnessy took place from the family residence, 12 St. James' street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, on Tuesday.

Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. Dr. Grant, who also addressed the large gathering of friends who were assembled to pay their last respects to the young man who was one of the most popular in the parish.

Present in the sanctuary was the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. J. Houlihan. The number of floral and spiritual tokens, bore excellent and silent testimony of the esteem in which the departed had been held during his short life.

Interment took place in St. Peter's Cemetery, and the graveside services were conducted by Rev. J. Houlihan. Pallbearers were: Joseph Ryan, Michael Marsden, Patrick Shaughnessy, Vernon Keating, William Brioux and Edward Collins.

Among friends and relatives, attending the services, from out of town, were Mr. and Mrs. William Brennan, of London, Miss Mary Corkery, of Trout Creek, Rev. Sister St. Gerald, of Barry's Bay, and Rev. Sister Mary Victor, of Port Arthur.

Seek Lowering Of Assessment Ovaltine Plant

A. Wander Company Limited applied to the Court of Revision on Friday night for a reduction of the assessment of their plant at Park and Lansdowne Streets. The Court's decision was reserved.

T. J. Carley, K.C., presented the company's case, and called in support of the appeal J. Morley Oxley, structural engineer and architect, of Toronto, who designed the plant specially for the manufacture of Ovaltine. Its original cost was $265,000, and of that sum $36,600 was spent on part of the layout that could be used only in the operations of A. Wander Company. Since then Mr. Oxley said, building costs have declined 8½ per cent., and present replacement outlay was estimated at $206,400. Allowing $23,000 for obsolence and 2½ per cent. for depreciation, Mr. Oxley placed the present value of the building at $130,950. He pointed out that the Ovaltine building should be considered part of the whole machine of production because it had been built solely for that purpose, and he asserted that there was no other industry in Canada that could use it for manufacture. Because of restrictions on the possibilities of its sale, Mr. Oxley estimated the value from that viewpoint at $98,200, and because only one-third of its capacity was in use he suggested a further reduction in its value for assessment at $79,620. Mr. Oxley proposed to the Court that the city's assessment of the plant should be placed between those two sums, $98,200 and $79,200.

The Court confirmed the land assessment of the J. T. Braund property including the Jackson Park Creek over which his store and office building is constructed, but adjourned consideration of the assessment of the building.

Greeks Unafraid Of 5th Column

The Greek Army will fight to the last man and if the British can get support to them in time, a new page of history involving an Italian defeat will be written in the Balkans. Thus did Louis Yeotes, local restauranteur sum up the situation in Greece, his native land where the Greek Army is fighting valiantly to stem the tide of advancing Italians.

Mr. Yeotes' brother, George Yeotes, who is well known here is fighting with the Greek Army, and Mrs. Yeotes has two brothers wearing the Greek Army uniforms. They are John Econs, former restaurant manager of this city and Angelo Econs, a lieutenant. Mrs. Yeotes' sister is an army nurse and her father was a colonel in the Greek Army.

Returned For Training

General Metaxas, dynamic leader of the combined Greek forces had the rank of captain in the Greek Army when Louis Yeotes returned to Greece some years ago to take 32 months compulsory military training.

"I returned twice to Greece to take 32 months of training in the army, even though I was a British subject and it was not necessary for me to go back," Louis Yeotes stated.

"The Greeks are a pure race, and we have little fear of a Fifth Column, the people love their country as few other peoples do, and it will be a fight to the last ditch, much the same as the battle gallant little Finland made."

"I am glad that the Greek Army has decided to fight and bank on British support rather than folding up without a battle like some other countries, who were supposed to be such good allies," he added.

First House Was Built In 1863 On Albert Street

The Canadian General Electric Company's purchase of the remaining houses on the north side of Albert street and of their recent demolition casts up a reminder of the old street and its residents as recorded in local directories.

In 1901 the houses extending from Park street to Alfred, the north ends of their lots abutting on the C.G.E. acres which then stopped at Rink street were as follows: No. 12, Thomas Theobald who built the first house on the street about the year 1863; No. 16, Walter Stocker, who had purchased the property previously occupied by Mrs. B. Fady; a double house, 18 and 20, was vacant at the time the directory was compiled; 24, George Rickey; 28, F. E. Lawless; 32, Thomas H. Brooks; 34, W. E. Payton; 36, James Garside; 38, Walter Evans; 42, Robert J. Bell; 46, Abraham Wilkinson; 54, John Frost; 58, Henry C. Robinson; 66 George T. Dryland; 78, vacant; 88, J. G. O'Brien; 98, George Powell; 106 James Gorman; 114, Mrs. Jane Huffman.

About the year 1905-06 the C.G.E. bought a row of houses and lots at the east end of the street, and kept gradually extending their frontage until in 1925 about one-third of the lots remained in private hands. In the meantime four houses had been built at the west end of the street, and from 1925 until the final purchase the lots are indicated in the directory of that year as follows: 540, James Sutherland; 550, C. Killingbeck; 554 Robert Stevens; 560, Albert Warman; 564 Charles Hayward; 566 William Willard; 570, W. J. Skuce.

Permits Issued For 13 Homes

Building permits in October were only a few dollars higher than the corresponding amount last year.

Fifty-seven permits issued last months by City Engineer Parsons were as follows: 13 dwelling $44,900; 15 garages, $1,635; 29 miscellaneous, $4,319. Total $50,854.

Fifty-two permits in October, 1939, amounted to $49,155, as follows: 15 dwellings, $42,075; 12 garages, $1,363; 25 miscellaneous buildings, $5,717.

Marked Interest In Training Being Shown By Members Of Women's Training School

The Women's Auxiliary Training School, held weekly at the Normal School has been progressing rapidly of late, according to the instructor, R.Q.M.S. Harold Chate. Quartermaster Sergeant Chate has developed a novel scheme for the training of the recruits. The practice suggested to the ladies is that they watch themselves in a mirror at home at nights as they try the various movements.

Appealing to the vanity of his charges, the instructor has advised them to brush up on their squad drill, and has more or less awed them with the suggestion that they will be drilling outside, and in the public's view as soon as the snow has come and gone. One woman has been so impressed that she has had her husband and daughter going through the drill at night with her.

On the whole the class has shown marked interest in the training, and by the time they can put on a public show, the report is that they will have nothing to be ashamed of.

Percy Farmer Convicted Cruelty Charge

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 2.—(ENS)—Found guilty of cruelly ill-treating certain cattle on his farm in Percy Township John Beamish, 52, paid a total of $51.51 when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., of Peterborough, here on Friday. When confronted with the evidence of the crown which showed the ribs in five of his horses could be counted while all had shoulder sores, he declared the animals were in his opinion "in a good thrifty condition."

The evidence lasted throughout the entire afternoon with Mr. Harry Deyman of Cobourg conducting the case for the Crown and calling as his chief witness C. Johnston, V.S., S.P.C.A. of Peterborough who said the animals were all in poor condition and that Beamish's stables were not clean. Provincial Constable D. M. Carruthers who laid the charge on instructions from the Humane Society produced evidence to show Beamish had been working his horses which had running sores on their shoulders. Case for the defense was conducted by J. F. R. Douglas. In giving his decision the magistrate commended the provincial police and veterinary surgeon for the fair way in which they had presented their evidence. To Beamish he said: "You have had a fair trial and there has been no vindictiveness on the part of these officers but you have not any realization that animals may suffer and haven't a decent conception of the proper treatment of animals."

Women's Service Corps Lacks Room For Drill

Girls of the Peterborough Women's Service Corps are making progress in their weekly military drill and instruction at the Normal School in spite of the enormous handicap of lack of proper room, making it necessary for members of one company to flatten themselves against the wall while a fellow regiment goes into formation. There are almost two hundred girls in the Corps, and in order to accommodate this number, four Companies have been formed, two drilling in the basement proper of the School, and the remaining Companies in the hall leading to the basement. Even this arrangement does little to ease the situation, however, since quarters are scarcely large enough for girls of a single Company to swing into action.

To lecture and attempt to instruct such classes when leaders are literally almost tramping on the toes of members is not the easiest thing in the world, and does not tend to further the enthusiasm of either teacher or students.

Just what is to be done about the situation is a problem, but it does seem as if the city fathers or a number of public spirited citizens might put their heads together and figure some way of helping the girls out—particularly as they are organizing, not with the idea of finding glamor and adventure, but with a view to being ready when called upon. They are well organized and are not dashing about to fill men's jobs, but are preparing themselves in case the need should arise. Women may need to play a very important part in this war before it is over, and Corps organizers have realized that co-ordination of training and policy is necessary.

The Corps is grateful to the Board of the Normal School, who have given every co-operation possible, but Government engineers having pronounced the basement the only part of the building fit for drilling, the lack of space problem still remains. Surely the city will realize the value of the training this fine body of young women have undertaken, and do something to better the situation.

Ruth Rouse, "Y" President, Sends Message

The annual Week of Prayer and World Fellowship to be participated in by many churches in many lands will be observed this year beginning November 10, in connection with which a significant message has been sent out by Miss Ruth Rouse, World's President of the Y.W.C.A., who spoke at the Peterborough "Y" this week. She writes: "Our fellowship in 1940 is, in most lands, above all other things a fellowship of suffering—suffering individual and national, physical, mental and spiritual suffering of every kind, with just one universal characteristic—it is inescapable and we must all go through with it.

"The worst of the suffering to most of us is that it doesn't make sense. 'I could stand it, perhaps, if it weren't all so utterly futile, senseless, meaningless.' Our Master and His disciples anticipated this cry of ours. It is significant how much of His teaching and the writing of His followers in the New Testament are concerned with the meaning of suffering, as indeed were the prophets of the Old Testament. They, who shrank as we do from pain, loss and shame, were facing the very same questions that pierce our hearts and agonize our minds. Nevertheless they show us God taking the most hideous fact of human history and putting His own meaning into it. That is why the central symbol of our religion is the Cross.

"During the Week of Prayer and World Fellowship, as we study each other's conditions in land after land, the burden of suffering will mount higher and higher; but as never before we shall be drawn near to each other. And so we shall catch a glimpse of one reason why the early Christians so often coupled suffering with joy and glory. Moreover, while we study our experience of suffering in the light of our Lord's own experience and teaching, we shall be drawn nearer to Him."

PARASITIC FAMILIES ARE CURSE ON MOST CHILDREN

When a Boy or Girl Marries, Neither One Should Be Expected to Continue Supporting All the In-Laws.

Dear Miss Dix—About once every five years I take a personal inventory to check up on development and progress, if any. Have just been doing this and realize with a shock that I am 33 years old and that if I ever wish to marry and have the normal life of a woman I must be up and doing. So far I have never been in love. Never thought about marrying. Have let two good chances pass me by because I have to support my mother, and lately an invalid sister who is divorced and has two children have been added to my burden. Now the next five years are very important if I am to marry, and I find that I do want to marry. I know that. I know that I am good wife material. Am affectionate, attractive, energetic, well read and domestic. Can you suggest any way out for me, bearing in mind that there is no other revenue other than my salary coming into the house? I will appreciate any advice you can give me on how, when and where to snare the illusive male.

DOT.

ANSWER—No other woman in the world has such a good opportunity to marry as the business woman, because she is thrown every day and all day in contact with men. Propinquity has a chance to get in its deadly work and it does so often that there is always a big turnover in the female employes in every establishment where the two sexes labor side by side.

So you have the ideal environment. You are casting your bait, so to speak, in a river that is full of suckers, but it is up to you to have enough skill and adroitness to hook your fish and land him. Nobody can teach you the trick.

You have to evolve your own craftsmanship, and apparently you have so far not taken the trouble to do it. You even scared off the two who came and nibbled at your line. So if you want to make your catch you will have to get busy. Thirty-three is getting along toward the deadline for fisherwomen.

The Family Handicap

I hate to be discouraging to any woman wanting a good husband, but being a practical business woman yourself, you are bound to realize that your family is an almost insuperable handicap to you. Not many men in these days make enough money or are generous enough to marry a whole ready-made family and take on their shoulders the support of five people instead of one, as your husband would have to do.

Maybe there is some rich old man who would realize that a young, charming, interesting and domestic wife, such as you would be, is worth the price, but even if such a one should appear on the scene, would he be the Prince Charming you had always hoped to marry?

I think that nothing is more tragic than the fate of girls like you who would like to marry and who were intended by nature to marry and make some man happy, but who cannot do so because they are the family goats.

And I think that nothing is more cruel than the way in which families ruthlessly offer up these daughters, without a thought that they are making girls give up their lives for them.

All Should Work

Mothers who are perfectly capable of earning their own support settle down at 45 or 50 on Janey for the balance of their lives. Sisters and brothers demand than Janey work her fingers to the bones and do without everything she wants to send them off to college and give them good clothes, and then they marry without ever repaying Janey a cent and go off about their own affairs and leave her to take care of Mother.

Why shouldn't Mother work if she is able to? Why shouldn't the sisters and brothers work their way through college if they are bound to go? Why shouldn't the sisters who lose their tastes for their husbands put up with them, as Janey does with her unpleasant bosses, instead of coming home with a houseful of children for Janey to support?

I am fed up hearing about parasitic families and I am hoping and praying that I will live to see the day when the nanny goats will get up on their hind legs and stage a rebellion and refuse to furnish the sacrificial meat any longer. It would cure a lot of idle loafing. For why work when Janey provides a comfortable home and three square meals a day?

Parents Should Not Interfere

Dear Miss Dix—A young man 26 years old and a young woman 23 years old are very much in love with each other. Her folks complain about his not making much money. His folks object to her because she is not beautiful. These two young people are in the same class of life and are nice, well-behaved persons. They told me about their love affair and that they had no place to me and I said that they could come my house any time when I w there, and they think that I a a prince of a fellow. I told the not to let their people break o their affair and not to argue wit them about it. Why do parents t to interfere with decent young fol in their love affairs?

OLD DOCTOR.

ANSWER—Good for you, Do You must be a physician of souls a well as of bodies, and there no telling how much good you hav done this young couple, who mus need a skillful and tender hand t bind up the wounds their p have dealt them.

Perhaps your backing them up wi make the parents take a kinder an more reasonable view of this un happy love affair and realize tha it is the boy and girl who are go ing to get married, who have a righ to pick out their mates, and tha the important thing is for then to be pleased, not their fathers an mothers.

Nobody can explain why other wise sensible people arrogate t themselves the right to choose thei children's mates. For, after all, hus bands and wives are merely a matte of taste, and taste is the most in dividual thing in the world. Th very qualities that might be mos appealing to a youth and maide could easily be the most repulsiv to their parents.

And that is why, if the youngster select decent girls and boys for hus bands and wives, Father and M er should keep their hands o

This Husband Needs A Gag

Dear Miss Dix—Every time w entertain company or go out in crowd my husband spends the whol time telling of his past experience with other women. It isn't that am jealous, but it is just so em barrassing. I have talked to him about it, but nothing that I say stops him. What should I do?

D.A.

Answer—If you could only make your husband realize what an ass he is making of himself and how he is boring everybody he would never do it again. Can't you get some man you know to call him down good and plenty and tell him that no doubt he may have been a devil among the ladies, but that the one thing a gentleman never is to kiss and tell?

Rawdon Society Hears Fine Red Cross Talk

BONARLAW, Nov. 2 — (ENS).—At a meeting of the Rawdon Red Cross Society held at Harold Town Hall on Wednesday evening of this week, A. G. Dixon, field secretary of the Canadian Red Cross Society of Toronto, guest speaker, urged his listeners to make every dollar go as far a possible in this great work.

To a fairly large and representative audience he outlined in detail various phases of the work of the Canadian Red Cross explaining exactly how the comforts for soldiers were delivered to the commanding officers of the Army, and by them through the various channels until they were received by the men who most needed them. No soldier can get anything from the Red Cross except in this way, and it is impossible for any soldier to buy anything. He branded as fifth column activities the lie that has been circulated to the effect that some soldiers have bought Red Cross sox.

Answering a question from one of the audience Mr. Dixon stated: "We are absolutely certain that comforts sent to prisoners of war in Germany are actually received by those for whom they are intended. This is one agreement the Germans have not torn up as a scrap of paper. A neutral committee inspects concentration camps and reports on food, clothing, comforts and hospitalization treatment.

Mr. Dixon believed the war will last through 1943 or longer and the Red Cros work is just beginning. He also spoke of their work during the post-war period, the looking after an expected 250,000 evacuees, the sending of anti-tetanus units overseas by bomber, and many other interesting details.

At the request of Mrs. G. E. Thompson, president of Rawdon Red Cross, Bert Bedford, Reeve of Rawdon, acted as chairman. Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne opened the meeting with prayer and after the National Anthem Mr. Bedford outlined the purpose of the meeting. Although called for the purpose of receiving reports and election of officers upon learning from Mr. Dixon that the fiscal year of the Red Cross Society ends December 31, a resolution was adopted that the present officers carry on the work until that date and that a meeting be caled early in January for receiving reports and elections, and any other business that might arise. The present officers, Mrs. George E. Thompson, president, Mrs. Carl Clancy, vice-president, Mrs. W. J. Barlow, secretary, and Mrs. J. B. Thompson, treasurer, kindly consented to continue until such meeting is held.

J. F. Baker contributed a solo, accompanied by Mrs. W. G. Swayne at the piano, the song being "There'll Always Be An England," and the audience joined heartily in the chorus.

Nazi Fliers Shot Down – Rescued By British

This photograph, made aboard a British destroyer on Channel patrol, shows British sailors guarding a group of Nazi fliers. Canada Meeting U.K. Call For More Cheese

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 — (CP). — The United Kingdom's request for more Canadian cheese is being met and by Nov. 30 Canada will have exported more than 92,000,000 pounds to Britain since the cheese agreement between the two countries went into effect last May 23, Agriculture Department officials said to-day.

The agreement called for 8,400,000 pounds up to Nov. 30 at 14 cents a pound at Montreal. Later a request came to increase the weekly shipments and in response exports will be stepped up about 14,000,000 pounds during the lifetime of the agreement.

Exports for all of last year were only 90,000,000 pounds.

Clothed with war-time powers, the Dairy Products Board under chairmanship of J. E. Singleton has been able to take drastic steps to improve facilities for handling Canada's cheese exports. Cheese is now moved under strict governmental regulations from the time it is benig made in the factory until it reaches the United Kingdom customer.

To meet the situation where the demand for Canadian cheese is so great there is not sufficient time to mature it to the extent possible before the war, the Board has fixed at about 60 degrees the temperature at which cheese must be kept in factories and grading stations. A new order also has been passed to see that cheese while on ship shall be kept at a temperature of 50 degrees or higher.

Keeping Standard Up

These are the temperatures at which cheese matures most rapidly without deteriorating and authorities here are determined that everything be done to provide United Kingdom customers with as good cheese in war time as they got from Canada during peace. The improved methods of handling will make up to a considerable extent for the shortage of time for properly curing the product.

The Canadian government gives a bonus of two cents a pound when cheese grades 94 per cent perfect or better and this year grading returns so far show four times as much cheese was entitled to the bonus as last year. Cheese grading 93 per cent gets a one-cent bonus.

Throughout the summer cheese production was somewhat more profitable than butter. It takes approximately twice as much milk to make a pound of butter as a pound of cheese. With cheese fetching 14 cents, plus the possibility of two cents bonus, it paid better than butter selling at around 21 cents.

However, butter has moved up to around 29 cents and for the first time in a year the two products bring about equal returns to the farmer.

Many factories in Eastern Ontario and Quebec, where most of Canada's cheese is produced, expect to operate all this winter.

Bewdley Pastor Bid Farewell

BEWDLEY, Nov. 2.—(ENS)—Sunday brought to a close a happy pastorate with the Bewley Baptist Church, when Rev. E. K. Smith of Port Hope came for his final Sunday service. It was anniversary service and the Rev. Rowland of Port Hope was the guest speaker.

Pleasing solos were sung by Miss Doris Chesher and Miss Young of Port Hope.

The local congregation was invited to the Port Hope Baptist Church for the evening service. The United Church of Port Hope withdrew service to enable members to join with Baptist friends for Mr. Smith's farewell service.

After service all were asked to the basement where lunch was served and a purse presented to Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Mr. Smith is leaving immediately for Petawawa as he has offered his services for work with the army. Both he and his wife will be very much missed. As well as being a fine minister he was very popular in sports and in the Lions Club of Port Hope.

Among guests at the Horner-Little wedding were: Rev. and Mrs. Crisall, Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. W. Little, Jr., Mr. Wardy Little, Mrs. Robert Hopkins and Miss Teresa Wilson, all of Rochester, N.Y., also Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Steele and children of Oshawa.

Miss Letitia White, a life-long resident of Hamilton Township, living near Bewdley, passed away in the Port Hope hospital on Wednesday. Funeral service was held at the Bewdley Anglican Church Friday afternoon with interment in the Bewdley cemetery.

The Misses Noble, Perrytown, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bray.

Mrs. Will Benson has been ill in the Port Hope Hospital for the past week. Her condition is improving.

Mrs. Hilliard McAllister was an afternoon guest of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold McAllister on Thursday.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, November 3

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds presage of brilliant successes and much personal gratification, especially in all pertaining to church, social or friendly contacts or affiliations. And while affairs should move at a lively pace yet there may be rather serious and perplexing problems to cope with.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy some very alluring and promising opportunities for attaining their heart's desire "in a big way." However in such ambitious and expansive situations it would be wise to have attention to schemes, plots and all manner of intriguing, deceitful or glamorous entanglements. Sound methods based on industry and merit may be lucrative. For the young and eligible there is forecast of much pleasure in romance.

A child born on this day although it has sound aims, efficiency and ambition may be carried away by lures, treachery and suspicious entanglements.

For Monday, November 4

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a rather successful and propitious day, with important projects and aims responding to an expansive and productive impetus, although there are drawbacks and limitations to be dealt with. Also there may be the menace of fraud, duplicity and subtle situations, in connection with superiors or those in power. Resist strife and impetuosity.

Those whose birthday it is may have a promising and profitable year, with ambitious objectives under expansive influence, despite static, tricky or dishonest situations to dispose of. This threatens from high places, although generally results and cooperation may come from influential sources.

A child born on this day should be ambitious and capable, with sound ideas backed up by much initiative, energy and determination. The danger is in excesses in this direction, as well as from some subtle opposition.

Compulsory P.T. For Girls In India

CALCUTTA, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Following the trend of widening activities for the women of India, compulsory physical training for girls in the United Provinces is a new item in the current program of the Education Department.

The authorities have decided to train women teachers both in government institutions and in aided schools in methods of physical education.

The Director of Public Instruction says that apart from the fact that a healthy mind can only progress in a healthy body, it is realized that never before has the necessity of keeping fit and healthy been so clearly demonstrated as today, now that women in India play such an important part inside and outside the home.

Keeping the above point of view in mind, the Department started refresher courses last summer where 69 teachers received intensive training for a month in all the different phases of physical education.

The training was not such as to make the girls abnormally muscular, but it was based on scientific principles aiming at suppleness and agility. Besides "form-giving" exercises which check and correct defects, exercises on wall bars, vaulting box, and on the floor were taught.

Nash Eight Has Custom Styling

Here's a car with that tailored, custom-built effect. It is the new Aeropowered Nash Ambassador Eight for 1941. The trim, beautiful appearance is achieved by eliminating the chrome strips from the streamlined body. Running boards are hidden beneath the doors, and fender and top lines blend into the car body giving the entire model a sculptured appearance. This is one of two sedan body types offered in the Nash Ambassador Eight series for 1941. This four-door sedan also is available with a deck back, as well as with the streamlined, or "fast" back pictured here.

Livestock Gain Rapid Past Year

OTTAWA, Nov. 2—(CP). — Increases were shown in all the principal species of livestock on Canadian farms, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in a report on a survey made on June 1, 1940.

Converted to grain-consuming animal units, numbers of all species of livestock and poultry on June 1 were the highest of record. Units totalled 17,676,000, compared with an average of 16,084,000 units from 1931 to 1935.

Greatest increase was shown in the number of hogs which reached a record high of approximately 5,882,000, a gain of 37 per cent from the 4,294,000 reported in the June 1, 1939 survey.

Number of cattle was estimated at 8,565,000, one per cent higher than in 1939, when the estimate was 8,474,000. This was the first increase in cattle on farms at June 1 since 1939, when the high point in the cattle number cycle was reached.

"Unless serious feed shortages develop, cattle numbers are expected to increase over the next few years," the bureau reported.

Number of horses on Canadian farms was estimated at 2,858,000, an increase of 34,000 over the 1939 estimate. "Further increases are anticipated," the bureau said.

Number of sheep was 3,452,000, compared with 3,366,00 last year.

All species of poultry were greater than a year ago. Hens and chickens increased from 58,509,800 to 60,201,300 and turkeys from 2,476,000 to 2,508,300. Ducks and geese also showed increases, but figures were not given.

"The increase in livestock numbers has followed two years of adequate feed supplies and relatively favorable prices for livestock and animal products," the report said. "The increases in number have been most pronounced in those species consuming large amounts of grain.

The Rabbit Turns

TOPEKA, Kas., Nover. 2—(AP).—State Game Protector Art Benander noticed a rabbit jumping up and down and not getting anywhere. Investigation disclosed the little animal was trying to kill a blacksnake by kicking it. Benander finished the job and found bunny had inflicted several cuts in the reptile's hide.

Girls Take Interest In Military Drill

Girls of Peterborough are showing keen interest in the military gymnastics classes held at the Y.W.C.A. this season.

Senior High School girls meet Monday afternoons and already have their marching and drill formations nearing perfection.

A large class of fifty business girls meet Thursday evening and drill just as hard as their soldier brothers and friends, even gun drill being done with military precision.

The Tuesday Advanced Gym Class and the Thursday Gym-Swim-Club group are taking a share of military gymnastics.

"Canada's second line of defence," its girls and young women are in training at the local Y.W.C.A.

Boy, Girl Spree On Stolen $670

OTTAWA, Nov. 2 (CP)—Details of a spending orgy by a 15-year-old boy and his 17-year-old girl companion, during which they disposed of $690 stolen by the boy from an Ottawa woman, were revealed in juvenile court Friday.

Charged with theft of the money from Mrs. Laura St. Amour, the boy pleaded guilty and was remanded to the Detention Home for a week with Mrs. St. Amour's 12-year-old son, who admitted receiving $60 of the stolen money from him.

The girl and her father, Ivanhoe Giroux, 50, were remanded to jail for sentence on receiving charges.

The girl was charged with receiving $250 and the father with receiving $10 from his daughter.

The money was stolen two weeks ago from Mrs. St. Amour's home.

The boy who stole the money and the girl started out for Montreal, but changed their minds and went to Toronto. After spending a day there they went to Montreal, where they rented an apartment. They purchased $250 worth of clothing and watches and rings, and visited night clubs.

After a week they had spent all the money. Montreal police took them into custody after receiving information from authorities here.

Festival Closes

MONTREAL, Nov. 2.—(CP).—The Quebec musical competition festival, held annually since 1937, will be closed for the duration of the war, it was announced yesterday. More than 13,000 competitors took part in the Festival last March when out of town entries numbered close to 1,000.

Butter Price Investigated

TORONTO, Nov. 2.—Butter has been coming up out of the lower-price group among farm products, Herbert Hannam, secretary of the United Farmers' Co-Operative Company and president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said last night regarding Ottawa reports of a butter price investigation by the War Prices Board.

The Ottawa statement said the board planned to find out the cause of a six-cent butter price increase. Toronto produce men said one would have to go back a considerable time to find butter six cents under the current price. Butter started to rise about Oct. 3.

Comparisons of prices showed the wholesale price of butter, creamery solids, on that date was 25 cents and butterfat, the article on which the farmer gets payment, was 27 cents in Toronto, delivered. Yesterday butter had increased to 29 cents and butterfat, a like amount, to 31 cents. Butter and butterfat quotations one year ago were 28.5 cents and 31 cents.

"Butter during the past year was relatively lower in price than other farm products," said Mr. Hannam. "For example, back in 1913, the year before the last war, butter averaged 30 cents a pound and the prices farmers paid for consumer goods in that year was nowhere near as high as today."

He said there was no doubt the farmer obtained the benefit from the price increase. He forecast butter was not likely to go much further because cheese was the export factor in the dairy industry and its prices was fixed by Great Britain, main source of the Canadian cheese market.

Save Worry, Create Confidence

When no one in the family is informed on proper nursing, what confusion an illness can create. The patient is irritable, the home nurse is harassed, weary.

So much of this can be avoided by knowing the methods followed by trained nurses. By just fixing a patient's bed properly you may do much toward giving him the ease and comfort he needs.

Place a small pillow under his head, another at the small of his back, and one under each shoulder and upper arm. To rest tired muscles of leg and back, place a pillow under his knees; to keep him from slipping down in bed, put another between his feet and footboard.

Of course, it's most important for a mother to know the illnesses of small children.

At the onset of a contagious disease, convulsions are apt to occur. Place the child at once in a hot bath of 112 degrees and keep an ice cap on his head. When the attack is over, put him to bed and keep him warm.

Or perhaps your greatest problems are ordinary ills such as colds. In our 32-page booklet a registered nurse tells how to nurse common ailments, contagious diseases; explains care of bed-patients, post-operative and baby care, also emergency procedure.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT NURSING to The Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

SQUEEZING FOR EXTRAS

NOT ALL squeezes are made in slam contracts. Plenty of them are needed to make lower ones, or result in furnishing extra tricks above the contracts. Those extras sometimes determine the difference between an ordinary score and a top score in duplicate tournaments. Even such a thing as a "progressive squeeze" for two extra tricks develops upon rare occasions in modest-sized contracts.

A repeated or progressive squeeze furnished John J. Cummings a decided top on this deal in a New York tournament. West led the club 2 to East's J. Knowing his squeezes and seeing a chance for a possible progressive one, Mr. Cummings let East have that trick and took the next club. With nine tricks surely in sight, he wanted not one, but two extra tricks.

After East won the diamond 10 with the A and returned his last club, dummy tossing a spade, Mr. Cummings went to serious work on his plan. He took the club return with his A, cashed two diamonds and the spade K, then led the fourth diamond, tossing a heart from his own hand. West at this stage had two spades, three hearts and the high club. He had to shed one. Regardless of which he chose, it would build a trick for the declarer. He picked the club 10.

Mr. Cummings then came to his hand with the heart A and played the club 7. West was squeezed again, between his major doubletons. When he picked a heart, the dummy discarded a spade and took the last three tricks.

Your Week-End Lesson

Do you understand the type of lead throwing and end-play whereby an opponent is obliged to play into a simple tenace? One whereby he must play into a combination tenace between the declarer's hand and dummy? Can you set up examples of them?

Canadian Y.W. Equipping Hostess Houses

The major war work of the Canadian Y.W.C.A. at the request of the Government is the equipping and supervising of Hostess Houses at the larger military training centres, Already sixteen Hostess Houses are in operation and are proving a home for soldiers to meet their relatives and friends. A number of new places have asked for the service of a Y.W.C.A. Hostess House and these are being carefully considered by the Government and the Y.W.C.A.

Camp Borden Hostess House is well known to many Peterborough citizens. This house was only planned for summer work, but it has been found necessary to enlarge it and equip it for winter as well. When one of the local secretaries visited there this summer over 1,000 soldiers and visiting friends were using the splendid facilities and two small boys who had travelled alone from Toronto to spend the day with their father had been given a tent and were being looked after. At Trenton, the secretary found the buildings very much used by the soldiers and friends. One mother called to Trenton on the news of her son's death would have had no place to go if it were not for the Hostess House and its kind secretary.

In centres where there is a Y.W.C.A. that organization is carrying on a Hostess House service. Posters in Peterborough's two training camps offer accommodation at the Y.W.C.A. to relatives and friends visiting the soldiers.

This work accepted by the Government as the Y.W.C.A.'s first war service requires a spending budget of $300,000. Added to this the Canadian Y.W.C.A. has assumed the responsibility of raising $100,000 for the support of war work through the Y.W.C.A.'s in England which are carrying such a heavy load these days, for women in service, war workers and refugees, and homeless. Peterborough contributes a share to this work.

In studying war time needs the Association realizes that it has a great responsibility to keep girls physically fit so they shall be able for the tasks they must help carry on and not add extra responsibility to the country through ill-health. The nervous strain of war time wears out young people unless relaxtion is provided and also young people with a keen desire to serve their country may find channels for helpful service through training in Y.W.C.A. educational classes.

aid the nation's hard-fighting ground forces, bombing and strafing Fascist troops wherever they could find them in the wild, mountainous area along the Greek-Albanian border.

(Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, said Greek planes blasted at two Italian airdromes at Koritza, Albania, destroying one and damaging the other. The report added that Greek troops, fighting at close quarters with cold steel, had occupied a strategic height dominating Ktritza.

(Reuters, reporting a similar success, asserted the defenders had stormed and captured an important mountain and seized an Albanian area embracing several villages.

In all sectors of the front where they have not actually succeeded in pushing the Italians back, the Greeks said, the defenders were holding firm.

(Stefani, the official Italian news agency, repeated the Fascist claim that the Greeks were retreating. The agency said, however that Italian troops have been "rudely surprised" at the lack of roads in conquered Greek territory and that engineers were having difficulty replacing bridges blown up by the retreating Greeks.)

Hit From Two Sides

The Fascist air offensive apparently operated from two sides of Greece—from Albania and from the Dodecanese Islands in the Eastern Mediterranean.

(Reuters said British naval officers had arrived at Athens and a number of Greek Islands and were working swiftly to prepare cooperation with the Greeks.

(The British Press Association's naval correspondent in London hinted at coming action in the Mediterranean with the statement that England's Mediterranean fleet was "passing from its present phase of activity to a large-scale offensive.

(He pointed out that the Italian invasion of Greece gave the British navy "great opportunities of which naturally it was availing itself. Indeed, he said, the moment appears to be approaching when powerful moves against the Italians might be expected.

the large Negro vote is another unpredictable factor.

Also uncertain is the extent to which John L. Lewis' advocacy of Mr. Willkie will affect the vote of his committee of industrial organizations, which claims 4,000,000 members. The C.I.O. supported President Roosevelt in 1936 when he swept all but two states.

The President has yet to reply to Lewis. Last night, speaking in the high-ceilinged hall of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Mr. Roosevelt charged that an "unholy alliance" has been formed in the Republican party by "the extreme reactionary and the extreme Radical elements in this country," they having no common ground except to "produce dictatorial ends."

Starting a final, intensive 24-hour campaign through vital New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, Mr. Roosevelt said this was "a strange campaign" in which, on "almost the day of election," it was "still impossible to determine what are the principles of the opposition party." He declared "vast quantities of Republican campaign literature are distributed by organizations which make no secret of their admiration for the dictatorship form of government."

Earlier, speaking from his campaign train parked overnight in New Jersey, Mr. Willkie accused the President of "deceptive optimism" in declaring at Boston that the United States is making "very rapid progress" toward a goal of 50,000 planes a year. He contended that "anybody who knows anything about production will understand that after years of neglect and abuse of industry by the New Deal that goal cannot be reached short of a period of years."

the gun crews' caps despite intensification of the overnight attack which made the raids the heaviest of the week for some sections.

At the same time, the Royal Air Force struck back through the night at widely scattered targets on the Continent.

The Air Ministry reported that Berlin and oil "targets" in Central and Western Germany were bombed heavily.

(Reports from Berne indicated that other British fliers might have crossed Switzerland from new blows at industrial Northern Italy.)

The German attacks were directed principally against London and Southeastern England ,a communique said, although the Midlands, Northeastern England, and Northwestern and Southwestern England also reported bombings.

The communique said the raids, "while slightly more widespread than for some nights past, were not on a large scale."

There were some dead and injured, but the number was described as not large.

In one town in the Midlands an undisclosed number of persons was trapped in a shelter beneath a factory, and families were buried in the basements of four houses. In another Midlands town 150 incendiary bombs rained down within a few minutes.

London's 56th night of unrelenting air siege began with an eight-hour raid which lasted until shortly after midnight. After that there was a lull until shortly before dawn when the city had a brief alert.

Y.W.C.A. For 49 Years Citizen Builder

Next year will be the 50th anniversary of the Y.W.C.A. in Peterborough.

For fifty years the local work has grown. Much time and money has been put into the development of the ideals of this association. Its present large building, enthusiastic membership, and its many services are a splendid tribute to the early founders.

Fifty years of building must not be allowed to go back for any lack of public support. Every effort should be put forward on the part of present day citizens to help the Y.W.C.A. carry on to greater and greater service.

During the years the calls at the Association through its community services have grown until they demand almost full time of one secretary. 750 calls through the Employment Bureau, 29 meetings of city organizations, personal counselling, general information to the travelling public, and Travellers' Aid calls are all important phases of Y.W.C.A. work.

The annual financial campaign is being held October 30 to November 6. A group of 130 canvassers are giving willingly of their time to help guarntee the finances of the association for this year, and it is hoped every citizen will make some contribution to the character building work of the Y.W.C.A.

Drive On Greece Plot To Clear Egyptian Field?

LONDON, Nov. 2 — (CP). — Two theories are advanced here on Turkey's maintenance of neutrality up to now in the Italo-Greek war. Balkan diplomatic circles are discussing the possibility that a German-Russian squeeze play may be responsible. Other sources take no stock in talk of a Russian-German agreement.

According to some reports, Axis strategy is based on an attempt to draw British troops from Egypt into Greece, opening an opportunity for the Italians to move eastward from Sidi Barrani toward the Suez Canal.

Some Balkan diplomats express the opinion that Turkey's part in the Near Eastern drama is dictated by Moscow.

They say they believe that an understanding in the eventual disposition of Middle Eastern spoils, such as the oil fields of Iraq and Iran (Persia) has been reached by Hitler and Stalin.

Some diplomatic observers express the opinion that Russia has been promised Iran and a corridor on both sides of the Dardanelles in exchange for "controlling" the Turks while Germany and Italy split up the Balkans.

If this could be accomplished the three powers—Germany, Italy and Russia— then would confront the Turks with an ultimatum demanding a right of way for German and Italian troops leading to Palestine, Port Said, and Suez, and a denationalized zone around the Dardanelles to be controlled by Russia.

The other view, however, is that Russia's silence on the Italian drive into Greece may be taken as showing uneasiness in Moscow as the Axis powers approach the Dardanelles.

It is pointed out that in the past Russia always has fought either for control of the Dardanelles for herself or for control by a friendly power. These sources say she is not likely to sit quietly while Germany and Italy approach the historic straits which form her only gateway to the Mediterranean.

Italian Army Floundering In Deep Snow

Additional Handicap Has Been Added To Italian Conquest

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA, Nov. 4.—(AP).—Snow fall in the steep mountain passes of the upper half of the Greek-Albanian frontier gave invading Italian troops an additional handicap to-day in their drive toward Phlorina.

Meanwhile the new British military mission to Greece was reported conferring with the Greek General Stafff on a co-ordinated plan for the defence of Greece.

The British mission is expected to serve as a link between the Greek command and the British Near East General Staff at Cairo, Egypt.

The Belgrade newspaper Politica reported that the Italian minister and legation personnel are planning to leave Athens to-day by train to return to Italy by way of Yugoslavia. This was taken as an indication the fighting has progressed beyond hope for mediation or compromise.

Operations Hindered.

Observers paid close attention to weather conditions, expected to play a strong part in the fighting because Italians, so far unable to gain control of the few good roads in the battle zone, are being forced to operate on unimproved mountainside roads where even in dry weather mechanized equipment is of no value.

Snow fall would hamper operations seriously under such conditions.

Greek newspapers, now reduced to two pages, carried large displays on the landing of British forces on the island of Crete.

Soviet Rejects British Protest

MOSCOW, Nov. 4—(AP).—A British protest, terming Soviet Russia's participation in the formation of a Danube River commission with Germany, Italy and Rumania, a violation of neutrality, has been rejected by the Russian Government, Tass, official Soviet news agency, asserted today.

Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff informed British Ambassador Sir Stafford Cripps Saturday that the British view was "incorrect," Tass said.

Britain stated in a note October 29 she could not recognize any agreements which may violate existing treaties relative to the Danube.

The Molotoff reply, Tass added, pointed out Russia had a vital interest in the Danube, while Britain was "thousands of kilometres removed" from the river. It said Russia was kept out of the international and European Danube commissions by treaties "in which Britain played a leading part."

Plans Complete

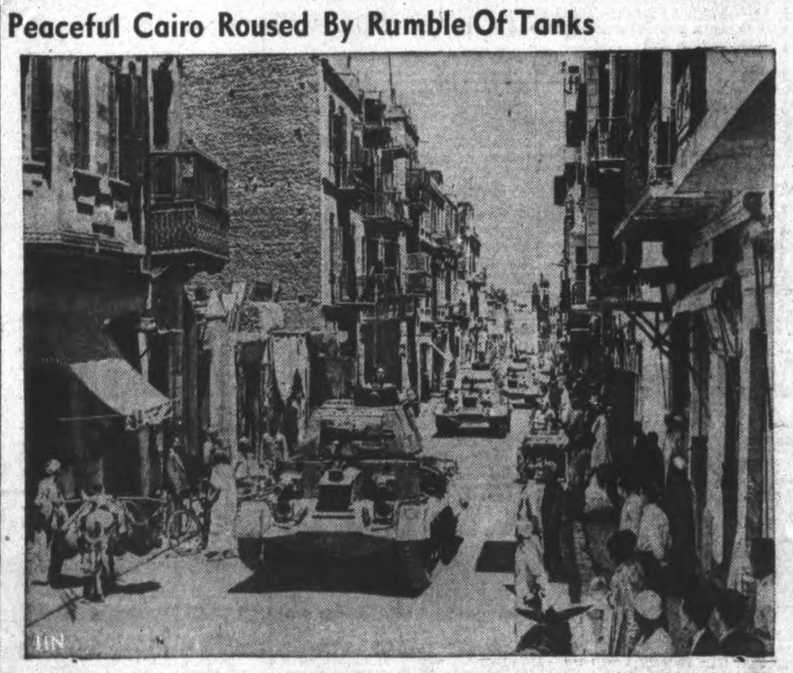
Fort Erie, Ont., Nov. 4 (CP)

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD Doris Miller of Atlanta, Ga., plans to marry Aircraftsman A. M. Hargrett of the Royal Canadian Air Force in Toronto today after the Canadian immigration department admitted her to the Dominion for the duration of the war.

Miss Miller had been held since last Thursday because she could not show a document that she had permission from her parents to wed. The document arrived yesterday and Miss Miller was allowed to proceed to Toronto.

Hargrett recently left his sweetheart and his medical practice in Georgia to enlist in what he called "Britain's world fight for international freedom." At that time, Miss Miller visited him here and then returned to her home.

Peaceful Cairo Roused By Rumble Of Tanks



British tanks rumble through the narrow streets of Cairo, Egypt, on their way to halt the Italian advance from Libya. Egypt still is at peace technically, although fighting has been going on for some time. Observers intimated that the Italians' war with Greece may hurt their moves in Africa.

Italians Seek to Make Excuses

News and Propaganda Agency Admits Reverses In Greece

ROME, Nov. 4—(AP).—Stefani, Italian news and propaganda agency, acknowledged today that Italian troops were meeting stiff Greek resistance in the Ionnina region, at the lower end of the Italian front.

It would be "ridiculous," however, to believe the Greek could hold out indefinitely, one of the agency's war correspondents said.

He described the Greek army as armed with British and French artillery, rifles, ammunition and airplanes of various type, but said there is "no comparison" between the Fascist and Greek armies in organization.

Italian troops have entered Greek territory "varying distances" along the entire front and have occupied objectives along the Kalamas River, Stefani reported.

"The Italian advance failed to acquire lightning rhythm because of bad weather prevailing in the region for several days and because of the lack of roads," the dispatch said.

"The terrain permits the use of only one route for the advance toward the east and another toward the west. These roads until today were swamp strips interrupted here and there by dynamite mines exploded by the Greek rearguard."

(It was the first time Stefani had sought excuses for failure of Italian troops to make an impressive showing against the Greeks. The agency made no mention of new Greek gains in Albania nor the Greek defeat of an Italian motorized force on the Epirus front. It was silent also on Allied bombing of military objectives at Tirana, the Albanian capital).

Reinforcements Come Up

BELGRADE, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Italian reinforcements were reported moving into the front line today on the Northern Greek border as the Greeks held steadfastly to their positions and snowfall in the steep mountain passes put another obstacle in the invaders' path toward Phlorina.

Aid To Greece Be Outlined

LONDON, Nov. 4—(Cp Cable). — The scale of Britain's assistance to Greece will be outlined by Prime Minister Churchill as soon as parliament meets again, it was announced tonight. He will speak at a public session of the House of Commons.

In addition the Prime Minister will deal with Britain's representations to the Vichy Government in an effort to find out the extent of Marshal Petain's collaboration with Germany, particularly in relation to the French navy and naval bases on the Mediterranean and North Africa.

Numbers Not Known.

Beyond the laconic announcement that British troops have landed in Crete, the British public knows practically nothing of the scale of assistance to Greece. There has been no indication of the strength of the British force or of what the navy and air force are doing.

The Daily Mail in an editorial today headed "The News Please," calls on the Government to divulge all details of Britain's assistance to Greece compatible with national security. The newspaper sarcastically reminds Whitehall that the first announcement that British troops had landed in Crete came from Athens and added that "concealment of information from the enemy can become an obsession."

It is impossible to say to what extent Mr. Churchill will find it possible to draw back the curtain of events in Crete and elsewhere, but there is already evidence that the Government will be pressed in the House in regard to the Greek campaign as an integral part of the middle east theatre of war — one flank of the battlefront that extends across the Mediterranean to Egypt and Libya.

Wide-eyed, she dashed back to her aunt's room and cried: "There must have been a big accident, because I saw a whole family all in bed in one room."

London, Nov. 4 (CP Cable)

DR. GEORGE NELIGAN, one of the senior surgeons at the London hospital, today presented Capt. Robert Davies of the Royal Engineers with a stethoscope.

The reason? The former resident of St. Catharines, Ont., who achieved fame in removing the St. Paul's time bomb, often has borrowed a stethoscope from the hospital in order to "listen in" to delayed action bombs before their removal.

The gift was in recognition of Capt. Davies' work in disposing of a bomb at the hospital.

Six Main Issues Are Before U.S. Electorate

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(CP)—Tomorrow the United States chooses the man who will mould its destiny in a world aflame.

It will choose between Franklin D. Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie, the most momentous decision the country has faced in a generation. It makes its choice after a campaign of complex issues, fought with a tenacity and bitterness seldom equalled.

Not Lead National To War

And though both candidates have proclaimed they will not lead the country into war, many of the estimated 50,000,000 Americans who will cast their ballots tomorrow feel they may be choosing between peace and war. Willkie has predicted re-election of the president would plunge the United States into war by next April.

Six main issues face the electors: War, defence, aid to Britain, employment, business recovery, social reforms. In the background is a confusion of Trivia: incidents such as the throwing of missiles at the candidates; occurrences that may affect the large Negro vote; the army captaincy to Elliott Roosevelt at a time when 16,000,000 young men faced compulsory service.

Third Term Issue

In a category by itself stands the important question of a third term for President Roosevelt. Unwritten law decrees a president should serve at most two terms and the cry of "dictatorship" has caused many Democrats to swing to the Republicans; conversely, some Republicans feel Mr. Roosevelt's years of experience justify another term in a time of trial and uncertainty.

While choosing their president, Americans also will select a vice-

Car Plunges Down Bank Near Trenton

Rescue Effort Fails When Soldier Dives Couldn't Open Doors

TRENTON, Nov. 4—(Special). — Lieut. G. Blue, a member of the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment, 2nd Battalion. With him were Lieut. J. Kincaid and Lieut. G. Blue. All were returning from Trenton after inspecting the airport. The accident occurred just inside the town limits of Trenton.

The victims were identified as Mrs. Vera Jackson, 41, of Hilton; her daughter, Velma, 12, and Mrs. Lee McMurter of Brighton. Two other daughters of Mrs. Jackson, Fay, 15, and Laura, 16, are thought to have stayed with friends at Frankford. Identification of the bodies was made by Orval Jackson of Hilton, the husband of Mrs. Jackson.

The collision drove the women's car across No. 33 Highway and it tumbled down the steep embankment, clipping the heavy undergrowth. The car landed on its nose in the river just below Dam No. 2. The river at this point is about twelve feet deep.

Lieutenant Blue dived to the rescue, but was unable to open the car doors. An hour later the auto was pulled up by a derrick sufficiently far to enable Constable Frank Lazo and Robert Davis, both of Trenton, to bring the bodies to the surface. The three victims were found in the rear part of the car.

The scene of the accident is the approximate spot where George Arthur of Trenton nearly lost his life last spring when his car tumbled into the river. He managed to escape by breaking the glass of a window.

Major Rupert told police that when he saw the other car approaching, he said to his companions: "Here's where I take to the grass." The next moment the cars collided. The left wheel of Major Rupert's car was broken off by the impact.

Far-Ranging Raids Are Carried Out During Night By RAF

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(CP)—Successful attacks by far-ranging Royal Air Force bombers last night in Kiel, Germany's great naval base, and Naples, port and industrial centre in Southern Italy, were announced today by the air ministry.

A brief communique said the raids were carried out "in spite of extremely difficult weather conditions" by planes of the bomber command.

It was the second raid on Naples in four days. The communique, like the announcement of the first raid, failed to indicate where the British bombers operated from.

In a later day communique the air ministry said that "during daylight operations yesterday Flushing (Holland) and the airdrome at Soesterberg were attacked."

Two British planes did not return after these operations, the ministry said.

Rome Given Alarm

ROME, Nov. 4.— (AP) —British bombers caused Rome's first air raid alarm since July 24 early today as they carried the air war to Naples for the second time in four nights, but officials claimed they failed to reach the capital.

Rome's populace was awakened by the alarm at 3:45 a.m. (9.45 p.m. E.D.T. Sunday) and held under the alert for an hour and 45 minutes.

The high command claimed the fliers who raided Naples were met "by a barrage of anti-aircraft fire" which forced them to drop their missiles in open country.

School Teacher Robbed Of $12 Near Bancroft

BANCROFT, Nov. 4—(ENS). — An unknown man armed with a rifle, robbed Miss Alice Mitchell, Dungannon school teacher, at a lonely spot on the old Hastings Road, eight miles south of Bancroft, this morning as she was on her way to school.

Miss Mitchell was walking to school when the man sprang from a clump of bushes, grabbed her purse, after threatening her with the rifle, took $12 in cash from the purse then ran, and disappeared in the woods nearby. Miss Mitchell was not harmed by the robber, but was considerably shaken by the experience.

Miss Mitchell teaches at S.S. No. 1, eight miles south of Bancroft, and the robbery took place between her boarding house, the home of William Kelly, and the school.

County Constable George P. Wells was notified, and is making a search for the man, who is said to be about 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighs about 160 pounds.

Provincial Constable Dymond of Madoc has also been notified and is investigating the robbery.

Second Chain Of Hills Is Captured

Attacks Are Repulsed With Grenades And Bayonet Fighting

ATHENS, Nov. 4 (AP) — Greek troops, holding off Italian attacks in Epirus in fierce hand to hand fighting, were reported today to have won a second chain of hills in a counter drive into Albania to cut off the Italian supply route through Koritza.

The Greek high command said a strong Italian thrust against the Greek left flank in the mountains of Epirus was repulsed with grenades and bayonet fighting.

Artillery roared from both sides of the battleline. The Greeks said they destroyed nine of the tanks which supported the Fascist onslaught.

Bombers Lead Infantry

A Greek communique said the Italian air force smashed at the Greek defence positions in 15 consecutive bomb raids that preceded the infantry attack.

Elsewhere, Greek cities were bombed. Homes were hit in Salonika, where Greek anti-aircraft gunners were credited with bringing down three Italian planes yesterday. Civilian casualties were reported.

(Exchange Telegraph Company reports from Yugoslavia said Greek mountain troops had pushed seven miles into Albania, encircling Koritza, whose fall was "expected momentarily," and taking 1,200 prisoners.)

(Reuters news agency reported the Greek high command had announced capture by Greek troops of a new range of heights in Albania.)

A Greek communique said before the end of the first week of Italian invasion Greek bayonet attacks on this north-eastern flank of the battlefront slashed slightly more than three miles into Albania and drove Italians out of fortified positions.

Only sketchy details of the sea fight off Corfu, where about 664 B.C. the ships of Corinth and her Corfu colony fought the first naval battle in Greek history, were contained in telegraph reports from the horn-shaped island off the Greek-Albanian coast.

The engagement was said to have taken place west of the island at 8 p.m. Sunday (2 p.m. E.D.T.), and the Athens radio said that half an hour after the firing was heard "a large vessel was seen ablaze, steaming northward."

The semi-official Greek news agency termed Italian claims to

British Troops Occupy Crete

LONDON, Nov. 4 (CP)—British official circles confirmed today that British troops have landed in Crete.

The size of the force which occupied the strategic Greek Island south of the Greek mainlands was not disclosed.

British military circles said it was reported that on the northern part of the Greek-Italian front from the Phlorina sector down to the Pindus mountains the Greeks "generally speaking, advanced two or three kilometres."

They added that there was little information here from the left of the Greek line, which runs along the coast, from which a strong Italian attack is expected soon.

Nazi Raiders Leave London Alone

Only Attacks Made During Night Northeast England

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(CP)—German air raiders, which avoided London last night for the first time since Sept. 7 and struck only light blows in other sections, were reported over the East Anglia this morning.

London, raid-free since nightfall yesterday, had no alert up to mid-morning today.

Some raiders roared over the city yesterday, but the all-clear which ended the last daylight raid sounded at the time the night assaults usually begin. The only attacks during the night, the government said, were in northeastern England and eastern Scotland.

Mist and rain continued to veil the channel today, limiting visibility.

Shelters For All Not Possible

London, meanwhile, having undergone 57 successive nights of raiding, heard Herbert Morrison of Home Security, say in a broadcast that deep air raid shelters for all were "beyond the bounds of practical possibility."

He urged the building of more corrugated iron "Anderson shelters"; the opening of private basement shelters; increased use of floors above the ground as well as basements in strong modern buildings; and installation of bunks and inauguration of a ticket system for subway refuges.

Honors Paid Sea Victims

OTTAWA, Nov. 4 (CP)—National and personal mourning for the Canadian Navy men lost at sea in recent weeks were symbolized in memorial services here today attended by Government leaders, diplomatic corps, defence headquarters staff and hundreds of civilians.

At Christ Church Cathedral, Prime Minister Mackenzie King joined with others in paying tribute to the 172 men who died in the sinking of the destroyer Margaree and in the loss of the minesweeper Bras d'Or.

Members of the cabinet, chiefs of staff, black-clad mothers and widows heard Maj. Rev. W. A. Kidd assert that the principles of freedom and human rights for which the Empire is fighting—and for which these Navy men died—are "deep-seated in the heart of God."

At the Basilica, Archbishop Alexandre Vachon voiced similar sentiments for a congregation which included Navy Minister Angus Macdonald' Fisheries Minister Michaud, representatives of the diplomatic corps and the armed services.

Maj. Kidd reminded the Cathedral congregation that the hope of the future lay in the fact that "after Calvary came the Easter Day."

The sacrifices of these Navy men had in them an "appreciation of the cost of nationhood" and proceeded from a deepening value which Canadians were placing on their citizenship.

Archbishop Vachon termed the Naval men brave knights who "went away with joy in their hearts because they were going to defend justice and right against a ruthless foe in whose heart all humanitarian sentiments seem to be obliterated."

president, heir to the presidency should a White House vacancy occur. Henry A. Wallace, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, and Senator Charles L. McNary, for the Republicans, have carried the burden of the campaigning on farm issues.

Saying No Longer Holds Good

Thirty-five Senators, all but three House of Representatives and 33 governors also will be chosen. Maine, holding its state election in September, already has picked its governor, a senator and three representatives. Maine went Republican but the saying "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," no longer holds good. It went Republican in 1936.

Minor-party slates include the Socialist ticket headed by Norman Thomas, running for the fourth time; Communist Earl Browder and Roger W. Babson, who heads the Prohibition Party ticket. Court actions and the decisions of election boards have ruled the Communist candidates from the ballots of more than a dozen states.

On election eve, two main issues stand out. On war, Mr. Willkie, while endorsing all possible material aid to Great Britain, contends a provocative attitude toward the axis will lead to war if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected. The president has said that any charge he is heading toward war is contrary to the facts; he has vowed to continue his labors for peace.

Only Man Who Can Lead

On the third term, Mr. Roosevelt said of his acceptance of the Democratic nomination: "The real decision . . . is not the acceptance of a nomination but rather an ultimate willingness to serve if chosen by the electorate." Mr. Willkie declared: "The third-term candidate has suggested that the third-term candidate is the only man who can protect America. We reject the fatal doctrine of indispensability."

The president has laid down a governmental policy of fullest aid to Britain short of war, a policy the country as a whole approves. Mr. Willkie also approves—but he maintains that if he were elected he would be able to give more aid, and faster, than can Mr. Roosevelt.

Read Little, Travelling.

Generally, the 1940 campaign followed the usual pattern but Mr. Roosevelt, because of a tense international situation, laid down the rule that he could not travel farther than an overnight journey from Washington. His first strictly political address was made Oct. 23 at Philadelphia, followed by five others.

Mr. Willkie came closer to conducting the traditional sort of electioneering. He stumped the country continuosly, making more than 500 speeches in a 23,000-mile tour by train, airplane and automobile. He was seen by an estimated 12,000,000 persons. In the last weeks of the campaign he was under the care of a specialist for a sore throat.

Battling down the stretch, both candidates spoke Saturday night. At Cleveland, after a 24-hour tour through New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Mr. Roosevelt said the storm raging in the world is the reason he is seeking a third term and that when it is over "there will be another President."

Mr. Willkie, speaking at New York, assured Americans he wants to be the "master of no man," seeking only to be the servant of the people. Last night, in a statement, said his first act "when elected" would be to recommend to Congress a constitutional amendment limiting Presidential terms to eight years or less.

The formal end of the battle comes to-night. The President speaks from Hyde Park, N.Y., EDT, in his usual election-eve broadcast. The Republican nominee has the last word; he speaks at 1 a.m. EDT, Tuesday from New York.

Greek artillery fire has closed the highway from Yugoslavia to Koritza, Italy's base in the northern sector, these frontier press reports said. On the southern front, nearer the coast, they said, the Italians have made some progress towards Ionnina.

Greeks Reported To Captured Range Of Hills

LONDON, Nov. 4—(CP).—Reuters News Agency today quoted the Greek high command as announcing the capture of a new range of heights in Italian-held Albania and the destruction of nine Italian tanks in the repulse of an assault on the Epirus front.

The Monday communique said:

"On the Macedonian front our forces succeeded in occupying on Saturday a new range of heights in Albanian territory.

"On the Epirus front Sunday there was artillery fire on both sides. An enemy attack supported by tanks was repulsed. Nine tanks were destroyed.

"Heavy enemy attacks on the Phlorina sector were repulsed with grenades and at point of bayonet. The enemy suffered losses.

"A number of prisoners were captured.

"Intense enemy air attacks were made on the front, with 15 bombing raids, mostly on positions taken from the enemy.

"Enemy planes bombed Salonika, causing a number of casualties, several of them fatal, among the civilian population. No military objective was hit. Some houses were destroyed.

"Three Italian planes were brought down by anti-aircraft fire and a fourth is believed to have been so badly damaged it crashed near Gevgheli.

"The enemy air force bombed several villages in the interior of the country."

German Drive To East.

An early German drive to the East—toward the Suez Canal by way of Turkey's Dardanelles—was envisioned by foreign observers today as the result to be expected from an Axis conference in Germany.

Italian Foreign Minister Ciano was reported to have left his active command of Fascist air forces attacking Greece to meet with German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Franz Von Papen, the Nazi Ambassador to Turkey, said by Berlin to be grouse shooting in Moravia.

British and neutral observers both said they felt the conference was a final military discussion before Germany moves out from Rumania—into which diplomatic quarters in the Balkans said the Nazis were sending great masses of troops—toward the vital Dardanelles.

The troops movements, according to rumors emanating from Axis sources in Berne and heavily discounted by neutral observers, constituted part of Germany's preparations for an attack on Soviet Russia from Poland and Rumania.

Examiner Boys Given Banquet

About eighty carrier boys and girls were the guests of The Peterborough Examiner on Saturday night at the Y.M.C.A. at 6.15 p.m.; they sat down to a hearty meal especially ordered to appeal to the youthful appetites Afterwards they were entertained by music provided by Miss Frances Wells at the piano; Jack O'Dette, a one-time Examiner boy on the harmonica, and Howard Berry on his piano-accordion. The selections by these artists were apparently to the boys' tastes and they provided some lusty community singing between numbers, led by C. H. Gosse, Y.M.C.A. Secretary, who sat with H. B Cowan, circulation manager; A B Burrows, and the young lady guests at the head table The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. A. R. Kennedy, editor of the Examiner, who spoke to the boys and girls about the swiftly changing world we are living in, closing with some sage advice on approaching their future jobs in life. The boys then were dismissed to take a swim in the "Y" pool, following this up with many games of ping-pong, checkers and bowling, in which the few girls present joined. The Examiner hopes that the day set apart to honor its carrier salesmen was enjoyed by all of them.

Warehouses Burned

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP) — A British broadcast heard here today quoted reports from Norway that "a whole string of warehouses, loaded with army supplies, are already in ruins" from a fire started in Bergen by Norwegians "to obstruct the German occupational army."

German troops have been fighting the flames since Saturday night, the reports said.

Raids Renewed

LONDON, Nov. 4 (CP)—Londoners heard the scream of air raid sirens, the bark of anti-aircraft fire and the explosive thud of bombs late this afternoon after an interlude in the Nazi aerial siege lasting almost 24 hours.

Throughout last night there was quiet. It lasted through most of the day, but at tea time an uproar broke the unaccustomed silence and a single raider swooped into the metropolitan area, dropping several bombs.

The Sunday night of quiet was the first London had enjoyed since Sept. 7. There were reports of Nazi activity over East Anglia this morning.

Willkie Would Limit Term Of President

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(AP).—On the eve of the first Presidential election in which a third-term bid has been made, Wendell L. Willkie proposed to-day a constitutional amendment limiting the service of any President to eight years or less.

Before making three last minute radio appeals to United States' voters, the Republican Presidential nominee said in a statement that if the "common law against a third term be repealed," there would be no law to restrain President Roosevelt "or any of his successors, elected, hereditary or appointed, from any indefinite number of terms."

"When elected," Willkie said, "in order to prevent any subsequent demonstrations of such ambitious views, in my first message to Congress I shall recommend that they submit a constitutional amendment limiting the time any one President may serve to eight years or less."

In another statement calling on all voters to take part in to-morrows' election, Willkie reiterated a declaration made to the Republican National Convention and to Saturday night's Madison Square Garden rally.

"I stand before you without a single pledge, promise or understanding of any kind," he said, "except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy."

This assertion was made, he said, "despite last minute rumors which counsels of desperation spread about me to mislead voters."

"I have neither offered to nor discussed with any person any appointment to any cabinet position or to any other position," he added. "And I have never authorized anyone else to do so."

Willkie asked Americans to vote "to show the world the force and power of the free ballot in a democracy dedicated to peace and progress."

Urged To Vote

"Voting is the only way our citizens have to control their government," he said. "Failure to vote is not an addication of the high privilege of American citizenship, but is an acquiescence in whatever loss of liberty may come, if the power of the bosses be not out-voted....

Willkie is scheduled for three radio broadcasts today. The first, at 4:15 p.m. EDT over Columbia Broadcasting System, is sponsored by the Associated Willkie Clubs of America on the Kathleen Norris program.

Over the same network, the nominee will join his running mate, Sen. Charles L. McNary of Oregon and Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican national chairman, in a program from 11:15 to 12 midnight (EDT).

He will close his campaign in a program by the Associated Willkie Clubs over all four major radio networks from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. EDT. This program will originate from a Broadway theatre.

Six Lost Lives By Drowning During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press).

Two triple drowning fatalities in widely-separated districts headlined Ontario's week-end death toll of 13. Three Trenton district women were drowned when their automobile plunged over a 25-foot embankment into the Trent River, while in the Sudbury area three men were drowned when a rowboat used for ferrying sheep capsized.

Victims of the Trenton accident: Mrs. Vera Jackson, 41, of nearby Hilton, her 12-year-old daughter Velma, and Mrs. Lee McMurter of Brighton, also in Trenton district. The other drowning victims: Paul Oja, 19, Finnish farmer; Leo Moreau, 37, and Moreau's nine-year-old son Aurel.

At Port Carling, the mutilated body of George Stone, 47, of King, was found lying across the Canadian National Railways tracks and it is believed that he fell from the back of a north-bound train.

Germans Claim Sinking Armed Liners

BERLIN, Nov. 4. —(AP)— Nazi quarters today claimed the sinking by submarine of the British auxiliary cruisers Laurentic, 18,724 tons, and Patroclus, 11,314 tons, and the armed merchantman Casanare, 5,376 tons.

(No such reports were current in London.)

(The Laurentic and Patroclus, passenger liners, and the Casanare all were registered in Liverpool. The Laurentic was built in 1927 and was operated by the Cunard White Star line. The Patroclus was owned by the China Mutual Steamship Navigation Company and the Casnare by Elders and Fyffes, Ltd.)

They also reported that a lone plane spotted the 19,141-ton steamship Windsor Castle on the high seas several hundred miles west of Ireland and damaged her with a direct hit.

(This was not confirmed in London either.)

Japs Withdraw Troops At Many Points

HONG KONG, Nov. 4 (AP)—Chinese dispatches reported today that the South China province of Kwangsi, which borders on French Indo-China, virtually has been cleared of Japanese troops and that Chinese forces were striking swiftly to broaden their advantage.

One column of Chinese from Kwangsi, they said, is approaching Yamchow, near the Kwangtung seacoast, while another has reached Chennankwan, a strategic pass on the Kwangsi-Indo-China border, where fighting now is in progress.

Nanning, Kwangsi province capital from which the Japanese withdrew last week, may be only the first of a series of important cities to be given up by the invaders, it was reported.

Unconfirmed Chinese reports asserted there were indications that the Japanese, in order to shorten their lines in south China, were preparing to abandon the important treaty port of Swatow.

Many Chinese were said to be fleeing to the interior for fear Swatow may be set afire if it were abandoned by the Japanese.

Give Britain Six Months

RUGBY, England, Nov. 4.—(CP Cable)—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin declared today that "in another six months Britain will have passed Germany in aircraft, ships and guns."

(It was assumed that Mr. Bevin used the term "ships" in a very general sense, since Britain always has had a preponderance of ships over the enemy.)

Then, he said, "the ugly Nazi regime will crumble up in Hitler's hands."

He made the declaration in a speech to factory workers in which he called for further stepping up in production.

MERCHANT CRUISERS SUNK

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today the loss of the armed merchant cruisers, Laurentic and Patroclus, torpedoed and sunk by enemy action.

Wealth Shirks War Duty Says Coldwell

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—M. J. Coldwell, Dominion chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, charged here Saturday night that wealth and industry "are not doing thir share in the war effort.'

Calling for construction of industry by the Government, Mr. Coldwell said there was no equality of sacrifice in the war effort, charged that Prime Minister King had undermined democratic government in Canada and pledged the C.C.F. to "continue to fight for the common people at the coming session of Parliament."

Mr. Coldwell, who is parliamentary leader of the eight C.C.F. Federal members, spoke at a dinner meeting arranged by the Federation's Ontario division for the Federal members, six of whom were present.

"Wealth and industry are not doing thir share in the war effort." Mr. Coldwell said, charging that the Government had been forced to cancel the act limiting profit to 5 per cent on contracts let without tender because industry would not accept a single contract under these terms.

"The time has arrived when the Government should take out of private hands all industry concerned in the war effort. We have got to struggle for equality of sacrifice as nearly as that can be obtained. We propose to continue to fight this battle in this and succeeding sessions of Parliament."

Charging that Mr. King's attitude was that of the dictators, Mr. Coldwell said that the Prime Minister "perhaps more than any other man in public life has done more to undetermine and destroy the very basis of democratic government." It was dictatorial to have had Parliament sit only six days in the first six months of the war and to have summoned it last August only to dismiss it.

He said Government in Britain by big interests had fallen when Neville Chamberlain fell, and from the day when Winston Churchill took over leadership with Labor in his Cabinet, Britain's war effort took a different turn. The output of industry increased by 100 per cent in two months after the British Government passed the Emergency Powers Bill enabling it take industry out of private hands.

They will be trained in the use of this E flat type of cavalry trumpet adopted by the air force. Sounding "station duty calls" is a full time job.

Industry Rolls Reach 1,335,705 For New Mark

OTTAWA, Nov. 4 (CP)—Wartime demands on Canadian industry, which have swelled manufacturing to record levels in recent months, was reflected today in a substantial rise in industrial employment figures as reported at Oct. 1.

On that date, a record number of 1,335,705 persons were employed in industry, according to figures from 12,304 firms reporting to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the bureau said. This was an increase of 3.5 per cent or 45,175 workers over Sept. 1.

The Oct. 1 figure is 20 per cent above that of the same date a year ago. The increase in personnel during the year is estimated at 125,000 men and women, of whom 56,000 were absorbed in the iron and steel industries.

How these figures compare with industrial employment in the same stage of the first Great War, experts here are unable to say, since the present system of comprehensive statistics is a development since that war. However, it is estimated war manufacturers now are at about the same stage as they were in the third year of the last war. It also is estimated that if munitions expenditures continue at the same rate, Canada will have spent as much on war materials in eighteen months this time as she did in all of the first Great War.

Few Wage-Earners Jobless

The total number of wage-earners in August was estimated at 2,910,000 of whom 2,709,000 were employed, leaving 201,000 wage-earners unemployed. This compares with 238,000 such unemployed in July and 332,000 in August, 1939. Here "wage-earners" is used to indicate persons who have held jobs. The number of unemployed is exaggerated by the number of enlisted wage-earners who were without jobs when they enlisted.

The rise of manufacturing to unprecedented levels in the last year has been marked by a considerable change within manufacturing itself. The proportion of workers producing durable goods has risen from 396 per 1,000 to 443. There has been an increase of 32.9 per cent in employees producing durable goods, compared with a 9.3 per cent increase in those producing non-durable goods.

Employment gains between Sept. 1 and Oct. 1 this year were widespread both geographically and industrially. Seven of the nine provinces showed substantial improvement, while New Brunswick and Manitoba showed moderate losses. Quebec had a gain of 4.7 per cent or 18,204 persons and Ontario 4.4 per cent or 23,976 persons. The Maritimes as a whole had a gain of 1,169 in industrial employment, the prairies 1,401 and British Columbia 909 during September.

In the Maritimes employment was higher than at any time since the latter part of 1937, in the prairies since 1931, while in Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia employment was the highest in the twenty years in which statistics have been recorded.

German People Infected With Defeatism

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(CP), — A "dead listlessness" akin to that which caused the collapse of France is spreading through the German people like a plague, infecting an increasing number of her people with a defeatism, Richard O. Boyer, former Berlin correspondent for the New York newspaper "P.M.," declared here last night.

"If the contagion is not halted, Germany itself, even in victory, may go the way of France," he said in an address broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in the series, "Let's Face the Facts."

Mr. Boyer added, however, that this spirit had not yet infected the army, the Nazi Party or the Hitler Youth to any great degree. "It is doubtful if it ever will until there is a military setback," he said.

Significantly, the fall of France brought no vociferous celebration in Germany. Instead, the people of Munich, where Boyer was at the time, were "unmistakably sad, quiet and weary."

During July the word was spread by German officials that the war against England would be over in three weeks. The phrase became almost a slogan, but proved a boomerang as the weeks slipped by. The same officials two months later were saying one had to remember they were fighting the world's strongest Empire and such a foe could not be reduced without a struggle. "For the first time many Germans began to feel that Hitler had slipped up," Mr. Boyer said.

"Every day of English resistance causes more German civilians to say with a sort of long-suffering passive despair, 'Ach, it will never be over. We shall have another terrible winter. No food, no heat and bombings every night'."

The gloominess of the German civilian population was but one of many surprises in a country so hermetically sealed from the rest of the world that what was common knowledge there was unknown here, he continued.

"I found, for example, that while the rest of the world regards Russia and Germany as allied, it is generally taken for granted in Nazi circles that Germany will invade Russia in 1941," he said.

Nazi officials in "off-the-record but scarcely secret" conversations said the Soviet Union would either deliver the Ukraine, the Baku oil regions and the former Baltic States or Germany would seize them if and when she conquers or makes peace with Britain.

"Despite the official Nazi Party line that war between the United States and Germany is unnecessary, I found that high German officials believe that it is inevitable and the only question is when and where," he said.

United States Returns Hun Prisoner Who Fled Internee Camp Months Ago

PORT FRANCES, Nov. 4 — (CP) —Emanuel Fischer, who escaped from a North-western Ontario internment camp and was captured in the United States on August 23, yesterday was handed over to Canadian authorities by the United States immigration officials.

Following lengthy inquiry, the U.S. Immigration Department decided to deport Fischer, who claimed to be a Spanish national. He was brought to Canada as a war prisoner.

Fischer, seaman of German origin, will be returned to the internment camp to stand trial for escaping. When brought here yesterday he was placed in the custody of Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable Robertson.

Fischer made his way from the camp to the border, and escaped detection until he reached Virginia, Minn., about 100 miles below the border, where he was taken into custody by immigration officials, and held for investigation and decision of the Immigration Department at Washington.

Seventeen prisoners have escaped from Canadian internment camps, but with the return of Fischer, all have been accounted for. One of them, Ernest Nueller, was shot and killed by a guard after he broke away from a North-western Ontario camp.

A Muddled Situation

There are curious forces at work in the Presidential election in United States. There are Democrats who are openly working for the election of Willkie, the Republican candidate; they are spending their good money buying large space in newspapers to defeat Roosevelt. Then there are Republicans who are out-and-out for Roosevelt, and they are making their feelings known as plainly as can be. So the situation is muddled.

Fascist and Communist organizations in United States are supporting Willkie, and they are openly desirous of bringing about the downfall of President Roosevelt. They do not like the way in which the President has spoken about the dictators of Europe; they have not forgotten what he said about Mussolini sticking a knife in a neighbor's back when Italy entered the war. Had Roosevelt not said the things which needed saying he might have had more people voting for him.

There is no possible reason for saying that Wendell Willkie has made an open bid or even a mild gesture for the votes of the Fascists or Communists, and they have no occasion to believe that the election of Willkie would do anything to better their peculiar position.

But whether he desires it or not they will be voting for him because they want Roosevelt out of the way. Whether their preference for Willkie will turn others away from him we do not know. We have no vote in this contest, but if such were the case it would be cast for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

When Newspapers Quarrel

There are three daily papers in Toronto, and two of them have been dealing with the Toronto Star because that paper was the first to secure a list of the names of men lost on the "Bras d'Or." The other papers said such information should be given out simultaneously to all papers by the Department at Ottawa. There had been a leak some place and the Star had reporters around looking for information, photographs and stories at the homes where bereavement had come before the bereaved folk had been made aware of their loss by announcement direct from the Government.

After reading all the protests and the explanations which came from the Navy Minister at Ottawa we are quite certain the Star was in on a leak at Ottawa. Through a loose end some place or other it managed to beat the gun.

Those who were in newspaper offices during the last war, and especially in cities where there were two papers (and that was quite common then) can recall if they wish the methods used then to secure information regarding where those dreaded yellow slips had been delivered by the telegraph companies. It was just a case of using whatever wits the newspaper workers happened to possess. We know of places where a boy with a bicycle was hired to follow the lad carrying messages from the telegraph office. Every place where a message was delivered was noted and reported to the editor. It was then checked to see if a soldier had enlisted from that home.

There were other places where a list of duplicates was left in certain offices where a knowing and friendly reporter could drop in and take a look without interruption. We do not know whether all the fine ethics of the profession were always observed in those highly competitive days. Apparently the Star stepped in out of turn in the recent case and secured the list first or else conveniently ignored the release time attached. But when it comes to one newspaper upbraiding another for its manners or lack of them, it must cause a broad smile to come to the face of those who have been long in the business.

He Was There Three Hours

George Rowe, 48, was taken to a hospital in London, Ont., because he had been seriously injured while working on a farm a short distance from the city. Not that he was the first person to be injured on a farm, because farm injuries are frequent, but it took so long to find that he had been injured.

Rowe had taken a tractor out to plow on some rolling land, and he was working some distance from the house or barn, and on a piece of land which was removed from road or highway. In making a turn on an end which tilted rather sharply the tractor topped over and Rowe was pinned under it. It was stated he had a broken leg, possibly a fractured arm and some broken ribs. He also suffered from shock because he was under the tractor for possibly three hours. There was no person to whom he could call and there would be nothing he could do for himself. It was only when he did not return in time for the evening meal that a search was made for him, and action taken to release him. It was necessary to take a heavy towing truck over the plowed ground in order to raise the tractor. He had been pinned there for three hours.

So many people have the belief that working on a farm is safe. Truth is it is not because there is just as much chance of getting injured there as elsewhere. An accident on the highway generally receives immediate attention because it is noticed at once, but George Rowe, working on a quiet spot on a farm, had an accident of major proportions and nothing was known of it until he did not turn up in time for supper.

It's Only a Game

The Toronto Telegram raises a question which needs raising, and it has to do with football. The coach of a college team is judged by his ability to produce a winning team, and in turn he seeks to pass on to the players the idea that winning the game is the only thing that matters. Therefore it is apt to become brutally rough. That in brief is the contention, and it is a point which some might fear to discuss because readers in some quarters might murmur "sissy," or some such thing.

The Telegram says there are men walking the streets of Toronto, engaged in business there, who never will recover from the injuries they received playing football. There is no suggestion that the game be condemned or outlawed. "It is urged," says the Telegram, "that the game be saved by eliminating the brutality that is too often a feature because the coaches have taught the players that the only thing which counts is to win at any cost."

We can recall readily enough a strapping big chap who was in this office only a few days ago. It was raining and when he left he seemed to be having trouble putting on his coat. He explained his right arm seemed in the way when getting it into the sleeve; the arm could come up only a short distance, and he couldn't do any lifting with it. He used to play a good deal of Rugby.

It's a good game, but we agree that the Telegram is quite right in reminding players and coaches and audiences that after all it is only a game and should be taught and played as such. The fate of nations does not depend on the outcome.

Living On $60 a Month

The secretary of the Y.W.C.A. at Ottawa is in a position to know the conditions under which a number of young ladies live and work in that city. Probably many of them talk to her; many of them would probably be seeking a decent place in which to live at a price they could afford to pay.

The Ottawa secretary says that within recent times there have been three thousand young ladies arriving in Ottawa to work in government departments for $60 per month. Most of them had never been away from home before, and they had come from smaller centres. Possibly few of them have ever had to pay their own way; they lived at home and would possibly have it quite easy that way. The idea of self-finance was unknown to most of them.

We learn that they regarded $60 per month as quite a good deal of money and it had never occurred to them that they could not get along on that amount. It amounts to just about $14 per week. Ottawa was never a cheap place in which to stay during a session, but this year with the city flooded with people drawn there by the war work, it is worse, and we doubt if $60 per month would cover the problem of decent living even on a rather modest scale.

The amount of money which a person receives is, after all, only relative to that which it is necessary to spend. There are plenty of well-established homes in the land where at the time of their foundation some years ago the man of the house would be making no more than $60 per month. But it was possible to rent a house for $12 a month, buy coal for $6.50 per ton, milk for five cents a quart and bread for five cents a loaf. There was no family car to pay for or support, nor was it considered necessary to spend money on entertainment each week. Life was simple and wants were few and a little money served the purpose.

Today that has changed entirely. We receive more and we have to spend more. So it may be that a girl needs as much to support herself in Ottawa today as her father and mother had when they began housekeeping.

He'd Banish Old Cars

Chief of Police Bagnall of Chatham had something to say about old cars on the road when he addressed a meeting of the directors of the Kent Motor Club. When a car had been used over a certain number of years the Chief believed it should be inspected before a permit was given to drive it again. Such examination, he believed, would to a large extent eliminate danger which exists to all motorists in the operation of such vehicles.

Possibly the Chatham man has had occasion to do considerable observation, and he may have found his experience indicated that it was these old cars which had been causing the trouble. We have seen a number of them in various parts of the province, and they do look at times as though they were miserably unsafe.

But it does not seem to work out that way in actual operation. The new cars, equipped with everything under the sun in the way of good tires, good lights, good brakes, good engines and good bodies, do the most amazing things in the hands of the people who drive them. They smash into each other; they take to the shoulder of the road, and then to the ditch; they snap off poles and go head-first into culverts, and we read frequently where they turn over two or three times before coming to rest with their wheels in the air.

And from these excellent cars they remove dead people and injured people. If the cars were examined mechanically it would be pronounced they were in first-class condition, but they do not give first-class results according to the accident records. We have a feeling that the man who drives the car has a great deal more to do with it rather than the car itself.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Yes, that was a Greece spot you noticed on the Italian tablecloth.

Hitler is going to find it hard going to pick a presidential candidate in United States who favors him.

Lord Chatfield urges that violent blows be struck at Italy, and so far we haven't heard a voice raised in opposition.

Call has gone out for an investigation into the price of butter. It is perhaps hard for some people to understand that we would all be better off if we were paying 40 cents per pound for our butter.

Again we read that the German people are sick of the war. Blah! They have been talking and planning of the beauty of war for years. If they are sick of it then let them quit it.

The proposal is made to drain Steep Rock Lake in Northern Ontario in order to get at a large body of iron ore. And that is something which has not been largely secured in Canada so far. Most of the known iron ore deposits are low grade, and as a result we have imported ore. The industry in the east has for years received its supply from the Wabana property off the shores of Newfoundland.

The owner of a Chow dog in Welland was assessed $420 because his dog had bitten a little girl in the face. These dogs originated in China, and there they were fattened and considered a table delicacy.

FOGGY

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I try to read the news each day, of how the world goes on its way, about the plans the nations have, for putting on tax bills and salve, about the soaking of the rich, to keep the kingdom from the ditch.

¶ I try to read like how I should, to separate bad plans from good, to find if there be truth or whey, in all the statesmen have to say; I read their plans, some thin, some stout, so I'll know what it's all about.

¶ At times I have to halt and stop, my power to grasp it seems to drop, they speak of billions with such ease, that I begin to shake and wheeze; the wheels within my dome won't move, for something clogs the mental groove.

¶ It is the humble life I've led, that spoils the big things now being said, for dollar bills is all I've seen, and my supply is rather lean. I worked out sums in days at school, and learned each simple little rule; of coins that people took and spent, we reckoned to the last red cent.

¶ We never worked in billions then, when I toiled with the little men, the sums on which we used to pore, were dealings at some corner store. That's why I'm handicapped today, in reading what the statesmen say—they speak of billions at full steam, and I don't know just what they mean.

US May Dwindle As Fewer Babies Are Being Born

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

WASHINGTON. — Although this year's eligible voters in the U.S. are 5,391,000 more numerous than they were in 1936 it doesn't follow that there's been a corresponding population increase. On the contrary, U.S. population growth is dwindling rapidly. Experts predict that, within a few years, it will be stationary.

Chas. P. Stewart

That there's a trend in that direction is proved, in fact, by the increase in the number of voters. There are more of them because Americans, on an average, are older than they were not long ago. Not as many babies are born in the United States now as there used to be. Consequently there's a shrinkage in the number under the age of 21. Those over 21 haven't had time to start dying off proportionately yet. When the extreme oldsters begin dying it'll reduce the congestion. Meanwhile there is all those extra voters.

This dope is the census bureau's, therefore official.

The federal public health service is partly responsible for the situation. It doesn't let us die as early as we used to. It brags frequently that its management steadily is making us live longer and longer. Personally, I don't understand what good it does. When an individual falls sick he has a natural instinct to get over it, so he calls in a doctor. The doc is professionally bound to do the best he can for his patient. I agree to that all right. I also think the medicos are entitled to credit for relieving human suffering. But of what benefit is it to lengthen our race's life span, generally speaking? Ultimately we all die anyway. Why prolong the agony?—except, of course, in individual cases?

NOT CONVINCING

I WAS so curious about this that I once called in at the U.S. public health service's offices and asked Dr. Hugh S. Cumming (then surgeon-general) to explain the matter. Darned if he could do it satisfactorily. He argued, indeed, that there's an economic advantage in keeping the right kind of people alive as long as possible, but it wasn't convincing.

The truth remains that the public health service has succeeded in piling up the proportion of old folk.

But it hasn't succeeded in inducing us to have more babies. Quite the reverse. We have, relatively, fewer and fewer of 'em.

It follows that, as people, we're getting steadily older and older.

The U.S. agriculture department's economics bureau doesn't even indorse Dr. Cumming's thesis that there's an economic benefit in letting us get older. Its contention is that we must grow in population in order to prosper. It sounds reasonable. Growing countries are the prosperous ones. The static nations have to skimp like fury even to stay static. Under-populated continents' inhabitants go pioneering and thrive and multiply. Over-populated ones haven't enough to go around and fight for bare subsistence.

True, the public health service can reason that, on that theory, we don't want to become over-populated—let's die in moderation and also be moderate with babies.

The agriculture economics bureau's come-back is that the health service won't let us die fast enough, that we haven't reached a point at which we ought to stop multiplying, and that the health service can't seem to make us multiply adequately.

HINT FROM AVIATION

AVIATION hints at a solution of the problem of the baby shortage. Census figures show that babies are fewest in our big urban industrial centres; that the output is at its maximum out in the sticks—in little burgs and rurally.

Well, in wartime big urban centres are particularly susceptible to bombing operations by hostile aircraft.

Hence there's a strong tendency to scatter our huge industrial plants away from concentrated areas out into hamlets here and there.

Under these comparatively rural conditions maybe the plants' workers will have larger families, thus giving the population growth that the agriculture economics division hollers for.

Co-operative study by the census bureau, the public health service, the agriculture department and our aviation experts is called for.

NEUTRALITY IN TRADE

WEARING the button of our favorite nominee, we went into a one-man haberdashery on Lexington Avenue to buy a pair of black socks. The proprietor got them for us, and then suggested that we buy a tie to match our button. You may have seen these ties; they have sober backgrounds with the name of Roosevelt or Willkie forming diagonal stripes. We declined, but asked what variety he sold more of. "About equal," he said. "I don't try to push them except when a man comes in wearing a button. Then I try to sell him his favorite. It don't make any difference to me. In this business, it don't pay to be impartial either way."—The New Yorker.

• The Silly Things Germans Believe

THE following is an excerpt from a letter from Great Britain dated September 26th, 1940, which has reached this office through Dr. E. Munzer of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia, who vouches for the reliability of the writer. As a striking example of the mental attitude of the Nazi youth you might like to reproduce the letter in your publication.

"Recently a German airman who has been shot down over Dover asked where he was. He was told that he was a prisoner of war and in England. Then he said: 'Well, after all I am the first plane brought down by the English.' He refused to believe that he probably was the 1500th or 1600th or even more. He was 17 years old and flew for the first time to England. Another one who had his leg to be taken away asked when he was carried into the operating theatre whether they could do it without an anaesthetic. They said it was quite impossible and asked why he asked for it. He answered: 'Because I want to suffer for Adolf Hitler.' I think it is heart-breaking how this fervent longing for faith and devotion is mislead and abused by the criminal claim of the evil. Two others implored the nurses not to put them into the operating theatre because they were told the English would torture them there. One of them even produced a photo of his mother in the hope that they would torture him less. His comrades told him to do so. All of them are about 17 or 18 years old, that means they were 9 or 10 years old when Hitler came into power. Again another one who has been picked up by an English mine-sweeper was asked why the German planes dive and machine-gun even the rescue-parties though they must realize they were their own people the British came to rescue. 'Because we are too short of pilots,' was the reply which seems, at least rather satisfactory. But how will these boys ever stand the disillusion, how will they survive it. And what a task for the Church to send missionaries in order to christianize all these people again as Bonifatius went centuries ago!"

• Queer Stories of Our Nazi Guests

THERE are some queer stories going around about some German prisoners in our midst, which seem to point to a Nazi plan that has been operative for years,—a system that may relate to a preparation for the day when Germany hopes to take over Canada.

A locomotive engineer living in Sudbury, is said to have told friends that he was saluted by name by a prisoner when passing a certain point on the Algoma Eastern Railway which operates from Sudbury to Manitoulin Island. It is alleged that the engineer recognized the prisoner as an acquaintances who had worked at the Frood Mine of the International Nickel Company "two or three years ago."

Another incident,—and possibly a more significant one,—concerns a German who is alleged to have been recognized as a guide in Germany by a local visitor to that country a few years ago. The German was wearing the uniform of the Royal Canadian Air Force when spotted by a Canadian girl who claimed that she had been in a party of tourists which had been shown around a part of Germany. The authorities were told about the man, and it is said doubted the story till the girl picked out the erstwhile guide in a company of flyers.

Then comes a report of a couple of Ridley College (Toronto) students who are now prisoners in the concentration camp nearest to the Soo.

These are samples of the stories current in this district about our unwilling guests. It would seem desirable to pay a little special attention to young men who for years deliberately abused the hospitality of this country to further the plans of the Hitler gang.

How many of the men in our internment camps have a Canadian record?

In the underworld there are scouts and "finger men" who do the preliminary work in the preparation for a burglary or a murder. The law holds them equally guilty with the men who commit the crime that follows. The "scouts" in the internment camps are probably their most dangerous occupants.—Sault Star.

• Dies Committee Has Nazi Secrets

(Might bring war, writes Dorothy Thompson, in the New York Herald Tribune.)

FOR some reason unknown to this column, the Dies Committee has not made public information in its possession that is more sensational than anything since the Zimmerman note, information which implicates the German Embassy and the German consular service, the Trans-ocean News Service, headed by Manfred Zapp; the German railroads Information Office, and no doubt, many other agencies in the most flagrant intervention in American internal affairs. This information, for instance, reveals that the fourth German White Book was timed, on the advice of Zapp, to influence the Illinois primaries against President Roosevelt. It further reveals, from letters on the stationery of the German Embassy, that Adrian Arcand, the Canadian fascist leader, and his French-language newspaper have been financed by Germany, with Manfred Zapp, in New York, as the pay-off, and that the North German Lloyd office in Montreal was a propaganda and espionage center, with the ticket clerk as the propaganda center and the cell member.

The Dies Committee also knows that intelligence agents of the Rome-Berlin Axis have met in New York at the home of the director of the German Railroads Information Office and that the letters to German consuls from at least one editor of a German language newspaper close with "Heil Hitler" express devotion to the cause and ask for free news service from Zapp.

One interpretation placed upon the withholding of the information is that the Department of States does not desire the severance of diplomatice relations with Germany, which would be almost inevitable if the information came out officially.

BEAUTY OF GERMAN RULE

FOLLOWING Mr. Churchill's message of good cheer to the Czech people, on the occasion of the second anniversary of the Munich Agreement, the Czecho-Slovak National Committee have issued a booklet entitled "German Cultural Oppression in Czecho-Slovakia." It presents a grim picture of the state of that country's culture scarcely a year after the German entry into Prague. The universities and institutions of higher education are closed, the students imprisoned, tortured, murdered, the professors subject to provocations and in prison, scientific collections destroyed or taken away, works of art stolen and scattered, artistic monuments demolished, scientific and literary libraries closed, the works of the greatest poets and novelists forbidden by the censorship, all free scientific investigation rendered impossible, all contact with intellectual circles of other countries prohibited.—London Times.

French People Urged To Study English

ST. JEROME, Que., Nov. 4 (Special)—The English language was described by Premier Adelard Godbout today as "our most valuable arm in the competitive world of today."

Addressing a by-election rally on behalf of Hon. Hector Perrier, K.C., Provincial Secretary, the Premier of Quebec delivered a vigorous appeal on behalf of educational reform and declared that the people of Quebec must learn the English tongue or face "suicide."

It was a non-political speech and it served as an emphatic reply to former Premier Maurice Duplessis who, in a recent speech, implied that educational reform in the Province such as the Godbout Government intended to pursue was a "slur on the clergy of the Province."

(Mr. Duplessis also told a Union Nationale rally last Monday that "we appreciate the necessity of knowing English, but it is also the duty of a conscientious Prime Minister to tell English-speaking residents to talk French.")

"When we speak of educational reforms to come, we think, too, of facilities to be made immediately more available for the learning of English," said Premier Godbout. "I know my language (French) as well as Duplessis, maybe better, and I am sure I love it better. Let us never lose sight of the fact that tomorrow our children will have to compete with 8,000,000 people who don't know our tongue, and with the United States and the entire British Empire.

"Why attack people who talk education?" asked the Premier. "We, as fathers, have the right to see that our children are made fit to compete with others. So far as I'm concerned I see nothing delicate in the question, nothing that should not be brought right out into the open."

Since his Government has promised to revitalize education, the Premier continued, he had received letters from all parts of the Province congratulating him.

"And I am doubly pleased to tell you," he added, "that the clergy itself is in the forefront of those who realize the imperative need for bringing our education system into line with modern requirements.

"Those who profess to be against the learning of English are doing no other thing than looking to the suicide of a people. We are not hewers of wood and drawers of water and it would only be for people such as that that the learning of English would be an unimportant matter.

The Premier added that the principal arm in competition was a knowledge of the language of the majority. In the face of that he wondered why some sought to make it a crime for him to advocate the learning of English.

"I shall not take lessons in patriotism from people like Maurice Duplessis," he insisted. "I love my people enough to tell them the truth concerning the forces that made them what they are today. I will not retract a word of what I have said."

GREECE, with an area about that of New York state but only 7,196,900 population (a little less than that of New York City alone), is unfortunately situated. For centuries it has been a bloody road trod by Europeans invading the Near East or by Near Eastern peoples invading Europe.

Now it is the path over which the Italian armies hope to march into Near Eastern oil fields. Presumably the Italians hope also to establish bases for attacks on the Nile delta region in Egypt and the British air and naval bases there.

The Italians pushed off from Albania, which they took over in April, 1939. Mountain valleys which run through both countries furnished easy passage.

To get to the British oil fields in Mesopotamia, the Italians would have to go through Turkey. Once in Greece, they have their choice of a land route, via the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, or hopping across the islands of the Aegean Sea.

The Dardanelles and Bosphorus are Russia's only outlet from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean.

Occupying Greece would help secure the Axis flank against any later attack by Russia.

Greece won its independence from Turkey in 1829 and became a kingdom guaranteed by England, France and Russia. The monarchy was overthrown in 1925, but in 1935 the people voted to bring King George II. back again. Gen. John Metaxas is Premier. He has tried to set up a Fascist state.

Italian Torpedo-Carrying Plane Kills 3 Officers, 27 Men On British Cruiser

LONDON, Nov. 4 — (CP). — The Admiralty announced last night that three officers and twenty-seven ratings were killed and thirty-three wounded on the 9,400-ton cruiser Liverpool when it was attacked more than two weeks ago in the Mediterranean by an Italian torpedo-carrying plane.

An Admiralty bulletin said Rear-Admiral E. J. G. Mackinnon, 60, holder of the Distinguished Service Order from the last war, was missing, but gave no details concerning his ship or its operations.

An Admiralty casualty list included the names of two officers of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve and a cook of th Royal Canadian Navy. These casualties resulted from "the various hazards of war and not connected with any particular operation or ship," the Admiralty said.

Canadian casualties were:

Temporary Acting Sub-Lieut. F. S. Ker, of Hamilton, Ont., killed.

Temporary Acting Sub-Lieut. P. D. Hincks, missing.

Cook Robert Huot, killed.

The list contained 357 names, including three casualties of the Royal Australian Navy and twenty-five Royal Marines. There were 141 killed, 43 missing, 102 wounded, 11 died of wounds, and 60 missing presumed killed.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

CHAPTER ONE

WIPING HER feet on the door mat with mechanical precision, Lona Ackerman wished fervently that Mrs. Peterman might not observe her entrance. "Make her be in the kitchen.... Don't let her see me..... Make her be in the kitchen," she kept repeating over and over to herself in a childish refrain as she opened the door cautiously, and tip-toed through the hall to the stairs. Her heart thumping with much apprehension, as if she had just robbed a bank, she started up, taking the steps one at a time, trying desperately to be quiet.

Half way up she paused and, clinging to the bannister, listened intently. Voices were coming down from above. A man's tones, low and rumbling, and a woman's, high pitched and querulous. Lona's spirits sank. Mrs. Peterman was in the upstairs hall! Interviewing a new boarder, probably. And she'd have to pass them to reach her room. No getting out of it now, unless she went back down the stairs and out into the street again. The eternal street she had been walking all day! The sickening, grinding pavement. No, she couldn't do that. She couldn't go back out there! Even facing Mrs. Peterman was preferable to that.

Straightening her slight figure resolutely, she marched on up the stairs, her shoulders flinging themselves back defiantly, her brown hair making a halo about her set young face. After all, she had done nothing wrong—as yet! She was no criminal to be sneaking about avoiding people. The worst Mrs. Peterman could do was to put her out for not paying her rent. Put her out on the street again . . .

"Don't let her speak to me . . . Make her not speak to me . . ." her mind kept saying over and over again as she trod on each step. It was odd the way things had been saying themselves like that inside her head all day. Whenever she tried to plan, there seemed to spring up a little refrain, quite independent of what she wanted to be thinking. Perhaps it was the result of tramping so much lately, without eating any lunches. And then last night she had had no supper, had been afraid to come downstairs here at the boarding house, afraid to face Mrs. Peterman. She winced at the thought of the two weeks the woman had given her the last time she had been unable to pay her board. Two weeks that had been up yesterday.

At the top of the stairs, she stopped suddenly, and waited. Standing in the hall were Mrs. Peterman and a strange man. In one hand the woman carried a bunch of keys, and her face lighted up when she saw Lona.

"I've been looking for you, Miss Ackerman," she said, in her cracked, big city voice. "This gentleman here is hunting a room, and since you told me you were thinking of—ah—of moving, I took him in to see yours." She jingled her keys and peered at Lona through the gloom of the hall. Then she turned to the young man.

"This is the young lady I've been telling you about," she said, significantly. "If you don't mind going down to the parlor and waiting, I'll sort of—talk things over with her." She beamed on him.

For a moment he looked at Lona doubtfully. He was a tall young fellow, with brown eyes that made Lona remember, illogically, the brown spaniel she had once owned. The hand that held his hat was hard looking, and marked with work. She saw that with a thrill of envy. Work! What wouldn't she give to be able to stretch out her own white hands and match callus for callus! Work!

"I hate to hurry the young lady." The man looked from her to the landlady doubtfully. But Mrs. Peterman would have none of his objections.

"The parlor's the room to the right," she directed. "I'll be down in a few minutes. I'm sure you won't mind waiting."

When he had gone, she turned to Lona. "Well, dearie, you see how it is," she began.

"Yes, I see how it is." Lona was trying desperately, now that the moment had come, to keep her shoulders straight, her chin up. "I'll go and start packing," she said, brushing past Mrs. Peterman and into her room door. "It won't take me long. You can tell your—prospect I've decided to move." She even managed a crooked smile.

"Oh, listen here now, dearie!" Mrs. Peterman followed her and stood in the doorway jingling her keys. "You mustn't take it like that. I hate to see you go, but I—it seems to me it would be worse for me to let you stay on. All you have to do is hunt up a Y.W.C.A. They take care of girls like you, and it won't cost you a cent. If I let you hang on here you'll be pilin' up room rent you can't pay, goin' in debt . . . It's really for your own good."

She broke off and watched Lona as she doggedly pulled her pitifully few belongings from the drawers of the rickety dresser and threw them into her battered suitcase. When the girl did not answer she went on again, uneasily.

"I'm a widow and I got to look out for myself. You understand that, don't you? You can't blame me. All you got to do is hunt up a 'Y.' They'll see you're taken care of...."

Lona picked up the picture of her mother from the dresser top, closed its folder carefully, and thrust it into the suitcase. . . . Why didn't the woman go? . . . Why did she stand there talking? . . . Why didn't she go? . . . The refrain was running through her mind again.

"I'll forget what you owe me. Don't worry about that. And I'd like you to stay on. But I'm a poor widow, and you can't blame me. When you're through with your packin' come down and I'll give you your supper. It's a little early, but come to the kitchen. If you want me to, I'll look up the nearest 'Y' in the phone book."

"Don't bother," Lona said, tonelessly. "I'll get along." Then, with a sudden overwhelming relief, "There's the phone ringing. You'd better go . . ."

When she was rid of her at last, Lona shut the door and sat down wearily on the bed. A sudden impulse to bury her head in the pillows and refuse to move for anyone seized her. The sense of unreality that had been haunting her for the past few weeks became doubly vivid. This couldn't be she, this penniless girl who was being driven out into the street. . . . This terrible thing couldn't be happening to her! It must be a dream, a nightmare from which she would wake soon to find herself back in her old job at the office. All this couldn't be real. Life couldn't be treating her like this!

Sitting there on the bed, she looked about her at the shabby little room that had been her home these last few years. She had never felt any real liking for it. It was ugly and drab, the furniture was worn and old, the rug was dingy. But it was her home. And she was leaving it! Was being put out by that garrulous drab of a landlady and that brown-eyed man in the parlor. . . . "It can't be true . . ."

BOTH COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL SQUADS ARE BEATEN BY OSHAWA

Forward Passes By Winners Are Big Factor

OSHAWA, Nov. 4. — After trying in vain for almost a decade, Oshawa Collegiate and Vocational Institute senior rugby team finally thwarted their perennial junx and downed Peterborough C. I. Seniors 8-1 on Saturday afternoon here before a large turnout of students and citizen fans. A clear-cut 13-0 shutout by the heavier O.C.V.I. junior team in the morning game made it a double victory for the homesters over their Lift Lock City rivals.

Fumbles caused most of the changes in possession in the first quarter with Peterborough scoring the first point of the game and what proved an orphan tally, when Scriver's attempted placement missed the posts but went to the dead line. A long pass, Scriver to Jones, was the big play in advancing the ball to Oshawa territory. Just before the initial quarter ended, Daniels tossed a neat forward to Krantb and he galloped the remaining stanza for the only touchdown of the game. Daniels converted to make it 6-1.

The remainder of the game was a ding-dong grid battle with both teams giving everything they had. Brilliant tackling by the Oshawa defensive forces offset Peterborough's desperate attacks. Ackford and Daniels continued their punting duel, with the O.C.V.I. booter having an edge. Forward passes were intercepted both teams and over-anxious tacklers often failed to give the receiver sufficient yards. Oshawa managed to score two more single points, Daniels booting the ball more than sixty yards for the last tally. Scriver, Ackford and Hamilton were the pick of the P.C.I. team, while Daniels' booting was the big factor in Oshawa's win, plus bucks by Stasinski and the work of Buchanan, Krantz, and McLaughlin.

The teams:

Peterborough C. I. — Quarter, Routley; flying wing, Beatty; halves Scriver, Ackford and Hamilton; snap, Marshall; insides, Graham and Woodgate; middles, Matthews and Craig; outsides, Jones and Geraghty; subs., Cuppy, Lillico, Kay, Fowler, Burns, Sproule, Moull.

Oshawa C. V. I.—Quarter, Daniels; flying wing, Stasinski; halves, McLaughlin, Buchanan and Krantz; snap, Barton; insides, Varcoe and Wootten; middles, Davies and Andrews; utsides, Curtin and O'Brien; subs., Knowles, McTavish, Scott, Lean, Sloan, Skinner, Tomolak, Simons.

The Junior Game.

Oshawa's junior victory was more decisive, the homesters taking full advantage of a definite margin in weight. Oshawa broke into the scoring in the second quarter and behind the steady kicking of Andison, a Peterborough fumble was recovered by Tomolak and Andison hurled a forward pass to Cameron, for a touchdown which Rundle converted. Matthews carried the mail for the visitors, but an intercepted pass by Skinner spoiled a Peterborough attack. Oshawa's forward passing attack sparkled in the second quarter and they dominated the play. A fake placement saw another forward pass play completed for a touchdown, Rundle to Chute.

Matthews, Crowe and Shadgett were Peterborough's best, but they never seriously threatened. Simons, Skiner, Andison, Tomolak and Cameron were the pick of a well-balanced Oshawa team.

The teams:

P. C. I. — Quarter, Matthews; flying wing, Crowe; halves, Frank, Dewart and Shadgett; snap, Graham; insides, Oatrum and Menzies; middles, Allen and Wade; outsides, Carpenter and Richardson; subs., Diplock, Scott, Smith, Matias, Carter, Batley, Morrow, Cuthbert.

Oshawa C. V. I. — Quarter, Andison; flying wing, Rundle; halves, Lindsay, Cameron and Skinner; snap, Sledziewski; insides, Sloan and Disney; middles, Fetterley and Tomolak; outsides, Simons and Chute; subs., Laks, McNab, Fairhart, Parks, Reed, Davies and Smith.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

Those inexplicable Toronto Argos done me wrong Saturday. Instead of galloping home with a comfortable lead over Hamilton Tigers, Lou Hayman's Oarsmen folded up like a concertina and were beaten 5 to 0, thus spoiling a perfect score for the Friday prophet. The other three games all went according to pattern but the Argos' nose dive knocked the correct percentage down to .750. It must be admitted that the Hamilton win was an upset. The Tigers were expected to outkick Argos and they did. The Toronto gang were supposed, however, to offset that superior booting by their ability to carry the ball and to cash in on forward passes. Tigers produced enough booting to pile up five points while the Argos' attack bogged down completely and they were unable to gain much yardage in paydirt territory either through or around the front line or on forward tosses. The win keeps Tigers in the running for a playoff berth, although they have to beat Rough Riders to get anywhere.

Alex Ponton's Balmy Beachers are beginning to attract attention as the most consistent club in Eastern football. The Balmies defeated Camp Borden in convincing style by 14 to 1 on Saturday, piling up their fifth straight victory. Orfuns' Don Crowe had a big hand in the win. He was on the outside of many extension runs that piled up big yardage gains for the Beachers and in addition he hurled a 23-yard touchdown pass to Drinkwater and did his share of the Beach kicking as well. Beaches are strong defensively with a forward wall that is tough to throw back and that has been doing some of the best tackling seen in the east this season. With a collection of fast-moving backs always carrying a threat working behind such a line the Bammies are steadily improving and no less an authority than Ab Box picks them to make all kinds of trouble for the Big Four champions when the playoff date arrives.

The other games Saturday went as predicted although Ottawa Rough Riders had a much tougher time beating the Montrealers than most of the experts expected. Trimble's big and powerful squad only won by 7 to 4 and six of their points were the result of an 85-yard dash for a touchdown by Andy Tommy who got into the clear on an extension run and was untouched as he sped down the field. Outside of that one major score, Riders had nothing on the Montrealers and in the last period could not work the ball out of their own territory. They were lucky indeed under the circumstances to have held the Hughes gang to two singles in that final fifteen minutes, for Montreal had them fighting with their backs to the wall all the way. In the other big game of the day, the prediction that Sarnia would show too much speed and power over Hamilton Alerts was verified when the Artillerymen won by 13 points to one.

Collegiate Senior Season Over

Peterborough Collegiate senior football squad finished the leanest season a Collegiate squad has had in many years Saturday at Oshawa when they were defeated after a hard fight 8 to 1 by the Oshawa Collegiate outfit whom they had beaten in the first game of the campaign. The Peterborough youngsters who started the year with but two or three regulars left from the 1939 team only won one game, a victory over Oshawa here. They were beaten twice by Bowmanville, the group winners and wound up with Saturday's loss in the Motor City. The young squad gave the best they had and Coach Bamforth made the best possible use of the material at hand but it has been just one of those years when it was impossible to get rolling. Russ Scriver has been the driving force for Collegiate all season, aided by Hamilton and Ackford in particular, and the boys deserve credit for a game fight against odds.

Peterborough hockey players and fans interested in the promotion of the winter pastime here are asked to look out for an announcement possibly tomorrow of an important meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club, likely to be called for Thursday of this week to get plans underway for the season. Definite arrangements had not been made when the column was written but those interested are asked to be on the qui vive for the notice and to attend the meeting if at all possible. It is time that the preliminary work of preparing for what it is hoped will be a most successful season was begun. The Petes have lost Don Crowe, Drake Jopling and Don Coughlin of last season's champions and the question of replacements, especially of finding reinforcements for the vacant defence positions will be to the fore.

A good start was made Saturday night to get the basketball season under way at the Y.M.C.A. when the House League was organized. Four teams, who have not been given names yet were organized with Joe Stewart, Bill Ferguson, Ken Gillespie and Sam Rogow selected as captains. The available players have been divided among the four and it is expected there will be some lively competition between now and the end of the year for the House championship and possession of the Dominion Life trophy. The players had a practice game or two Saturday night and are all set to go this coming Saturday evening when the opening doubleheader will be staged. The league was a success last year, seasoning a large number of players who gave a good account of themselves in the City League later on.

Performing Her Specialty

Here's the way Luverne Wise, 18, boots a point after touchdown for her team, the undefeated Atmore, Ala., high school eleven. She's a senior and this is her second season on the 17-player squad. Red Vickrey, the team's star back who has scored 111 points, held the ball for her. She has scored two points by placements and has passed for two others. She doesn't play the rough part of the game, but she's there as "pinch-kicker" when needed.

Empire Grattan Easy Winner At Dufferin

TORONTO, Nov. 4. — The fall and winter harness racing season was ushered in at Dufferin Park under the Ascot Turf Club's auspices on Saturday. Opening on a day which started out threatening, the track dried out fast, and before the first event started was rated as a good track, but rain fell late in the afternoon, turning the track to mire. One of the largest opening day crowds was in attendance, and programs were at a premium before the start of the second event. The two books were taxed to capacity during the afternoon, and many were turned away, being unable to place their wagers.

The Free-for-All pace featured the afternoon sport, with three different winners dividing the $300 purse in the three heats. Leah Guy, owned by the Manchester Farm of Galt, driven by Finnerty, was the first heat winner when he led from start to finish and completed the mile in 2.18. The second heat of the feature went to the Pine Ridge Stables' Tom Grattan, who came from behind to outfinish Lastic Grattan in 2.17¾. The final heat went to J. R. Rivard's Victor Lee, and was run over a sloppy track in 2.24¾.

Empire Grattan, owned by James Lytle of Beaverton, proved the easiest winner of the day when he accounted for the three-year-old pace in straight heats racing in the good times f 2.26, 2.21½, and 2.25¾.

The 2.20 trot also went to three different heat winners, Beaver Dale taking the first to defeat the favored Jessie Lord in 2.30¾. The second went to Win Aubrey when he outfinished Lee Oliver in a thrilling stretch duel in 2.22¼, and the third went to Lee Oliver over the sloppy track in 2.32 ½.

The fourth race purse was also split three ways when Adrian Grattan drove to the finish of the mile before Iola Grattan in 2.21½. The second heat went to Baron Grattan in 2.25½, while the last went to Iola Grattan in easy fashion.

A spill marred the last heat of the afternoon when Baron Grattan stumbled and fell at the first turn and Adrian Grattan piled into him, smashing the wheels of the sulky before he was pulled up.

Seymour Crashes Over For a Touch For Balmy Beach

Smashing through the very centre of the Camp Borden line, Balmy Beaches' Seymour scored the first touchdown of the game when the teams met at Toronto Saturday in an O.R.F.U. game. It was the only score in the first quarter, Crowe failing to convert. Barron (No. 10) is shown watching happily as his Beach team-mate scores. Balmy Beach won the game, 14 to 1.

Cleveland Won Three Games

(By the Canadian Press.)

Cleveland Barons emerged today as the only unbeaten, untied team in the American Hockey League, winning two week-end clashes to run their record to three straight victories. The Barons now hold a three-point lead in the league's Western section.

The Barons topped Buffalo Bisons, the league's new entry, 4-2 last night after winning 4-1 the night previous over Indianapolis Capitals. Eddie Shore's Springfield Indians, meanwhile, are setting the pace in the Eastern division, with two victories and two draws in their four games to date.

The Indians played a scoreless draw with New Haven Eagles Saturday night and then gained another split in points with the New Haven Eagles Saturday night and then gained another split in points with the New Haven club by playing a 3-3 draw last night. In other Sunday games Hershey Bears tied 3-3 with Indianapolis, while Providence defeated Pittsburg Hornets 3-1. Hershey topped Pittsburgh 3-0 in a Saturday game, while Philadelphia Ramblers won 4-2 over Providence.

The Sunday Springfield-New Haven clash was enlivened by two scraps, with Shore being involved both times. He had a wrestling match with Polly Drouin of the Eagles and a fight with Vic Myles, big New Haven defenceman.

Peggy O'Neil, Drouin and Earl Robinson, playing coach, scored for the Eagles, while Andy Brannigan, Alf Thurrier and Glenn Brydson tallied for the Indians.

In the Hershey-Indianapolis encounter Pat McReavy tallied two of the Hershey goals and Mackie the other, while Carl Liscombe, Whitelaw and Jud McAtee scored for the Capitals.

Babe Tapin, Normie Mann and Johnny Marriucci scored for Providence against Pittsburg. The only Hornet goal was tallied by Lloyd Roubell, who opened the scoring early in the first period.

The Barons clinched their game with Buffalo by scoring three goals in the second period after Joe Jerwa had scored with a long shot late in the opening session. The second period goals for Cleveland went to Dick Adolph, Jake Milford and Norm Locking. Bob Gracie scored both Buffalo goals.

TIGERS UPSET ARGOS WHILE RIDERS EKE OUT WIN IN MONTREAL

Hamilton's Win Tightens Race For 2nd Place

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The howl of the Tiger sounded over the East's football scramble today, adding to the confusion and turmoil already created in the Interprovincial Union. The Big Four hasn't had a season like this for a long time.

While the Ontario Union rolled along to a Sarnia-Toronto Balmy Beach playoff, the Tigers from Hamilton left the second-place playoff spot in the Big Four in question for the last week of the schedule. Their 5-0 upset over Toronto Argonauts in Hamilton Saturday was the day's feature.

Riders Take Lead

The champion Ottawa Rough Riders scraped through Montreal 7-4, taking over sole leadership of the Big Four again; Balmy Beach trounced Camp Borden 14-1, and Sarnia kept pace in second place with a 13-1 triumph over Hamilton Alerts at Sarnia. These victories had all been expected, but the Tigers had not rated with an Argo club which beat Ottawa only a week previously.

But this Tiger wasn't to be beaten in his own lair. Held scoreless through the first half despite on edge in the play, the Tigers got all the needed—a single point—on the second-half kickoff which rolled past the Argo halves to the deadline.

A 20-yard runback by Mike Hedgewick paved the way for George Wright's second single, then the Tigers poured through the Argo line to block Jim Follwell's kick and take possession 25 yards out from where Bill Murmylyk kicked a placement field goal. The scoring was complete in that five-minute stretch of the third quarter.

The fire of the Argo attack had been quenched fairly thoroughly by the Tigers' great stand in the first half, and the best Argo challenge to catch up failed when a third-down pass on the Tiger 25 went astray in the fourth quarter.

Two Points Behind

The result left Tigers two points behind Argos for second place, with the playoff to be decided next Saturday when Ottawa entertains Hamilton, and Montreal travels to Toronto. After what has happened in the last two weeks, the Tiger challenge was not as far-fetched as it seemed at the start of the season.

Rain and mud did as much as Montreal to hold down the Riders, whose star was Andy Tommy, the Mercury-footed back. Tommy raced 85 yards for a first-quarter touchdown, sweeping wide on an end run to break into the clear on the side line. Tiny Herman kicked the convert and Sammy Sward got Ottawa its other point.

Arnie McWatters had to concede a safety touch in the third quarter when he fumbled a snap, and Gordie Noseworthy kicked another two points in the last quarter. But there was nothing in the late stages of the game to equal the thrill of Tommy's touchdown run or his runback of the second-half kickoff for 52 yards.

Mainly it was a dogged ground struggle with Montreal never having enough to get a major score.

Beachers Win Fifth

A small Toronto crowd watched Frank Seymour and Bill Drinkwater score first-quarter touchdowns for Balmy Beach, who had things under control all the way and tried out a variety of new plays in marking up their fifth straight victory. Seymour's score came on a plunge after Cy Albright's high snap gave Beaches possession eight yards out. Drinkwater took a 23-yard pass from Don Crowe and ran another 20 for his major.

Two singles by Jim Butler and a placement by Nat Geary gave Sarnia a five-point lead in the second quarter, and they coasted in against the Alerts. Jim Chapman scored Sarnia's touchdown in the fourth quarter, falling on a loose ball after Butler came up fast to recover his own kick behind the Hamilton line.

Shore In 2 Fights

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—(AP)—In a slambang battle typical of their encounters, New Haven and Springfield fought a 3-3 overtime deadlock last night in an American Hockey League contest. The Eagles came from behind in the final five minutes to gain the tie.

Eddie Shore, Springfield owner-player, figured in two scraps during the time he was in action, a wrestling match with Polly Drouin and a fight with Vic Myles, drawing a major and minor penalty.

Rangers Open Season With 4-1 Win

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The starting barrier has gone up on a new National Hockey League race and it seems significant, although it still is too early to predict how the teams will be running in the stretch, that New York Rangers, are away to a quick break from the gate.

The form players have been high on the chances of the Rangers for this season, in view of their Stanley Cup victory last spring and the fact that Manager Lester Patrick still has a young club on the whole.

Showing their ability to make the most of every opportunity, just as they did all last season, the Rangers opened the season auspiciously Saturday night in Toronto by defeating the Maple Leafs 4-1. In their openers last night Detroit Red Wings defeated New York Americans 4-2 while Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens played to a 1-1 overtime draw.

The only club yet to get into action are Paul Thompson's Chicago Black Hawks, who start the season at home on Thursday against the Americans.

Attendances Large

The dollars rolled freely across the ticket counters in the opening games. At the Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto, a crowd of 12,805 paid customers watched the Rangers and Leafs while the paid attendance at Montreal for the Bruins-Canadiens match was 11,784. Around 7,000 persons turned out at the Olympia in Detroit to watch the Red Wings win.

The crowd at Toronto was the largest for an opening night there since the big building was opened officially in 1931, while the turnout at Montreal was described as the best house in a half-dozen seasons.

The game in Toronto was won for the Rangers and lost for the Leafs by a penalty two minutes and eight seconds from the end to Bingo Kampman of the Leafs. While Kampman was off the Rangers scored twice and then added another just a second from the end of the game.

The Ranger goals went to Alex Shibicky, Babe Pratt, Bryan Hextall and Phil Watson, in that order, with Pratt getting the winner while Kampman was serving his penalty. The only Toronto goal was scored by Gordie Drillon who tallied, along with Shibicky, in the first period.

Goalie Star of Game

The most surprising opening night feat, however, was turned in by Canadiens. Made over almost entirely from the team that finished a poor last in the 1939-40 season, the Montrealers battled grimly all the way against the Bruins with Goalie Bert Gardiner emerging as the star of the game.

Gardiner, one of the eight new men in the Canadiens' line-up, was beaten only by Milt Schmidt in the rousing tussle. Schmidt's goal came late in the third period, rubbing out one scored near the end of the second period by Hector Toe Blake, leading scorer for Canadiens in the past two seasons.

At Detroit, the Red Wings broke loose after a scoreless first period to tally twice in the second period and twice more in the third while the Americans were confined to single goals in both these sessions. Both New York goals went to Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, former Toronto amateur, while Mud Bruneteau, Syd Howe, Alex Motter and Don Grosso scored for the Wings.

Vitt Is Out—At Home

Oscar Vitt, out as manager of the Cleveland Indians, just went ahead cutting flowers in his garden at Oakland, when informed of his dismissal and said he was "not surprised at the decision." Vitt declared he might "just retire" if something to his liking did not turn up. The Indians finished second in the American League race.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers Win First Game 7-0

CALGARY, Nov. 4 (CP)—Two forward passes and two plunges, which carried Winnipeg Blue Bombers from Midfield to a touchdown, gave the Dominion champions a 7-0 victory here Saturday over Calgary Bronks in the first game of the Western Interprovincial Football Union playoffs. The series is a best-of-three affair, the winner qualifying for the proposed East-West final at Toronto Dec. 7 to be sponsored by the Sports Service League.

After a scoreless first quarter Bombers struck with swiftness in the opening minutes of the second session. Two successive forward passes by Art Stevenson—the first to outside Chess McCance and the second to Bud Marquardt, the other Bomber end, who relayed on the run to Flying Wing Jeff Nicklin—moved the yardsticks to within seven yards of the Calgary goal line.

A plunge by Halfback Andy Bieber advanced the ball another four yards and Stevenson completed the downfield march he had started by crashing through the line for the game's only major score. Quarterback Greg Kabat, old "Hardrock," converted from placement.

Second game will be played in Winnipeg next Saturday, with the third contest, if necessary, in Winnipeg November 11.

More than 5,000 fans huddled beneath blankets and overcoats at Metawa Stadium to watch their favorites go one game down in the series. Cool, crisp weather was ideal for the players, although a slight wind made them move briskly through formations.

"I GO PRETTY NEAR CRAZY WITH DRIVER'S ACHES . . . So I'm grateful for the quick relief I get from Sloan's"
Driving is no child's play. Take the wheel of a bus, truck, transport or car for hours on end and you'll know how muscles can play out. Arms, legs, shoulders and back generally feel it most. But Sloan's gently patted over the weary muscles brings quick relief. Fatigue poisons in the tissues are generally the cause of the trouble. The action of Sloan's stimulates the circulation and so helps the blood carry off these poisons. And that is why quick relief follows.
There are many things that we do while at work or at play, which may strain muscles or tire them so that they soon ache exasperatingly. When this occurs, Sloan's is the sensible treatment. Better keep a bottle of this fine liniment in the house.

Dewan Praises Rural Youth For Leadership

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—Rural youth naturally develop the qualities of leadership, Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, last night told the competing teams from nine Provinces assembled there for the national judging contests today and tomorrow of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work.

"As in the past, many of our foremost national leaders have come from the farm, so it will be in the future," he told the fifty-three boys and nine girls. "But we must not lose from the farming industry all men and women of foresight, of initiative and of constructive action. Agriculture can ill afford such a loss; for improvement in the position of this industry must come, for the most part, from within."

Stanley Wood of Fredericton, N.B., president of the Canadian Council, said boys and girls who have had club work are in a better position to face agricultural problems and responsibilities brought on by the war. The young teams represent 3,160 boys' and girl's farm clubs with a total membership of 47,047, one of the largest youth organizations in Canada.

The national contests will be in judging dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, poultry, grain and potatoes. The teams will be taken to farms and packing plants in the Toronto area or to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph to do their judging. The results will be announced at a dinner Tuesday evening. Each Province is limited to four teams of two persons in the contest. The nine girls competing this year set a new high record total of feminine entrants. Four are from Saskatchewan, three from Alberta, and two from Nova Scotia.

After the contests here the teams will visit Hamilton and Niagara Falls Wednesday and Ottawa Thursday and Friday.

70, died of injuries he received October 21 when he was struck by a street car.

Mrs. Mary Sero, 53, of the Mohawk Indian Reserve at Deseronto, died of injuries she received October 28 in a car crash.

Ralph Stevenson, 16, of St. Thomas, was killed instantly Saturday night when he was struck from his bicycle by a car operated allegedly by Ivan Cushman, also of St. Thomas.

Three-year-old George McMillin, of Hamilton, was killed Saturday when struck by a heavy transport truck.

The car carrying the Trenton women collided with another machine driven by Major Thomas Rupert of Madoc of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. With him were Lieut. J. Kincaid and Lieut. Lloyd Blue. They were returning to Madoc after inspecting Trenton airport in the afternoon.

Lieut. Blue dived to the rescue of the women when their machine plunged into the water but he was unable to open the car doors. An hour later the machine was pulled out by a derrick sufficiently far to retrieve the bodies. The three women were in the rear part.

Recovered Body.

The accident in the Vermillion River occurred 21 miles west of Sudbury. Albert St. Louis, Creighton miner, witnessed the accident from his automobile and waded into the river. After five minutes of diving he recovered Oja's body. He tried artificial respiration, but it appeared Oja's heart gave out after he showed some signs of life.

Dragging operations for the other two bodies were not successful immediately.

At the time, the men were ferrying Moreau's sheep from an island where he had put them out to pasture last spring. He was taking them back to the mainland two at a time.

Stone's body was found 12 hours after he boarded a train that carried hunters into the north country. Although police are convinced that Stone fell from the train, the exact manner in which he died may not be determined for several days. The train crew, unaware of the accident, kept right on to Sudbury as did members of the Stone party.

Stone's injuries indicated that a train had passed over his body, but where it was the train he fell from or a second one was not determined. He was not missed by other members of the party until they reached their destination at South Magnetawan, an isolated northern station.

Western Soldiers Stationed In Toronto Visited By Their Families

Pte. A. Owren, of Regina, seems to be rather burdened down with parcels as he met Mrs. Owren on her arrival to visit her husband at Exhibition camp, Toronto.

Joyous reunions were the order of the day as wives and children greeted members of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, now stationed at Exhibition Park, Toronto. Members of the regiment hail from all parts of Western Canada. The padre of the regiment arranged for the visit of wives, families and fiancees. Driver E. J. Rayfield is shown, ABOVE, with Mrs. Rayfield and their two children, Doreen and Georgina. Driver Rayfield hails from Winnipeg.

mechanized brigades mobilized in Bessarabia and Bucovina on the borders of Rumania, while a British military expert estimated Germany was concentrating 70 divisions in the Balkans).

Himmler in Rumania

There were other factors interpreted as suporting the view Germany was planning early action in the Balkans.

The Nazi police chief, Heinrich Himmler, was reported in some quarters to be in Rumania and German action often has coincided with his travels.

(The censored Bucharest press carried the news that Himmler was in Rumania but a government official there denied it.)

Travellers and diplomats have reported that many of the veteran Nazi motorized and infantry units have been pulled out of occupied France since Italy attacked Greece a week ago and Balkan sources intimated that these troops are the ones now moving into Rumania.

The Italian invasion of Greece, with Salonika and the Greek Isles as objectives was said by the observers here to be but one phase of a four-point Axis offensive.

Other points included:—

An Italian drive toward Alexandria and Suez from the advance base at Sidi Barrani—60 miles inside the Egyptian-Libyan border.

A German push through Bulgaria to aid Italy with a two-pronged thrust—one aimed at undermining Greek defences by striking at Macedonia.

A German smash toward the Dardanelles, opening the gate to neutral Turkey, Syria, Palestine and the Suez Canal.

penetrated through the Greek defence line "a tissue of scurrilous lies" and added:

"The Italians talk of conquest of vast territories containing hundreds of thousands of inhabitants when in reality they are still being held in the frontier region where, indeed, certain points are already known to have been freed by the bayonets of the Greek army."

(Italian week-end communiques claimed steady advances south into Epirus on Northwestern Greece, and in another push eastward toward Phlorina and the Aegean seaport of Salonika.)

(Reports from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, told of thundercus cannonading in this sector and reported a flanking manouevre by Greek veterans said to have used small boats to cross Lake Presba on the frontier at night and fall upon Italian garrisons on the Albanian side.)

Air Attacks Continue

Italy continued heavy air attacks Sunday against Greek ports and inland cities behind the battlefront and along supply routes north from Athens.

The Greek air force, possibly supported by British planes, countered with raids at the Italian bases.

The Greeks reported shooting down four Italian planes and losing two of their own in air fights Saturday over Greece and attacks on the Koritza and Argyocastro airdromes in Albania.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation said British and Greek air raiders also attacked an Albanian port and the Albanian capital, Tirana, where part of the palace of former King Zog, now being used as an Italian military headquarters, was reported destroyed.

The Greek high command said Italian bombers caused no damage to military objectives and reported unestimated additional civilian casualties.

(A Reuters dispatch from Athens, said yesterday that the Greek government received £20,000,000 ($89,000,000) from Britain to bolster the Greek war effort.

(Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French group, announced he had sent a telegram of sympathy and support to Greece's premier John Metaxas.)

The situation at the front was reported by authoritative sources yesterday to be "developing satisfactorily."

Fierce Italian counter attacks against positions won by the Greeks were said to have been repulsed with heavy Italian losses.

Heavy Artillery Fire

A general staff communique said there was heavy artillery fire from Greek and Italian batteries on the left and right wings of the front.

For most Greek cities, Sunday was the quietest day since the war began.

Athens streets were filled with the usual crowds. Many persons gathered outside the general staff headquarters for a glimpse of high army officers entering and leaving.

There were cheers when organized youth groups and other uniformed organizations marched through the streets. One such group was the Legion of Death, wearing black uniforms and carrying a banner with a skull and crossbones. These men—mostly veterans of the Balkan and world wars—have volunteered for particularly dangerous military assignments.

The new British liaison officer, Maj.-Gen. Gambier Parry had his first talks with Greek staff officers to correlate the Greek and British war efforts.

(A Reuters news gaency dispatch from Athens said today the British consulate on the Island of Corfu was singled out for attack during Italian raids on the island Sunday. Some British civilians were said to have been killed.)

Italians in Libya are building up stores and equipment, they said, and that military dumps gradually are increasing, but there are no signs of immediate action there.

Patrols are being carried on continuously in Africa, they said, adding that the British were "particularly successful" in various encounters around Kassala, Anglo Egyptian Sudan.

In the Greek campaign, British military circles said, Italians are doing a "good deal of bombing," particularly at Salonika, where a "Refugee camp was apparently deliberately bombed."

Nazi Raiders

One group of German raiders attacked an East Scotland town early today, the government said, and high explosive bombs "demolished some tenement houses and a small number of people was killed and injured."

Machine Gun Strollers

For the first time since the air siege of Britain began, the attackers used "hedge-hopping" tactics yesterday, swooping low to machine-gun strollers, cyclists, motorists and buses in East Anglican towns.

The Sunday attacks, coming late in the day, followed one of the lightest nights of raiding in the 57, and British experts said that while bad weather was a major factor in limiting the attacks, new defences along Heli's Corner, the advent of new German pilots to replace killed veterans and R.A.F. attacks on Germany and German-occupied territories also contributed.

British strategists agreed, however, the lull probably was temporary.

Percy Institute Discusses Health

WARKWORTH, Nov. 4—(ENS).—The subject of "Health," one in which members of Women's Institutes everywhere are vitally interested, was the title of a splendid address given at a special meeting of Percy Women's Institute by Miss Helen Gardner of Niagara Falls, on Thursday afternoon. The meeting was held in the council chamber and was well attended.

Mrs. Lorne Hutchison welcomed the speaker, and told how Miss Gardner was a war nurse in the last war and has had a wide experience in all branches of public nursing. Her subject was the "Institute's Responsibility in Regards to Public Health."

The Percy branch had as their guests the Codrington members.

After the address the following program was enjoyed: Vocal solo, Mrs. C. Puffer; trio, Mrs. J. Black, Mrs. C. Churchley and Mrs. C. Puffer

A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Gardner by Mrs. W. Honey for her splendid address, and Mrs. Jacques, on behalf of the Codrington members, thanked the Percy branch for its hospitality.

At the close, lunch was served and a social time enjoyed. The singing of the National Anthem closed a very interesting meeting.

Central Ontario Regiment Lands In Britain

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—(CP).—Brigadier L. F. Page and his headquarters staff, together with a Central Ontario battalion and one from Quebec, have arrived safely in England, the Department of National Defense announced last night.

The department's statement gave no details of the movement, the first addition to Canada's forces in the United Kingdom to be reported since 11,500 troops arrived there early in September.

The announcemet did not name the Ontario and Quebec battalions specifically, and did not say where the troops were stationed before their departure for the Old Country.

Brig. L. F. Page and his headquarters, together with a Central Ontario battalion and a Quebec battalion have arrived safely in England," was all the statement said.

Brigadier Pages has served as an officer in the Canadian Non-Permanent Active Militia and Permanent Army since 1911, when he was appointed to a commission in the 35th Central Alberta Horse. He served overseas from 1914 to the end of the war, being appointed to command the 50th Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in 1917.

Returning to Canada, he served as an officer, and later as commanding officer of Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians). In 1935 he was detailed from Calgary to Halifax to become assistant adjutant and quartermaster general of Military District No. 6, and he became district officer commanding M.D. No. 7 (Saint John, N.B.) later in that year.

"Bless their little hearts!"

Mr. Picobac put down his newspaper and wiped his reading glasses. Very deliberately he knocked the ashes out of his pipe into the grate of the kitchen stove. And very thoughtfully he proceeded to fill it again from a handy Picobac pouch.

"A nation's greatest asset is its children," said he at length. "So, when Great Britain entrusts thousands of her children to Canada, it's the greatest compliment Canada ever received.

"Pure British stock", continued Mr. Picobac, striking a match. "They don't come any finer. I hope taking care of them will tie us all together in a kindlier, more unselfish, more understanding world all 'round."

"It will", promised Mr. Picobac, "bless their little hearts!"

Picobac is the pick of Canada's burley crop, matured for three years in the wood — a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke. If you haven't enjoyed it lately, you have a pleasant surprise in store.

COUNTY COUNCIL

The meeting of Peterborough count council to conclude the year's business will be held on the third Tuesday of this month.

COMFORT FOR NEPTUNE

Almost every article that will float has found its way to the river and lake, but a rare one was noticed on Sunday floating inshore on Little Lake along the Elcome Crescent. It was a large chesterfield chair, and it was so water-logged that only a small portion was visible above the water.

MOOSE TRAPS?

Another brave huntsman has left the city for the woods, and in his pack were seen three mouse traps. When asked what he had them for, the hunter smiled a little sheepishly, and explained that there were a few mice in the cabin in which he was to sleep during the hunt.

THIRD BROTHER JOINS.

Bill Lawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lawson, Ware Street, has been called up by the Royal Canadian Air Force, and is stationed at Brandon, Manitoba. Bill has two brothers serving in the Royal Canadian Navy.

GIRL BITTEN BY DOG

Phyllis Corrigan, a youngster living in the Downer's Corners district was bitten on the thigh by a dog on Sunday. The girl has a nasty wound and was treated by Dr. C. M. Scott. As yet nothing has been done about the dog, which is said to be owned by William Withers.

MANY ARE INTERESTED.

A packed meeting of new home owners in the North Monaghan area is expected tonight when the Ratepayers' Association holds a special meeting to deal with Hydro rates. Interest in this item is general and as it affects every home owner and tenant in the district, there should be quite an exchange of fireworks. The meeting is in Confederation School.

A BLACK-JACK TOO?

With the opening of the deer hunting season, the stories have just begun, but one citizen had better bring home the proverbial bacon or he'll be in for a lot of kidding occasioned by his confidence. It was told this morning that Paul Roche had left for the north country, armed a .22 rifle, and lots of ammunition.

WINGS ON THE ARMY

A soldier in khaki was noticed on Saturday night wearing wings on the breast of his tunic. He was a veteran, and he wore the usual service ribbons. When asked why he was wearing the wings, he said he had been a pilot in the Great War, and that orders now permitted veteran pilots, again in the service, to wear the wings they had earned in the last war.

FOR THE DOG?

Two women, at a fowl supper last week were seen doing something that may be called establishing a precedent. They had eaten, apparently, all they could, and not wanting to let a bit of chicken away, they were both sitting at the table with their purses on their knee, and each was, discreetly, dropping pieces of meat into an envelope in their purses.

ONLY ONE CASE

The briefest Monday morning session of police court in months was held this morning. There was only one case, a local man who had been on adjournment on a drunk charge asking the magistrate for additional time to secure the money to pay his fine. The case was again adjourned until Saturday, Magistrate Langley warning the accused that he must be prepared to proceed then.

RIFLE FEVER

It is reported but not confirmed that a few of trainees went into a panic when they had their first fling at rifle shooting. They were using the regulation .303- Lee-Enfield, a rifle with a kick. One soldier who had never fired a rifle in his life before is said to have fired one shot, then dropped it and ran, refusing to fire the other four shots as he was ordered.

RUNS OUT OF FORMS

The advent of the deer-hunting season brought so many requests for licenses to buy or borrow rifles that Provincial Constable David Silvester who is the issuing officer for Peterborough county ran out of the necessary form over the week-end and other applicants had to be turned down.

HAD GLASSES BROKEN

While Earl Starr, 116 McDonnel street, was walking across Hunter street bridge Saturday with another boy, a truck passed and one of the three men riding on the machine threw a handful of dirt at the youngsters. The missile broke young Starr's glasses. The matter was reported to the police.

RADIO IS STOLEN

When A. Manley, 705 George street parked his car in a driveway on Sherbrooke street Saturday night there was a portable radio valued at $45 in the automobile which he left unlocked. When he returned to the car some time later the radio had disappeared. A sneak thief had proven that the set was really a portable one.

CAR IS STOLEN

Police are looking for two soldiers who visited the establishment of Hood and Cumming Saturday and asked permission to try out a used car valued at $50. They were given leave to make a test run in the machine drove off and so far have failed to return. The men were in uniform. A search of the city and surrounding district has failed to discover any trace of the missing automobile.

NEW HOG RECORD

Receipt of hogs at Canada Packers last week reached a new peak for the year while deliveries throughout the country set an all time high mark of 157,260 hogs, Mac Gordon told the Examiner today. The Peterborough supply is received from the five counties of Hastings, Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough, Victoria and a few from Ontario. The previous week's deliveries throughout the Dominion was 135,912 hogs.

THE M.P.'s WERE TIRED.

Trainees have not been given leave later than 11.30 p.m., but it was reliably reported today that at least five of the boys have solved the problem. The five reported for roll-call at 10.15 one night last week, then ducked out of the hut at "lights out," and made their way to the fence which they climbed. They sneaked back in about four in the morning, successfully eluding the military police.

LANTERN RECOVERED

The theft of a small lantern from in front of the Pratten Hardware Store was reported to the police department early Saturday evening. A little later Constable John Naples discovered that two small boys with a lantern had endeavored to buy coal oil at the hardware store of Best and Campbell. As a result the officer picked up two thirteen-year-old lads who admitted taking the lantern and showed Constable Naples where they had hidden the stolen property back of the old Peterborough Cereal Company building.

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT"

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientist on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner." (Proverbs 13.6). Selections from the Bible included the following from Isaiah 3:10, 11, "Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook, included the following: "No final judgment awaits mortals, for the judgment-day of wisdom comes hourly and continually, even the judgment by which mortal man is divested of all material error."

Cooks Are Scarce

Napoleon was one of the first to realize that an army marches on its stomach, but food has always played a major part in wars, and this one will probably be no exception. The marked scarcity of cooks applying for posts in the army at Peterborough has led Lt.-Col. F. L. Bradburn, M.C., to search the entire district.

The recruiting has been steady, Col. Bradburn told the Examiner, and though the cooks have been hard to procure, many specialists in other lines have applied.

Woods Welcome Hunters With Sunshine

Departing deer hunters left behind them on main street this morning a persistent feeling of envy as Indian summer trailed the woods and lakes with sunshine and mildness that must have been ample reward without the gory business of ambushing deer.

Even George A. Macdonald who came all the way from Chicago to join the Ketchecum Lake party of which W. J. Thompson is captain must have considered himself highly recompensed for the long trip as he trudged through the woods up on the northern front of the county in such bland November weather as that which hung over the city.

Some of the other men of the Ketchecum party are T. A. Mackay, H. C. Sootheran, Robt. Abbott, Fred Hills, Dr. N. D. Buchanan, Dr. S. Y. Walsh, O. A. DeGraw.

Ray Best, Garnet Dunsford and George Hall are some of the members of the Bottle Lake hunters, and at least four of those of the Big Cedar Lake Hunt Club are H. Jones, George O'Dette, B. Allen and P. McMurray.

Three others who are missing this morning, and are somewhere in the wilds are Alex L. Elliott, M.L.A., Max Swanston and Colin Althouse.

Probably the week-end temperature was not cold enough for veterans of the hunt, but for the average main streeter it should have been sufficient to have started out in the morning mist, hang the rifle on a hickory limb and wander about the landscape whetting an appetite for a midday meal that is seldom stimulated by midtown activity.

Windsors Supervise Scrap Iron Shipments

The Duke of Windsor, governor of the Bahamas, and his duchess, are shown with officials of the Bahamas war materials committee as they discussed the shipment of scrap iron from Nassau to England. Collection of scrap iron, valuable for the manufacture of sinews of war, is one of the methods whereby the Bahamas help the Mother Country.

Collegiate Boy Suffers Injury To Back

When the car in which he was riding skidded off Highway No. 2 near Pickering on Sunday morning, Eric Taylor, Collegiate football and basketball player, suffered a serious injury to his back. He will be confined to his home for some time.

Russ Scriver, Collegiate half-back who was also a passenger in the damaged automobile, had his nose injured. The driver of the car, Nels Foster, former Collegiate player, escaped unhurt. The automobile crashed into a tree after leaving the highway and received considerable damage. The boys had been in Oshawa on Saturday afternoon for the Collegiate-Oshawa football fixture and afterward went to Toronto to see the New York Rangers-Leafs hockey game. It was while they were on their way home on Sunday morning that the accident happened.

Truck Driver Is Exonerated

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 4.—(CP).—Mr. Justice J. Keiller MacKay discharged Henry "Bennie" Storms, Napanee truck driver of charges of serious offence and assault, after a Supreme Court jury deliberated two hours before bringing in a "not guilty" verdict late Saturday night.

Storms was alleged by Mrs. Mary Maracle, Deseronto, to have attacked and beaten her into insensibility during a midnight motor ride on Aug. 30. The woman said she had suffered fractures of the nose, ribs, collarbone and severe bruises, and had regained consciousness at four a.m. in a ditch, a mile west of the Deseronto limits.

Storms denied having seen the complainant on the night the assault is alleged to have taken place. Defence counsel J. M. Simpson, K.C., produced several witnesses who swore Storms was a party with them. At 11.30 on the night the assault is alleged to have taken place, Storms was making sandwiches in the kitchen of the home where the party was in progress, his wife testified.

Famed Matron

Rambling Reporters

WHO IS HE?

The cops are telling a story along the main street today and they claim it's true. It seems that Detective-Sergeant Meagher tried to sell some tickets to a local man in this city and this is how it went:

"Say, George can I sell you a book of tickets on the Spitfire fund."

"What fund did you say?"

"The Spitfire Fund."

"Not me, Bill, I'm married to one already."—McG.

SOME HOUND

Mel Harrison bought a new hound the other day that was rated as a go-getter on foxes. The hound was taken into the Cavan swamp section for a go at the wily Reynard. When he had been gone for a long time, the men went into the swamp to find him. Soon they heard the dog coming, howling in the approved style. In a minute or so he zipped by them, nose to the ground, tail up, hot on the trail of a fox, or something. The men waited and in a few seconds, a nice red fox came loping along about 50 yards behind the hound, protecting the rear so to speak. The hunters were so amazed they shouted and Reynard took cover and escaped. It is reported the hound walked home alone.—McG.

SYMPATHY

A young man of tender years and tender heart lives in Ashburnham. He's only six, but has a depth of emotion that would become most men of sixty, and he goes to Sunday School.

Yesterday he was intrigued by a story his mother was reading to him out of a Sunday School paper, and the story dealt with the much publicized experiences of a familiar Bible character. The lad listened with eyes wide open, and at times the absolute horror of the situation palled him.

When part of the story was over, and his mother had paused, the little boy gasped, "Mummy, I think I'm going to cry." And with that, the little cheeks became wet with tears as the youngster gave probably an unprecedented amount of sympathy to Daniel, when he was in the lion's den.

PRINCE LIKES COMFORT

What may be the smartest dog in the district bears the noble name Prince. He is a police dog.

Prince is, like so many other dogs attached to the carriers of His Majesties Mail, and each day may be seen trotting after Arthur Moscrop, as he makes his rounds. This is not the outstanding characteristic of the dog though for each morning he boards a bus. He stands at the bus stop, and as the driver stops along McDonnel street, the dog hops in and rides several blocks. Then he jumps out, and waits for his friend the mailman.

At noon each day Prince sits up in the window of the Garage on Reid street that is his home, and when he sees the mail man coming with the afternoon letters, he bounds to the door and it seems that no power on earth would keep him in.

One of the admirable traits of the dog is, that it isn't the uniform that intrigues him. If a strange mail man comes to the garage, Prince will not, unless restrained, let him in.—J.W.H.

Lakefield Boy Is Padre In Air Force

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 4 — (ENS). — The Autumn thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Lakefield United Church as arranged at the regular meeting in October was held on Friday night in the Sunday school room with Hon. Fl. Lieut. G. W. Porter, M.A., BD, as guest speaker

Despite the heavy rainstorm an interested audience greeted the former Lakefield boy, now Protestant padre at the St. Thomas Air School.

Mrs. P. H. Darling, president of the society presided. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Frank Darling. A pleasing diversion was a well presented piano duet by Mrs. Harold Trude and Miss Lois Yale. An interesting and inspiring reading was given by Mrs. Elmer Millburn.

Mr. Porter, familiarly known as "Gordon," was in the uniform of Royal Air Force and took as his subject, "News of Battle." He prefaced his remarks by quoting a few lines from the poem, "News of Battle! News of Battle! Who hath brought it?" He said that in olden days, news of battle was often carried by a runner from the scene of conflict. In the Battle of Marathan the famous Greek athlete ran 26 miles with news of victory to the citizens of Athens. In Browning's exciting poem, "The Ride From Ghent to Aix," news of battle was carried by a rider on a faithful steed, which died at the city's gate.

"To-day we are eagerly awaiting News of Battle; we crowd around the bulletins; we feverishly scan the daily papers and listen to the radio for the latest news.

"In the New Testament we have news of of a different kind of battle described in the gospels, when our Lord sent his disciples two by two to carry the news of salvation. Christ said, "Go your ways, behold I send you forth as lambs among wolves." Later these disciples returned with News of Battle, a great victory saying, "Lord even the devils are subject unto us in Thy Name."

Mr. Porter showed that in our missionary conflict News of Battle was coming into the church from its far-flung battle lines. For example, from Japan and China, locked as they are in the grips of warfare, convincing figures and incidents from real life, prove that the Christians in these countries are growing strong in the faith and are showing for the spirit of the Master, in their prayer for their enemies of "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

All fronts are showing signs of victory for the Church of Christ, even to war torn Europe, where Norway is experiencing a revival of religion; Britain taxed to the utmost, raised an extra $10,000 for missions. People are in a more humble mood and are being forced to stop and think seriously. It is said that the last war took people from the church, but this war is bringing them back. "Even the boys in the army have a place in their lives for the gospel," their padre said. However, a great challenge goes forth to the lands, still at peace, to support on foreign fields, those thousands of missionaries cut off from their home supplies in Europe by the arm of the conquerors.

Miss Margaret Sanderson moved a hearty vote of thanks to the guest speaker. This was seconded by Mrs. E. J. Millage.

War 25 Years Ago

E. L. Sackville Receives Rotary Badge

Postponed by the illness which cut short his term of office, the presentation of a past president's badge to E. L. Sackville was made by James Dutton at today's Rotary Club luncheon.

"He takes his place among the best of the presidents this club has had," Alderman Dutton said. "He brought to bear on the future of the club an enthusiasm which resulted in several new members joining the roster of Rotary who, I think, will make good Rotarians."

Mr. Sackville said he deeply regretted that illness prevented him from serving out his term as president, and passing over the responsibilities and privileges of the office to his successor, T. J. Carley, K.C. He especially thanked Fred L. Roy, Mr. Carley and Mr. Dutton for the kind things they had said of him.

A. R. Haskell, manager of the Toronto Better Business Bureau, today's guest speaker, reviewed some of its accomplishments in running down "racketeering" concerns that were defrauding the public by methods devised to deceive unthinking and gullible people. Incidentally, Mr. Haskell said that the first record of a fraud went back to 3,400 B.C., when some forgotten racketeer sold a hair restorer to the Queen of Egypt, a quack remedy of which the ingredients were sold in separate jars, all of the differently labelled and each and all of them containing goose grease.

Fountain pens selling at 59 cents and a coupon, and said to be worth $2 each, were offered to the public not so long ago, and on investigation by the Better Business Bureau were found to have been bought at $4 a dozen or 33 cents each, and had never sold for $2.00.

These kinds of frauds, Mr. Haskell said, tended to destroy public confidence in legitimate business and its sound methods, and the best way of fighting them was simply by exposure. He also told of charity rackets, and passed out the advice—get the facts before you give. Mr. Haskell also that the War Charities Act required all fund-raising efforts for war purposes to have the approval of the federal government, a form of guarantee in which the public could trust.

Cyclist Suffers Scalp Wound

Knocked from his bicycle when it came into collision with an automobile at King and George Streets at noon to-day, P. E. Coveney, 139 Lansdowne Street, was thought at first to be seriously injured. He was rushed by ambulance to the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic, where an examination by Dr. A. Moir showed that Coveney was suffering from a scalp wound. The accident happened when the bicyclist was riding south on George Street and his wheel and a car driven north on George Street by Orville Fallis McGill Street, came into contact as Fallis was turning to go west on King Street.

Woman Unable To Stand Trial

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 4—(CP)—Alice Archer McFarland, 18, was adjudged insane and incapable of standing trial for the murder of her 18-months-old son, Gordon Archer, last July, by a special jury following Government psychiatrists' evidence given at the opening of the trial before Mr. Justice J. Keiller MacKay in Supreme Court to-day.

Her husband, Robert McFarland, was said to be normal and will go on trial to-day.

The couple were examined by the Rev. George Tennant, superintendent of Ontario Hospital, Brockville, and Dr. Horn of Orillia, who testified this morning.

The wire-bound body of the baby was found in the Trent River last July.

Fall Program Gets Underway

What is believed to be a new record in attendance was set at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday, in Al. Clark's beginners' class. Floor hockey has been started, and the boys have taken to it with a great deal of gusto. The response to this class has been exceptionally good right along, but it reached an all time high on Saturday.

The house basketball league was chosen on Saturday, and, although the schedule has not yet been drawn up, the games start on Saturday. The captains of the respective teams are: Sam Rogow, Ken Gillespie, Joe Stewart, Bill Ferguson. These teams will compete for the Dominion Life Trophy.

The Saturday night dances start this week; there will be two basketball games, starting at 7.30 p.m., and the dance will start after nine. These dances have been well attended in the past few years, and it is expected that they will be bigger and better than ever this year.

A group of boys interested in swimming were taken to Toronto last week by Gord Minty. They were treated to an exhibition of swimming by Johnny Dean who made an attempt to break the 200 and the 220-yard breast stroke record. The boys were privileged, and the observation of such swimmers can be a tremendous help in the improving of the swimmer's style.

A boys' newspaper has been started at the "Y," and it has now been issued three times. The editor-in-chief is Ralph Rogow, and the copy, which began on one side only, has now become so great that is requires both sides of the sheet.

In the editorial section is found this verse. It is styled after the master of the limerick, Ogden Nash:

"There was a young man from the city,
Who thought what he saw was a kitty.
He gave it a pat, and soon after that
He buried his clothes—what a pity."

Shakespoke is given a credit line on the poem, but the one in the next issue is anonymous.

Perdue—O'Neill

DOWNEYVILLE, Nov. 4.—(ENS)—St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday morning, when Miss Nita Perdue, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Perdue, was united in marriage to Mr. Austin O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neill, both of Downeyville. Rev. Father McFadden performed the ceremony and also said the nuptial mass.

The bride looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white satin made on fitted lines with lace and button trimming. Her finger-tip veil was held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried premier roses. She entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Walter Herlihey. Mrs. Joseph Guiry was soloist. Miss Dorothy O'Neil, Reg. N., sister of the groom attended the bride and was frocked in a floor-length gown of midnight blue with hat and accessories to match and carried roses. I.O.D.E. Tireless In Efforts To Raise War Funds

Tireless in their efforts to devise new ways of raising funds for their many splendid types of work, the I.O.D.E. must congratulate four of their Toronto chapters on one of the most unusual and interesting events of the Fall season.

Under the distinguished patronage of Mrs. E. S. Duggan, Municipal Chapter of Toronto, the I.O.D.E. are planning one of the most interesting and colorful events of the Fall season. Four of the city's most prominent chapters, including the Lady Tweedsmuir, the Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, the Dr. Harold C. Parsons and the Forest Hill Village, are joining forces to act as patronesses for a charming reception to be held in the beautiful new salon of Helena Hubinstein, to be re-opened the night of November the fourteenth. Regents of the four chapters will receive with Mrs. Duggan, and invitations are going out to their chapter members. During the evening, an informal fashion show will take place, to illustrate the perfect harmonizing of make-up and coiffeurs to the new fashions for winter. Chapter members have generously offered to model the gowns for the interest of their feminine speciators. It is very much hoped that Madame Helen Rubinstein (in private life Princess Gourielli) will fly up to Toronto for the event, when the members of the I.O.D.E. will have an opportunity to thank Madame Rubinstein personally for her grand gesture.

It is also anticipated that Madame Rubinstein's beautiful niece, Madamoiselle Mala Rubinstein, who is in charge of the De Luxe Salon of Madame Rubinstein in New York City will fly up to Toronto for the opening with Madame Rubinstein, and that she will do the "commentating" on the fashion show, giving Canadian women many interesting ideas on fashion from New York, which as everyone knows has become the fashion centre of the world.

Madame Rubinstein has invited these very active I.O.D.E. chapters to take over her beauty salon for two weeks, to book all appointments for every type of treatment, permanent wave, finger wave or just even a manicure, and Madame Rubinstein will donate one hundred per cent of the money received to the charities sponsored by these four tion of activities to prevent overlapping and increase efficiency.

Full Discussion

The statement added:

"A very full discussion took place with the result that the meeting od being evolved of co-ordinating thoroughly approved of some meththe activities of these various organizations.

"The opinion was expressed that this co-ordination should be carried on in conjunction with the division of voluntary services of the National War Services Department. A small committee was appointed for the purpose of discussing a plan of carrying out the idea and submitting it to the organizations concerned. This committee will be giving immediate consideration to the problem.

"It is intended that a women's national advisory committee, of which Her Royal Highness will be patroness, shall be appointed to coordinate the work of the various national organizations."

I.O.D.E. chapters. It has been arranged that different members of each group will take turns as salon hostess for one day, to receive every client they have booked, and to see that the money taken is directed to her particular chapter.

Never before has any organization received such a magnificent gift. One of the members of the Forest Hill Village Chapter said: "We are working as never before to try and fill Madame Rubinstein's salon treatment appointment book for the two weeks during which we are to be hostesses because Madame Rubinstein's wonderful offer is just like a fairy tale. It is almost too good to be true as anyone knows who has worked in an organization where many charity drives necessitate selling tickets. Here we are actually privileged to give our members a necessary beauty service which they will be availing themselves of during that two weeks in any case and at no extra charge, and yet we are to have one hundred per cent of the cost of that beauty service."

Perhaps this splendid endeavor of the four Toronto chapters of the I.O.D.E. will be a novel suggestion that other Women's Organizations across Canada will want to imitate or adapt to the needs of their locality, as it is certainly something new and different.

Hilda Thompson Is Bride Of J. M. Kirkwood

The marriage took place quietly at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon in St. John's Anglican Church of Hilda Irene, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Thompson, Homewood Avenue, to John Marlatt Kirkwood, Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kirkwood of Brampton. Canon W. P. Robertson officiated.

Because of the illness of the bride's father, she was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Charles Blezard of Toronto, and wore her travelling frock of sheer turquoise wool, with black off-the-face hat, black suede accessories, and corsage of orchids. Miss Patricia Thompson attended her sister, in a frock of slate blue with smart touches of grey fur, navy accessories, and corsage of bronze baby chrysanthemums. Mr. George Mattice was groomsman, and the usher was Mr. Wm. McPherson.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Thompson receiving in a gown of heaven blue, with corsage of bronze chrysanthemums, and Mrs. Kirkwood in a blue ensemble, with similar corsage.

For a motor trip to Northern Ontario, the bride donned a brown squirrel-trimmed topcoat and brown accessories over her wool frock. The couple will live at 377 Water Street.

Jeanette Scott Chapter Fall Tea Draws Crowd

The dullness of Saturday afternoon's weather with its occasional showers of rain was promptly forgotten by guests to the Jeanette Scott Chapter, I.O.D.E., tea once they stepped into the friendly atmosphere of the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., where the affair, the most successful ever arranged by the Chapter, was held. Sunny splashes of color were added to the Green Room and Library by graceful arrangements of chrysanthemums in yellow tones, and the tea table, laid with a green damask cloth, was centred with bronze 'mums. The large number of guests who called during the afternoon were welcomed by the regent of the Chapter, Miss Grace Comstock, and the vice-regent, Mrs. R. Honey.

Presiding at the silver tea services were Mrs. Fred Hooper, the honorary regent; Mrs. Manson Comstock, Mrs. B. W. Harvey; Mrs. W. L. Burrell. Members of the Chapter helped to serve. Mrs. Hugh Waddell and Mrs. Ralph Honey were in charge of the tea table, and servers were directed by Mrs. Rodger Chenoweth.

An attractive table of home-cooking, with Miss Anne Heideman and Mrs. G. Dobbin in charge, proved so popular that the samples of delicious home-baking were sold out early in the afternoon. Mrs. Noel Rishor was in charge of the sale of tickets on a draw for a dozen pair of silk stockings, which were won by Mrs. H. Clifton, Frederick Avenue; Mr. W. Richardson, Frederick Avenue; Miss E. Jackson, Stewart Street, and Mrs. R. Gavine, London Street.

Hadassah Tea Is Successful Event on Sunday

More than seventy-five guests, including a number from Toronto, Port Hope and Cobourg, attended a tea Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. Goldstone, 536 Gilmour street, held in aid of war funds for the Peterborough Chapter of Canadian Hadassah. Mrs. M. Cowan and Mrs. J. Aitken were co-hostesses.

Amber-colored vases filled with baby chrysanthemums in blending autumn shades were delightfully arranged in the living room, and the tea table, laid with cut-work and lace cloth, was effective with white chrysanthemums and pink snapdragons, and tall pink tapers in silver holders.

Mrs. L. Loftus poured tea, and assisting in the tea room were Miss Margaret Aitken and Miss Hannah Florence.

Children Help Foster National Unity

KINGSTON, Nov. 4 (CP)—Whatever Canadians can do for British children sent to the Dominion to escape the perils of war is "small indeed when weighed against what their parents are doing for us," Dr. R. C. Wallace, chairman of the Canadian Advisory Committee for Children from Overseas, said tonight.

Dr. Wallace, principal of Queen's University here, was speaking over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

More than 1,500 children had come to Canada under the United Kingdom Government plan, now suspended for the winter at least. In the homes where they were living in Canada the children were cared for as members of the family but there would be costs of hospitalization and extra clothing which some of the foster parents could not meet.

"It is the responsibility of our committee to see to it that these expenses for the reception centres (set up to receive the children on their arrival in Canada) and current needs are paid," Dr. Wallace said.

Are Canadians Now

"While the children are with us, they are Canadian children, and Canadians have a responsibility for their care.

"The committee will be very grateful for any financial assistance that the generous-hearted people of Canada, and people of Canadian extraction everywhere, can give in the carrying on of this work."

Dr. Wallace said "while the flow of children to our country has ceased for the time being, we hope that this is merely a temporary suspension and not a full stop."

(When the suspension was announced at London, the reason given was the added danger of Atlantic crossings during the winter months.)

The child migration plan was a war measure, and like other war measures it would have its influence long after the war was over.

The children already in Canada were attending Canadian public or high schools. They were becoming part of Canadian home life.

Cites Letters to Homes

"In their letters to their own hames, they are already interpreting Canada to their parents," Dr. Wallace said.

"They are in all the Provinces, and are linking up Canada from coast to coast in human sympathy with Britain through the intimate link of communication between home and home."

Dr. Wallace said before the British Government scheme went into operation children were being received in Canada under purely private auspices. Altogether more than 5,000 children had come to the Dominion in this way.

These children were supported in each individual case through private funds and did not come under the work of his committee, Dr. Wallace explained.

"But," he added, "because of the need to conserve purchasing power for the immediate necessities of the war, funds have not been available from Britain for school groups and for the 900 British mothers who have come to Canada with their children.

"There have been real difficulties. Thanks to the generosity of organizations and individuals, many of these difficulties, though not by any means all of them, have been overcome.

"New problems will arise, for the adjusting of human beings to new and strange surroundings is not easy. But nothing that is worthwhile is easy, and this is eminently worthwhile."

Empress Of Britain Bombed and Left Burning By Nazis

The ill-fated Empress of Britain, flagship of the Canadian Pacific line, is shown here being towed off the coast of Ireland after being transformed into a blazing hulk by German incendiary bombs. While being towed to port, the flames hit explosives aboard the Empress and an explosion sunk her. British warships, rushing to the scene, rescued 598 persons from the 643 that were aboard the liner when she was attacked by Nazi planes.

Glenna Brown Wins Oratorical Contest

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 4.—(ENS)—Owing to the inclement weather Friday night there was not the usual attendance at the public speaking contest held by pupils of No. 10, Seymour at the United Church. R. W. Umphrey, former teacher, but now on active service with Midland Regiment at Campbellford, was chairman for the evening. A. Hazel, of Campbellford, musical instructor of the school directed the choruses and played piano accompaniments.

There were 12 pupils entered in the contest, Glenna Brown, winning first place; Helen Hay, second; Doreen Free, third.

The judges were Misses Lyla Engisch, Bessie Peoples and Principal Nelson of Norwood public school staff. Misses Mary Watson, Edith Roberts, Lucy Wing, Gena McNeely and Principal Gay of Havelock Public School and Gerald Buchanan, principal of Port Hope Public School.

Miss Leatha Kidd, teacher of S.S. No. 10, expressed appreciation to those who had assisted on the program and called the first three winners to the platform, also in the absence of Mrs. Ward Glenn, president of the local Women's Institute asked Mrs. Tom Wight to make the presentations, the money for which was donated by the Women's Institute. Glenna Brown for first received a fountain pen, Helen Hay for second, an autograph album and Doreen Free received a book for third. The chairman called upon Principal Nelson of Norwood and Principal Gay of Havelock to speak and in doing so both congratulated teacher and pupils for the excellent manner in which the contest was conducted.

Where They Left Off

New York Rangers who finished last season by defeating Toronto Maple Leafs opened the new campaign Saturday night just where they left off last spring, defeating Happy Day's crew 4 goals to one. It was an interesting battle apparently and was not decided until the last two minutes when with the score tied at 1-1, Bingo Kampman drew a penalty and the Rangers displayed their oldtime habit of cashing in on the breaks. In the last ninety seconds they ran in three fast goals and turned the battle into a rout on end. Bryant Hextall, the bird who scored the winning goal in the final game in the Stanley Cup series, made himself still more unpopular in Toronto Saturday night by figuring in the three goals that wound up the pastime. He scored one himself and picked up assists on the other two to hang up three points and give him a nice start in the scoring race.

* * * * * *

There were two games in the National Hockey League last night, Canadiens succeeding in holding the Boston Bruins to a 1-1 tie in Montreal while Detroit Red Wings triumphed over Red Dutton's rebuilt Amerks 4 to 2 in a hard-fought game at Detroit. The draw with the powerful Bruins must have given Dick Irvin a considerable amount of satisfaction. It was a tough test for his rookies and they came through nicely although it was that clever veteran Toe Blake who scored Canadiens' only goal of the contest. The Kraut line got their first scoring point for Boston when Milt Schmidt scored the Bruins' goal unassisted. The Detroit win over Amerks was not unexpected. A feature was the fact that Johnny 'Peanuts' O'Flaherty of Toronto playing his first pro game scored both American goals.

* * * * * *

O'Flaherty's goals were the only counters registered by rookies in the three games played in the N.H.L. over the week-end. The list of successful marksmen has a very familiar sound. It included Drillon, Hextall, Pratt, Shibicky, Watson, Blake, Schmidt, Mud Bruneteau, Syd Howe, Alex Motter and Don Grosso. Hextall did the best for himself from a scoring viewpoint with three points while his teammates Shibicky and Watson each picked up two in the game with Toronto. There is no N.H.L. game until Thursday night when the Americans will open the Black Hawks' season with a game in Chicago.

* * * * * *

Philadelphia Ramblers in their second start in the American Hockey League defeated the champion Providence Reds and our own Bill Calladine registered his first scoring points as a professional hockey player. Bill figured in two of his club's four markers, slipping a pass to Juzda for a goal in the second period and getting an assist on Allsby's counter in the third session. The Peterborough boy thus got himself two perfectly good points.

Sporting Chill Con Carne: Eddie Shore figured in two fights as his Springfield Indians tied New Haven....Oshawa's forward passing was a big factor in the defeat of both Peterborough Collegiate teams Saturday....P.C.I. juniors will finish their season here Saturday when Lindsay Collegiate will be the opposition....Winnipeg Bombers have one hand on the Western title. They defeated Calgary Bronks 7 to 0 Saturday in the first game of the best two-of-three series....The N.O.H.A. has decided to drop out of all Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns this season and will do its best to promote hockey among youngsters including bantams and midgets.

We Noticed . . .

....Although it seems a trifle early to mention it, fashion experts are already talking about patriotic blue as the basic color movement of first importance for spring. This color family includes Marine Corps, the authentic shade of the United States Marine Corps uniform; and West Point, half grey and half blue, the swagger color worn by West Point Cadets.

....Firmament Blue is another new rendition expected to appear in the front ranks of spring fashions. Subtle greenish types of blue, as Petrol Blue and Rainblue, have fresh style appeal, as well as livelier greenish shades like Niagara Blue and Blue Aqua.

....A promising new color note for spring is sounded in the softly greyed shades of Reseda Green and Greenglass. Misty yellowish tones find expression in ash green, a tilleul type, and Persian Bronze. Rio Green and Plantation Green are brilliant tropical hues.

Two Sprinters Born

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 4—It was a timid bandit who walked into Mrs. Charles Tuminello's grocery. And as timid bandits go, he went. So did Mrs. Tuminello. She told police that the unmasked man walked in, flashed a pistol and demanded her money. She ran out the back door. The bandit, unnerved, ran out the front. He got nothing but the exercise, police said.

Accident Victim Has Large Funeral

WARKWORTH, Nov. 4 — (ENS)—Robert Greenly, who was critically injured in the tragic motor accident last Saturday evening which also claimed the life of his father, the late William Greenly, passed away Tuesday in Belleville Hospital.

The funeral was held from his residence in Percy Township on Friday afternoon, Rev. B. Black of Campbellford, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Dr. Cooper.

Robert was of a quiet disposition. Highly respected in the community, he had made a host of friends who mourn his early passing. He was 37 years of age.

The pall-bearers were Charlie Poole, Irvine Greenly, Wesley Remington, Norman McCubbin, Gordon McCubbin ,and the flower-bearers were John Poole and Ellwood Greenly.

Interment took place in Warkworth Cemetery.

Convict's Daughter

her mind kept saying as she rose and went on, lifelessly, with her packing. "It can't be true. . . . It can't be true."

And then came a knock on the door. "Mom says your supper's ready in the kitchen, Miss Ackerman," a childish voice piped out.

"Tell her I'm not hungry," she flung back and, closing the suitcase with a bang, she gathered her coat on her arm. She jammed her old felt hat down over her hair without consulting the mirror, took one last despairing look about her and, squaring her sagging shoulders, flung open the door and marched resolutely back down the stairs.

Through the parlor door she caught a glimpse of a lounging figure, smoking and watching the stairs. She would have passed him, head up, but he rose to his feet, and stopped her with a hand on her arm.

"I'm afraid I've caused you some inconvenience," he said, looking at her searchingly. "Mrs. Peterman says you're going to the 'Y.' If you'd allow me to carry that grip, I'd be glad to see you there." Again the brown eyes brought back to Lona the swift memory of Tiny, the spaniel, and he winced. He had loved her, that spaniel, back in other days before the world had crashed.

"It's just around the corner." She managed to make her voice sound normal. "I think I can manage. Thank you just the same."

"But I'd really like to—" he began. Forcing a smile, she brushed past him. If he looked at her like that again, she'd break down and cry! And she couldn't cry here, where Mrs. Peterman could see her and gloat. She wouldn't have anybody pitying her, least of all that shrill-voiced hag.

Out on the street she turned sharply and headed downtown as if she knew exactly where she was going. The odor of frying pork chops followed her tantalizingly, reminding her that she had had no lunch and that it was nearing six o'clock. Setting down her suitcase as soon as she was around the corner where she couldn't be seen from the house, she opened her shabby purse and searched it with trembling fingers. Three thin dimes and a street car check were all she could find. Thirty cents between her and the city!

With The Boy Scouts

Scouts and cubs filled the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday morning on the occasion of the dedication of colors and presentation of charter to the Salvation Army boy scout troop.

Members of St. John's, St. Luke's, All Saints', St. Andrew's, North-end, Mark Street and Murray Street met outside the local armouries, where they were joined by the Salvation Army scouts and cubs accompanied by the senior band of 38 instruments. The parade marched to the Citadel, where they were met by Adjutant Buckley, accompanied by Brigadier Keith and Captain Knight of Toronto.

Brigadier Keith is Commissioner of Scouts and Cubs for Canada, Alaska, Newfoundland, and Bahamas.

The highlight of the ceremony was the dedication of colors. Scouters F. Ford and A. Rose with scouts from both troops assisted in this ceremony.

The event had one reunion, when Scouter Rose found in Captain Knight, a member of the Gilwell Camp they enjoyed together a few years ago.

Paper Collection on Saturday

The boy scouts will carry out their paper collection on Saturday next, November 9, starting at 9 a.m. sharp. All citizens who are giving papers to this good cause are requested to have the bundles securely tied and placed on the front verandah by about 8.30 a.m. It is the plan that the scouts will call at every home and carry papers to appointed spot, where truck will pick up same and taken to central headquarters located at 397 Water street.

The scouts are doing this service in co-operation with the War Service Council, and the money will be used for the relief of war victims in England.

Magazine Collection

All scouters are requested to get magazines into their district points ready for pickup this week. We may be picking up on Tuesday or Thursday. So please be ready.

Phone 3067 and state where papers are. Your co-operation will be appreciated.

Please have all magazines strongly tied in bundles of 25 or 10, as per previous instruction.

St. John's

Cubs.—The pack played host to the 14th(Murray Street) pack on Friday last. Akela Pammett took the game of blowout. Akela Marshall, frog hopping relay; Baloo and Raksha, spelling bee and treasure Hunt.

Two boxing matches were arranged between Cubs Douglas McCullough and Pat Harte-Maxwell; also Ian Penglasse and J. D. Mitchell; bother matches causing loss of excitement and fun.

The second class of the sixers' instruction course will be held next Friday, at 6.15 p.m. in the Parish Hall. All sixers, please attend this class.

The Scouts.—Instruction in 2nd class and tenderfoot were the chief items on the program. During the evening one of the former club, Keith Kelsey took a further step in his scout lift when he took his promise as a scout as he was invested into the great brotherhood of scouts.

Clifford Roydhouse, a war guest, is now attached to the St. John's troop for duration and likes scouting.

The Rovers

All members of the crew are reminded that there will be church service next Sunday evening, after which we will attend a meeting for election of officers at the Skipper's home.

2nd Armour

Streamers, balloons and pumpkin lanterns added to the fun of a Fall masquerade of the jungle, its cubs and their leaders.

The Rev. G. J. Bousfield acted as judge of costumes, also told one of two stories of boyhood days. The prizes for costumes went to: 1st, Vern Butcher; 2nd, Ray Wyatt; 3rd, Paul Welsh.

After refreshments, the gay evening came to a fitting close, as the Rev. Bousfield closed with prayer.

11th, North End

Four boys are trying to pass their swimmers' badge this week; they are Jack Blewett, Jack Gaskill, Morris Richardson, and Murray Metcalfe. One other boy was made a member of our great world-wide brotherhood, as Gordon Gracey took his scout promise at an investiture ceremony.

1st class signalling and tenderfoot tests were taught, the troop closing early to allow a meeting of the parents to go ahead.

St. Andrew's

Twenty-five boys in full masquerade took over the jungle trail on Thursday and enjoyed a program of games, contests and song. Don McDonald in mounted police uniform complete from hat to boot laces took first prize, while brothers Bob and Bruce McCondack took second and third in order named, in dresses of Witch and Tramp.

The scouts headed in just in time to share with the eats and could not work afterwards.

Jim Airth, a former cub, was invested as a scout and took his promise before Scouter Ingham.

A meeting of the group committee received reports of activities from both section leaders. It was decided to hold a meeting of the group committee and parents two weeks hence.

All Saints

The All Saints' troop is going along steadily and has undertaken to raise some pile of money towards building headquarters.

Each boy, the troop has set his aim at three dollars. All this money to be earned at doing odd jobs for people.

As the money is put into the Central pool the amount is shown on the troop barometer, and some keen competition is being shown amongst the various patrols.

Any friend who has a small job a young fellow can do and would like to help along this worthy cause can phone Scouter Rose at 6161, and your job will be alloted to a scout to carry out.

We are glad to note that Gord White is now A.S.M. with the troops.

Scouting Loses Another Leader

Bill Lawson, who for some time has been assisting Scouter Leggitt in St. James scout troop, has been called up to serve with the flying corps now station at Brandon barracks. Bill is the third member of his family to serve with the coolrs in this war, having two brothers now serving in the navy. Our best wishes go to Bill in his new venture.

Don't forget; paper collection Saturday next, Nov. 9. All scouters are requested to turn out. All papers to delivered to 397 Water, first south of Bank of Commerce Bldg.

Aluminum frames for notices in ticket offices of a railway in England were taken down to yield a half ton of scrap for war metal.

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT B.O.

The adult skin has 2 to 5 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it—especially in changeable weather. Heated rooms, lack of fresh air, and heavy clothes quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

TOO bad to spend money trying to make a good impression—and then make a bad one! But that's exactly what Tom had done; NO ONE escapes this possibility, because we all perspire from a pint to three pints daily, and in changeable weather, stuffy, overheated rooms increase this perspiration. Left on the body, these sweat deposits soon turn stale—decompose. Then YOU have "B.O."

Careful people stop "B.O." before it starts, by using Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath, Lifebuoy stops "B.O."; its peppy, purifying lather washes stale perspiration deposits away! Start playing safe—with Lifebuoy!

New War Songs Canada's Need

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—(CP).— One of to-day's needs, says Len Hopkins, leader of one of the Capital's dance bands, is a couple of good rousing war songs.

"We could do with a couple of dashing warlike pieces expressing more 'grim gaiety,' to paraphrase Prime Minister Churchill," says Hopkins.

W. O. Findlay of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, returning from a military training period at Petawawa says the soldiers will sing "There'll Always Be an England" when it's played with great enthusiasm but they don't often ask for it. They like "Kiss Me Good-night, Sergeant-Major," because of the comedy element, and they like rolling out of "Roll Out the Barrel" for a variety of obvious reasons.

It's a different war in more ways than tactically, experts admit, and there was nothing in the last one like small children singing "Roll Out the Barrel" while they were about to die in the middle of the Atlantic. Alfred Noyes, the poet, says no poetry can come out of a war like this.

But what the song and dance people think is that poetry or not, there could be something comparable to the grimly gay songs of yesteryear, a considerable number of which came from Tinpan Alley in New York.

Remember Them?

Then there were: Tipperary, Pack Up Your Troubles, Madamoiselle From Armentieres, Keep the Home Fires Burning, We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall, Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight, Till We Meet Again, Beautiful Katy, Carry Me Back to Blighty, It is the Navy, It's a Long, Long Trail, Over There, All the Nice Girls Love a Sailor, When You Wore a Tulip, Joan of Arc, When It's Apple Blosom Time in Normandy, Good-byee, and a dozen others.

A lot of songs from the United States were used with Canadian words. For example, "When You Wore a Tulip" was sung in Calgary to "We Are Canadjuns, the Western Canadjuns," and in Halifax to "Now We Wear the 85th Feather."

Nowadays there are: "Till the Lights of London Shine Again, Wish Me Luck As You Wave Me Good-bye, We'll Win the War with Wings, We're Ready Over Here for Over There, We're Coming Over, Wings Over the Navy.

One persistent ditty is to the tune of the "Old Grey Mare." The popular version this time and last is:

"I don't want to march with the infantry,
Ride with the cavalry,
Shoot with artillery,
I don't have to fly over Germany,
I'm in the King's Navy."

One suggestion as to the difference between the number and popularity of songs this time and last is that between 1914 and 1918 there was a lot more family piano playing than at present.

Piano sales are going up, however, and after all, the hopeful experts say, somebody is almost bound to turn out a couple of wows.

Home Shorthand Course
Teaches Pitman System

Write According to Sound

A trained worker is welcome in business, for these days an office force is a group of "specialists."

Shorthand is one of the best means for a girl to be a specialist, and you can teach yourself shorthand in your spare time.

In the Pitman system, you learn a simple method of writing words according to their sounds. "At," for instance, you indicate with a short stroke and a dot. "Add," a slightly different sound, you indicate with a heavier stroke and a dot.

Though there are many words in the language there aren't many sounds, so with regular practice you soon learn the necessary symbols.

To acquire speed, train ear and pencil by saying words aloud as you write. You also have the Pitman short forms, extra-brief symbols for often used words, to help you keep pace with your employer's dictation.

Our 32-page booklet explains Pitman shorthand in easy steps and paves the way for a business college course. Gives short forms, practise exercises, pointers on gaining speed and accuracy.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of SELF-INSTRUCTION IN SHORTHAND to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

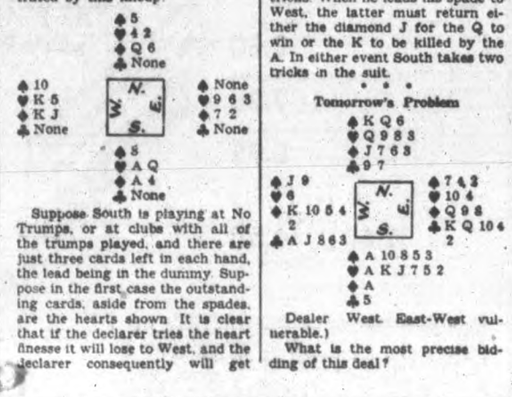
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

RIGHT INTO THE JAWS

FINESSING is usually somewhat of a gamble If the missing honor is held by the opponent who plays first to the trick, the finesse succeeds But if it is held by the one who plays last, the finesse is a failure. Always conscious of this, fine players try to avoid finesses whenever they can They prefer instead to construct a lead-throwing end-play which eliminates such a risk, if the hand offers an opportunity for it By means of this play, the lead comes up to the tenace, so that, even if a trick would have been lost by the finesse, that loser is prevented.

The two principal kinds of situations for such a play are illustrated by this lineup:



Suppose South is playing at No Trumps, or at clubs with all of the trumps played, and there are just three cards left in each hand, the lead being in the dummy. Suppose in the first case the outstanding cards, aside from the spades, are the hearts shown It is clear that if the declarer tries the heart finesse it will lose to West, and the declarer consequently will get only one more trick, with the heart A But if he leads the spade to West, the latter must then lead away from his heart K into the A-Q, declarer therefore getting two tricks.

Changing the lineup, so that the remaining cards, aside from spades, are the diamonds shown, we have what has been described as a "combination tenace" That is a suit which possesses one honor in one hand opposite a secondary honor in the other In this case, it is quite clear that South has no way to even seek two tricks in the diamond suit by leading it except through an effort to drop a singleton K. But by the lead-thrower he can make two tricks. When he leads his spade to West, the latter must return either the diamond J for the Q to win or the K to be killed by the A. In either event South takes two tricks in the suit.

Heavy Trade Is Reported In Potatoes

Potato growers reported fairly brisk business on the market Saturday with prices holding about the same prices around the dollar mark as in recent weeks. Earle Sutton of Cavan asked 90 cents a bag for Carmans; H. Harker of Fraserville $1.20 for White Stars and $1 for Chippewas; E. M. Beer of Campbellcroft $1 for Cobblers, Katahdins and Rural New Yorkers; Hilliard Strong $1 for Green Mountains; and Healy Bros. of Westwood $1.10 for White Stars. These prices continue to stay at a level that has changed only slightly since the new crop came in.

Eggs sold steadily at the recent gains, the range being from 35 to 45 cents, and demand active. Even the men at the outdoor counters said their cases were quickly emptied by buyers.

Chickens sold at 20 to 23 cents, the average for the morning being at 22-23 cents a pound, and apparently the supply was going to be completely taken by noon. One woman said she had brought in ten chickens and sold them all at 23 cents a pound; another had brought in twenty-three and had only three left at a quarter to twelve. She sad she had sold twenty at 23 cents the pound.

Butter was mostly 30 cents with a few women willing to sell for 29 cents. R. J. Scott, president of the United Farmers of Ontario, who was in Peterborough for the opening of the Co-op building, said in Toronto on Saturday that there was no reason for the vertical jump of seven cents a pound in the price of butter as soon as summer producing season ends.

According to his information there were 59,364,695 pounds of butter in storage in Canada on September 30, as compared with 57,364,695 pounds accumulated at the corresponding time a year ago when butter was 27 cents a pound. A year ago from the present the price was 27 cents. The inference from Mr. Scott's comment on the butter situation is that the farmer does not profit much from butter that has passed out of his hands, and that the increase in price occurred after the huge storage supply was piled up.

Strangers Appear

On the west side of the market hall a young couple had taken space for a display of candy. The husband said he had finished making the candy in Toronto at midnight Friday, and five hours later he and his wife got up to start for Peterborough arriving here with plenty of time to spare before the market crowd began arriving.

The rest of the market was in the groove. Hilliard Strong quoted carrots at 75 cents a hamper, parsnips 60 cents, and big Spanish onions $1.10.

Norman Moncrief's apples were tagged as follows: Greenings, Milwaukees, Baxters and Wolf Rivers, 35 cents a peck; Northern Spies, 40c; McIntosh Reds, 40 and 50 cents a peck; Snows, 40 cents; Talman Sweets, 35 and 40 cents.

C. Patermo sold celery at 10 cents a bunch or two for 15 cents and beets, 50 cents a hamper. Bert Arnott showed some extra big heads of Savoy cabbage at 10 cents, and the smaller ones were 5 cents; turnips, three for 10 cents; onions, six quarters for 25 cents.

Geese 22 Cents

Only a few geese were noticed, and the price averaged 22 cents; ducks were 25 cents. E. A. Hunter asked 14 and 16 cents a pound for fresh pork and 16 and 22 cents a pound for lamb. J. E. Johnson's apples sold at: snows, 40 cents; wealthies, 35 cents; Baxters, 40 cents a peck.

A great deal of farm produce was offered to buyers at prices continuing unchanged for weeks, but the gladioli have disappeared from the market scene and only a few remnant blooms of the year were seen Saturday.

Adolf Hitler views South America with hungry eyes.

Hitler Sees Great Storehouse Of Food, Resources For His Nazis From Republics In South America

By JOSEPH PIATKIEWICZ
(Central Press Canadian Correspondent.)

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 4 — A continent that is potentially wealthy in oil, coal, meats, cereals, rubber, tin, gold, wool, nitrates and numerous undeveloped resources and industries. A continent that has many fine harbors—havens for battleships, submarines, and aircraft carriers. This idea is in the ingenious mind of Adolf Hitler when he looks upon South America. Above all, he sees a continent that could easily be made the bread basket of all Europe.

Argentina, with her warehouses overflowing with beef and her granaries filled to capacity with wheat and other cereals, would prove a valuable prize for Herr Hitler's conquering hordes.

Through recent years German immigrants have been building friendships and business contacts in Argentina. To-day a great many of the warehouses and markets are controlled by these Germans. These Nazis are, in most instances, Argentine citizens. Why, no one would believe that these respected members of Argentine society could be fifth columnists.

Blockades Effective.

It wasn't strange then to see Germany reap a major share of the business in this country by the use of its exchange system. Up to a few months ago the trade and price increases had been favorable to Argentine trade, and the country appeared to be in a position to gain economically from continued war in Europe. But later the maintenance of this favorable trend proved to be impossible for this simple reason—blockades prevented imports from Germany to reach Argentina, and thus resulted exchange difficulties.

The Nazis' only real competition for Argentine trade was Great Britain. Until nine months ago this was true, but now that German vessels can no longer reach Buenos Aires exports have dropped considerably.

Herr Hitler needs a great deal of food for the many millions of people who are now a part of his empire. His war machine will bog down unless he increases fuel supply, which at this point in the conflict, must be low, despite Rumanian oil fields. The master of continental Europe looks toward South America with hungry eyes.

The Germans have been far more successful in their economic penetration of South America than in their political endeavor.

Documents seized some years ago in Port Alegre, Brazil, on the arrest of Ernst Dorsch, former head of the German labor front in Brazil, included this notation—that the German government up to September 30, 1937, had contributed $800,000 to the Nazi propaganda fund in southern Brazil most of it coming in from the offerings of local Germans. (It is doubtful whether anyone will ever know just how much money Hitler is putting in his Nazi propaganda fund for South America.)

Brazil Police Active.

At the same time the police seized maps of the east coast of Brazil, notes of where troops and arms could be landed and descriptions of ports and harbors, especially in the south of Brazil. This is the section of Brazil that is directly across from Dakar, the point of Africa that is closest to South America. Dakar was recently in the news as the point of battle between the free French soldiers of General de Gaulle and the Vichy government of France. De Gaule insisted that the only reason he wanted to occupy Dakar was to keep it from falling into Nazi hands.

In August of this year Arnulf Furhrmann, confessed author of a Nazi plan to seize Uruguay as a German colony, was arrested by the Argentine police. Investigation by a Uruguayan congressional committee in June showed that Furhrmann was in charge of three international plots, Uruguayan police said he was the leader of anti-Semitic agitation throughout South America.

Although these are only a few instances in which so-called Nazi spies were arrested, there seems to be a great deal more Nazi undercover work in South America than the natives know about.

Political circles of all shades admit there is a possibility of a serious Nazi menace to South America in general and Argentina in particular. This menace is conceded to hinge on the result of Hitler's war with Europe.

Preventing Germany from gaining the economic control of South America would be one of the most important reasons for the United States rushing to the defence of Brazil, Argentina, and other Latin-American countries. The establishment of bases in South America by the Nazis would definitely endanger the safety of this country.

Picture Changes.

Up until a few weeks ago, the United States could have done little to aid Argentina if she were attacked from bases in Africa. That situation soon may be changed through the acquisition by the American Government of a base in Brazil. How soon the base would be ready for use is not known as yet.

With Europe no longer a market for United States exports, the people engaged in commerce have been looking toward South America as a place to send their goods. No longer are they ignoring this huge continent.

Germany's need for steel and coal has been greatly lowered since its conquest of Norway, Belgium, and France, but the Nazis will feel the lack of cereals and meats this winter. The Germans also need nitrates, quicksilver, and tin. South America, rich in all these things, would prove a valuable prize for Hitler.

Will Germany strike there — and when?

Fierce and canny fighters, these men are at home in the desert, and are slated to play an important role in the defence of the Suez Canal in the event that Germany and Italy attempt to cut that waterway by means of a pincer movement.

Canadians' Club Is Home To Many Nations

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(CP).— The Beaver Club, sumptuous London leave centre for Canadian troops, has become in less than a year one of the busiest, most cosmopolitan spots in this great Empire capital.

When the club was opened last February only Canadian soldiers availed themselves of the facilities provided for their entertainment and relaxation, and they numbered a scant 200 or 300 a week. Then the welcome sign was hung out for Newfoundlanders and attendance increased gradually as the Canadians and Newfoundlanders made new acquaintances among fellow fighters from other nations whom they invited to share the comforts of their club.

Now, nine months after the inauguration, the number of Canadians catered to each week has risen to more than 10,000, and they play host to 2,000 to 3,000 British, Imperial, Free French, Dutch, Polish and Czech soldiers and sailors.

The weekly attendance figures reached 3,000 at the beginning of June. It reached 5,000 by the end of the month and 10,000 about the middle of July. Since mid-August the average weekly attendance has been around 13,000. The week ending Aug. 24 was the busiest yet. The club was used by 14,666 Canadians and Newfoundlanders and 2,083 soldiers from other parts of the world.

Big Business.

It's been a rushing business in all departments of the club. The canteen has had more than 110,000 customers since the club opened. Sales totalling 102,000 were registered by the snack bar and the tuck shop sold more than 60,000 articles.

The culb barbers and valets will agree there are no snappier soldiers on the streets of London than the stalwart Canadians. The barbers have given nearly 9,000 haircuts and the valets have pressed about 3,000 uniforms. And some of the men have done their own pressing.

Eight thousand free tickets to cinemas have been distributed and 4,000 men have been sent around London and home county homes for hospitality. Sightseeing tours around London have been arranged for 6,500 soldiers and sailors—and these Canadian fighting men over here are the most avid of tourists.

Norwood Board Unable To Pay Full Prize List

NORWOOD, Nov. 4.—(ENS)—Due to a considerable deficit, a result of low attendance at the annual Norwood Fall Fair, the directors of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society at a recent meeting voted in favor of paying only 50 per cent of the prize money on amounts of $2 or over. Amounts under $2 will be paid in full. A resolution was also passed authorizing the borrowing of $150, until receipt of the provincial grant next summer.

W. G. Barrie, first vice-president of the Society presided over the meeting which was held in the Norwood council chamber with a small attendance. In a brief address Mr. Barrie expressed the feelings of all present, in the loss of their esteemed president, the late Wellington Burgess, an ardent member of the society for many years. Mr. Burgess died quite suddenly, just a week after the fair this year. On motion of G. A. Brethen and William Montgomery a letter of condolence will be sent to the family of the late Mr. Burgess.

A committee composed of Messrs. W. G. Barrie, G. A. Brethen, and the secretary, R. A. Dean, was appointed to secure more information regarding a communication from F. C. Paterson, Peterborough County representative of the department of agriculture, and make arrangements if deemed advisable. Mr. Paterson in his letter suggested that the society sponsor a series of agriculture meetings or courses in the Norwood town hall. Subjects suggested included: soils and fertilizers, hay and pasture crops, swine breeding and feeding, dairy cattle feeding, poultry production and chop varieties.

Planes Rain Death On Salonika

Military Objectives Withstand Attacks As Bombs Miss Mark

By J. WES. GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

SALONIKA, Greece (By Telephone to Budapest), Nov. 5—(AP).—Fighting against a more numerous and better armed foe, the Greeks today were driving the Italians back into Albania on this northern sector while withstanding furious air attacks which have caused large civilian casualties, but no apparent break in Greek morale.

For three days I have watched Italian planes rain death on this second largest Greek city, but I have not seen one military objective hit or one essential service disrupted.

The city's inhabitants have seen Italian planes crashing in flames and have witnessed roof-to-roof chases between police and fallen Italian airmen in running gun battles.

I was in the centre of this city at the top of the Aegean sea during the first big raid when six bombs fell around my hotel and one bomb hit it squarely. The alarm caught me in the bath. Hurrying to a window as I dressed, I saw a huge geyser of water as the first bomb fell in the bay 60 yards away.

Showered With Glass.

A second later I was showered with glass as two bombs exploded in the street 40 feet away. Rushing

Nazi Sailor Escapes

Hid In Packing Box At Internment Camp

TORONTO, Nov. 5—(CP)—A man identified as Gunther Kray, a German naval officer who escaped early today from an internment camp in Central Northern Ontario, was taken into custody this morning in the Toronto Union Station. He was arrested by a Toronto detective and was said to have reached this city by train.

Kray was taken into custody by Detective John Nimmo after police received a report from a Toronto hotel that a man had asked for some change for English currency. The district was searched and Kray was located at the railway station.

Nimmo said that the man failed to produce a registration card and said he was an Englishman. Kray made no resistance. He was said to have ridden to Toronto beneath a car of a freight train.

Interviewed by newspapermen at police headquarters, Kray said he "crept into a packing case yesterday afternoon, and the case was later nailed up and carried out to a freight train by civilians."

Ross Allen Killed Air Accident

Peterborough Pilot Lost His Life Flying In England

Pilot-Officer D. Ross Allen, of the Royal Air Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, 215 Reid street was reported by the Ministry of Information today to have been killed in a flying accident in England on November 3rd.

This brief and heart-rending message rings down the curtain on a short but brilliant career as a war-time flier. Pilot Allen had distinguished himself in action on September 5th when he piloted a large bomber into the heart of Berlin and wiped out a munitions plant in the face of heavy ground fire. Later in a radio broadcast, he further endeared himself to local people when he mentioned the name of his school-days' girl friend over the air, during the radio interview.

Peterborough has several of her boys in the Royal Canadian Air Force but only Ross Allen and Gerry Wooll of this city had been able to get into the Royal Air Force in England.

Accepted In July 1939

Pilot Allen was accepted in July, 1939, three months before war was declared. In November of the same year he was given the rank of Acting Pilot Officer and in May of this

Concentrated Food

TORONTO, Nov. 5—(CP).—Police said today that a search of Gunther Kray, taken into custody here today after a 16-hour period of freedom from a district internment camp, revealed enough concentrated food to last 18 days. The food, found in his pockets, was in the form of pills and was made up of vitamin concentrates prepared by German chemists.

"It was sent to me in packages from home" police quoted him as saying. "The pills are good and keep you nourished like food. But they are very hard on the nerves and we don't use them if we can help it."

First Casualty

Pilot-Officer D. Ross Allen, Royal Air Force, 23-year-old Peterborough boy, was reported today to have lost his life in a flying accident in England on November 3. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, his father being a well-known grocer. He is the first Air Force casualty from Peterborough since the war started.

Coastal Areas Are Scenes Of Heavy Attack

LONDON, Nov. 5 (CP)—Three German planes were shot down over Great Britain today, the air ministry announced, as the Nazi air force tried in vain to fight past defending Royal Air Force planes and bomb London.

London's four air raid warning of the day came late in the afternoon, but all four warnings were brief.

3 Britishers Lost

The German planes apparently shot down when they tangled with the R.A.F. high over the southeast coast as the Nazis resumed formation attacks after a night of wide-ranging "lone wolf" assaults. The air ministry said three British planes were destroyed, but the pilots were saved.

London had two brief alarms before noon, but no bombs fell in the city and the Press Association said defence fighters had turned raiding squadrons back short of the capital.

British Ship Is Shelled By Battleship

Big British Liner Is Shelled In North Atlantic

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 — (AP). — MacKay Radio reported it had intercepted a message today saying that the 16,689 ton British passenger liner Rangitiki was being "shelled by an enemy ship of the Graf Spee class" in the North Atlantic, halfway between Ireland and Newfoundland.

The liner has been used to remove British children from the war zone. It arrived at Balboa, canal zone, last Aug. 20 with 170 British children and was scheduled to leave immediately at that time for New Zealand.

Mackay said the message indicated the attack was made shortly after 1 p.m. EDT.

The text of the intercepted message:

U.S. Goes To Polls

Presidential Race In U. S. To Be Close

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 — (CP). — Fifty million United States citizens to-day crowd to the polls to choose a new President; Either Franklin Delano Roosevelt, experienced world statesman, or Wendell Lewis Willkie, lawyer and business man seeking his first elective office.

The stake is the office that ranks with the Prime Ministership of Great Britain as the two greatest positions in the world filled by popular vote.

All signs pointed to a close contest.

Mr. Roosevelt, elected in 1932 and re-elected in 1936, shattered all precedents when he accepted a third nomination from the Democratic Party.

Campaigned on Record.

He did so, he has declared, because of the war. He asks a "vote of confidence" and the right to lead the country during these perilous times. He campaigned on his record of aiding Britain to the fullest possible extent "short of war," as a "good neighbor" welding hemisphere solidarity, and as a social reformer who put a floor under wages, a ceiling over hours, and pressed forward with a vast system of pensions, social security, war veterans welfare, and a host of other measures making up "the new deal."

But if the President shattered precedent, so did Mr. Willkie.

Six months ago he was president of the Commonwealth and Southern Company, a utility holding company. He had never held any type of public office. Yet he captured the imagination of many people; won the Republican nomination against competition from others much better known, and staged a strenuous campaign that would have sapped the strength of a weaker man.

He stood up to barrages of stale eggs and staler vegetables; he showed himself to 12,000,000 people; he spoke anywhere and everywhere he could get half a dozen—or many thousands—to listen to him. He forced himself into a position where

In 1936 the voters of Hart's location cast 11 votes for President Roosevelt and four for his Republican opponent, Alf. M. Landon.

Many Italians Already Captured

Fascist Fliers Dropping Supplies To Cornered Men

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Greek forces were reported today in dispatches from Athens and Yugoslavia to have checked the Italian war machine all along the snow-bound mountain front and to have struck back hard at the key supply base at Koritza in Italian-held Albania.

The civilian population of Koritza was said to be evacuating the town as Greek heavy artillery besieged it from heights seized in furious hand-to-hand fighting. Italian forces in the town were reported to number 30,000.

Elsewhere Greek troops were reported to have cut off 4,000 Italian soldiers who penetrated in some unexplained manner behind the Greek lines with the purpose of disrupting communications. The Greeks said they had seized considerable quantities of stores dropped for these men by Italian aircraft.

Nevertheless the Greek civilian population at port cities such as Salonika, Patras and Piraeus appeared to be suffering considerable casualties from Italian air bombing and the women and children of Salonika were reported being sent to surrounding villages to escape an indiscriminate reign of death.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF ROLLIE DENNE

The community of Peterborough experienced a deep emotional shock today in the sudden death of Roland Denne at his home early this morning only a few hours after he was stricken with a heart attack.

To his civic associates of recent years, and especially to the members of the council before whom he had spoken briefly Monday night as a member of a deputation from the Peterborough Exhibition Board, the news of Mr. Denne's death was almost unbelievable. And at the city hall where he had presided as Mayor for seven years, creating a municipal precedent in that long term in office, offices seemed hushed again after the recent domestic bereavement by the strikingly similar death of City Clerk S. R. Armstrong only three weeks ago.

Mr. Denne had appeared to be in good health Monday, and it was recalled today that he had told one of his friends that he had never felt better. In the evening he went to the C.P.R. station to meet his wife who was returning from Toronto where she had visited their daughter, Miss Margaret Denne. From his home he went to the city hall with Harold A. Morrow and several members of the Exhibition Board, a deputation requesting the council to reimburse the Board by paying an outstanding deficit which it was felt the city should assume as a consequence of the negotiations which resulted in converting the Park into a military camp, dispossessing the Exhibition Board until the war ended.

Some time after leaving the city hall, Mr. Denne dropped in at the Peterborough Club as was his custom, and while chatting with friends he complained of a pain that came upon him. It was suggested to him that he go home to bed, but those friends seemingly had no warning of the seriousness of that incipient attack. Death followed swifty about two o'clock this morning.

Meanwhile the council had mentioned him again in a motion by Alderman McCannan, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, proposing that the former mayors of the city be requested to join the finance committee in considering the form of commemoration of the long services of the late S. R. Armstrong as city clerk. It had been suggested that a memorial plaque be placed in the city hall, and the surviving mayors who had been associated with him were recalled in the resolution as follows: T. H. G. Denne, brother of Roland Denne, William H. Buller, Senator J. J. Duffus, Wm. H. Bradburn, W. H. Taylor, A. A. McIntyre, "Roland Denne," John J. Turner, George A. Macdonald and Mayor Hamilton.

So it chanced by one of those little ironies of a life of active service to the public, Rollie Denne returned briefly to the city council chamber in which he had spent some of the most recompensing hours of his manhood, and it can be truly said that they brought their own reward to him because he was sincerely interested in the municipal administration of Peterborough. His work in the city council was a labor of love, and although occasionally it may have flung up criticisms at him it was his nature to take them in his stride and let the future strike the ultimate balance.

Roland Denne was born in Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Denne. The home of his boyhood was on the west side of George street, north of Park Hill Road, formerly Smith street. He attended Central School and the Collegiate Institute, and worked for years with the original dry-goods firm of Richard Hall & Son. Eventually he acquired the flour and feed store which his brother, T. H. G. Denne, had established and continued to operate it on George street until he tranferred it to his own building on Water street. About two years ago he turned the business over to John Arthurs who had long been employed with him as a salesman.

Looking back over the last twenty-five years or more an impression persists that business seemed a secondary interest to Mr. Denne, although no one could say that he neglected it. Municipal affairs had an exceptionally strong attraction to him, and to use his own homely phrases he first got his "feet under the table" when he was elected to the Board of Education in 1915. The King George and Queen Mary schools were probably completed about that year, but subsequently the Prince of Wales school was undertaken while Mr. Denne was a trustee and its erection completed. If they were any doubts about the suitability of its location, and there may have been some, they have since been forgotten.

Chairman of the Board

Chairman of the Board of Education in 1919 and 1920, Mr. Denne retired in 1924, and was elected to the city council in 1925. After

It is strictly optional and may be worn only off duty. Every unit in the Canadian army may select a color design and when it has

Three Subs Sunk Off Gibraltar

LONDON, Nov. 5 — (CP). — A Reuter dispatch from Tangier, international zone of Morocco, today quoted a reliable source to the effect that three Italian submarines had been sunk in the Strait of Gibraltar.

(It was not known whether these included two Italian U-boats officially announced as sunk yesterday).

An Italian submarine took refuge at Tangier after being pursued by British destroyers. It joined another Italian U-boat which previously had taken refuge at Tangier.

Its statement said the eight ships lost did not include the Empress of Britain, 42,348-ton pride of the Canadian merchant fleet whose loss was announced Oct. 28.

British losses were given as two ships totalling 6,874 tons.

The Admiralty communique on the sinking of two submarines said:

"The sinking of the two armed merchant cruisers, coming as it has so shortly after the sinking of the Empress of Britain, constitutes a heavy loss, but although it is unusual for the Admiralty to publish the regular sinkings of U-boats they are able to state that two German U-boats were sunk during this period, one of which was the U-boat responsible for the sinking of the Empress of Britain."

(German claims said the Empress of Britain first was damaged by a German aerial attack and later sunk by a submarine.)

The reference to the two armed merchant cruisers was to the 18,724-ton Laurentic and 11,314-ton Patroclus, whose loss was announced yesterday.

The Admiralty said Axis mercantile losses to October 31 were:

Germany, 226 ships, 1,132,639 tons.
Italy, 72 ships, 365,661 tons.

In addition, the Admiralty continued, 27 other vessels of 44,190 tons which were "under enemy control or useful to the enemy" have been sunk.

This amounted to a total loss to the Axis powers of 325 ships of approximately 1,542,000 tons.

been approved by National Defence Headquarters men of the unit may buy the colored cap and wear it.

The cap has been proving a bit of a headache to the ordnance branch of the Department of National Defence because it has been assigned the duty of approving designs for the various Canadian military units.

So far more than 50 units have submitted cap designs and have been authorized to use the cap of their choice. Defence headquarters says there is no general indication yet how the idea is catching on with the troops, but some officers and men are wearing the new caps now.

The authorization of regimental colored field caps for all ranks gives all soldiers the privilege hitherto enjoyed by men in Highland battalions of wearing fancy head gear when off duty. Since introduction of the battle dress, Highland units have worn khaki Tam O'Shanters instead of the wedge cap but they are authorized to wear the Glengarry cap when of duty.

The only units still without a special cap for off-duty wear are the tank regiments and the Irish regiment of Canada, Toronto. The tank corps wears a black beret on all occasions. The Irish wear a green cap, something like a Tam O'Shanter, for both service and off-duty occasions.

years was fully commissioned as a qualified pilot officer. He has been in the thick of the air battles since early this year, and after the exploit over Berlin, many local people expected he would be decorated.

He was born in this city, and was 23 on his last birthday in March of this year. He received his primary education at the Prince of Wales School, then went to Collegiate where he graduated in 1936. He was active in the Young People's Union of Knox United Church, and played softball for Knox in the City Church League.

After graduation he obtained employment in the laboratory at the C.G.E., then tried his hand at selling. He was working for the Fuller Brush Company when he received the call to report for training in England.

He is survived by his sorrowing parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, three brothers, and two sisters. Tom Allen, B.A. Oxford, now on the staff of Lower Canada College, Montreal, Robert J. Allen, Toronto and William E., at home; E. Ruth Allen, Reg.N., Toronto and Elizabeth M., at home.

His father John Allen is one of the best known merchants in the city, having operated a grocery store at the corner of Sherbrooke and George streets for many years.

Bombed Munitions Factory

The incident on September 5th which attracted the interest of a host of people all across Canada, was the bombing of a munitions factory cleverly hidden in a woods on the outskirts of Berlin. The report of the hazardous flight indicated that the bomber piloted by Allen, had dived on the factory, unloosed a stick of bombs that blew the factory to bits, then continued the attack with incendiary bombs setting fire to a large tract of woodland. All of this action went on amid a terrifying barrage of shell-fire from anti-aircraft batteries on the ground.

When discussing the attack later, Pilot-Officer Allen was asked by the radio commentator what he was thinking about when the raid was on, and he answered "Edith Boddy, back home in Peterborough."

On October 5th, Mr. and Mrs. Allen received a letter from their son in which he described the manifold activities of the Royal Air Force. He said that during the past week, he had taken part in three raids, two on Berlin and one on Frankfort. He tells of the long trips over Germany flying through a hail of anti-aircraft fire that would start as soon as the pilots reached the Dutch coast and following them all along to the Hun capital.

His letter ended thusly, "It is a grand exciting life we are leading now, I hope it continues."

Canon Paterson of All Saints' Church who has been a close friend of the Allen family for years, voiced his deep regret at the loss of a real Canadian hero this morning. He said he had known Ross Allen as a pal for several years, and although the family did not attend All Saints' Church, Ross was well known to the young people of the parish.

One formation was said to have reached the outskirts of the city before being driven off, while a second was reported broken up 40 miles to the southeast.

Bombs were dropped on coastal areas as dogfights raged overhead, and several houses were destroyed.

"Severe weather conditions" on the continent limited sharply the forays of Britain's bomber squadrons last night, but the air ministry nevertheless announced attacks on the Channel invasion ports of Ostend, Belgium, and Boulogne and Le Havre in France with all British planes returning safely.

The alert, in effect only briefly, found rescue squads still removing dead and wounded from the wreckage of a large apartment house which was damaged severely by a hit from a heavy bomb during the night.

Bombs wrecked houses in several southeast areas this morning and caused some casualties as airmen fought high in the sky.

The Press Association said one enemy plane was believed shot down off the coast.

"When they had gone I kicked the board off, went to to the ticket office, bought a ticket and hung around until the early morning train for Toronto. I boarded it and was waiting for another train to take me to Montreal when I was arrested. I hoped to hitch-hike from Montreal across the border and then go to the German Embassy in New York."

Kray, 30, was dressed in civilian clothes he brought with him. He was rescued from waters off Narvik, Norway, by men of the British destroyer Foxhound after his German destroyer had been sunk by H.M.S. Warspite.

"I've had my little joke, had a little freedom and seen a bit of the outside world," Kray told newspapermen.

The prisoner spoke English well and said he had spent some time in New York when he was a member of the German Merchant Marine prior to joining the German Navy in 1932. He said he had been free approximately 16 hours when captured.

The prisoner said that he was a torpedo officer in charge of a special detail on a warship in the battle of Narvik when he was taken prisoner and brought to Canada after a short time in an English prison camp.

WHERE SHOULD A LAXATIVE WORK FIRST?

Most constipation occurs low in the intestinal tract, in the big bowel. Yet many people still take calomel, salts and oils—which all start action at some entirely different place in the bowels—then wonder why they feel "upset!" It's better to use CHOCOLATE FLAVOR CASCARETS. Made with cascara, which is said to give "nearest to natural action" of any cathartic, CHOCOLATE FLAVOR CASCARETS work right in the big bowel—cleansing and giving relief in 10 to 12 hours. Each foil-wrapped tablet a dose. Twelve tablets, only 25c. Taste like fine milk chocolate. For free sample, write "Cascarets", Dept. C-5, Windsor, Ont. (Advt.)

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. —(Advt.)

Death Brings To An End Career Of Roland Denne

three years as an alderman he was elected Mayor, and although the two-year mayoralty term had become a local municipal tradition the citizens retained Mr. Denne in that responsibility until he retired in 1935 to be succeeded by George A. Macdonald.

The death of John Crane created a vacancy in the Peterborough Utilities Commission, and the council appointed Mr. Denne to the post for the rest of Mr. Crane's term in 1935, and since then Mr. Denne has continued by election to be a Commissioner of the city's public utilities.

Director Exhibition

Years prior to his engagement in the city's service Mr. Denne had been a director of the Peterborough Exhibition, and when elected to its presidency he was kept in office continuously for fifteen years. His aspirations in any of these positions were never content to be groundlings. They sought to soar, and as President of the Exhibition Mr. Denne was convinced that it should be elevated to the class of Grade A fairs. And eventually it was, mainly because Rollie Denne had a gift for prompt and firm decisions, fixing a clear goal and shaping every helpful circumstance to that end. Even during the dark days when the Exhibition Board had gone rather deeply into debt, his faith refused to weaken, and it happened that his last effort a few hours before his death was an appeal to the council to relieve the directors of a remnant debt which was left overhanging by the council's unexpected success in its proposal that the Canadian government use the Exhibition Park for military purpose.

Other Interests

Mr. Denne was for many years a member of the Little Lake cemetery board, and it is notable that his brother, Harry Denne, also held that office, and their father, Harry Denne, years before them. He was a member of the Nicholls Park Trust, during the last war he was chairman of the advisory committee of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, and other enterprises often received the advantage of his support.

Courage of Opinions

As mayor of Peterborough during the first five years of the depression that began to loom in 1930 as a new and grave municipal problem, Mr. Denne advised the council to adopt a pay-as-you-go policy in the city's expenditures, and for ten years or thereabouts succeeding councils adhered to that plan, and steadfastly refused to issue any new deebntures.

Here is what George A. Macdonald said to-day about his former associate in the council: "I welcome the opportunity, although I greatly regret it, too, to express my appreciation of the work Rollie Denne accomplished for Peterborough, especially during the years of his mayoralty. I went into the council the year after he entered, and I was chairman of the Finance committee during his last five years as mayor, in that depression period. It was a pleasure to work with Rollie, as I think of him. He always consulted me as chairman of the Finance committee. At no time did he overstep the mayor's privileges. And as we all know his wholeheart was in the welfare of this city and its industrial expansion."

Ratepayers probably have not forgotten that although the council promptly laid out a program of new drains to be constructed and other works to provide employment during those first years of industrial stagnation the council succeeded in reducing the tax rate, and Peterborough became one of three cities of more than 15,000 population to be placed in the first municipal honor roll of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce for having a balanced budget and trimming its sails to sound financing.

Future Justfies Investment.

Beautification of the city was an unfailing interest of Mr. Denne, and a large part of the credit for the Ashburnham Bowl and Riverside Park project should be remembered as his conception. There was criticism of the purchase of the old brewery building, but Mr. Denne contended at the time that the future would justify the investment. He supported the Ashburnham memorial hill site and its enlargement, and converted the triangular lot on the west side of the river at the Auburn power house into a park on which young trees are now flourishing.

These are only a few of the contributions Rollie Denne made to the improvement of Peterborough. One of his disappointments was the decision of the council not to acquire the riverside property offered by the Quaker Oats Company, for the scenic drive he used to visualize from Hunter street to Nicholls Oval along the east bank of the river.

And there are reasons to believe that if he had the choice of fulfilled ambitions it would have been in the dual position of city manager and industrial commissioner.

Rollie Denne had been so long in the municipal service that he had seen through all the spots of buncombe and knew where the genuine values of service operated. But only a handful of citizens approached closely enough to the administration of the ratepayers' affairs to perceive those values as he saw them, and to have the courage to express them. In that respect it is safe to say that Rollie Denne's work in Peterborough was unfinished, and there is no one so well equipped as was he to try to accomplish the things, economies among them, which he perceived as a challenge in behalf of the primary interests of the people of Peterborough.

Only yesterday a prominent business man with a substantial investment in Peterborough enquired of a reporter whether there had been any response to The Examiner's suggestion that Mr. Denne should be appointed industrial commissioner for Peterborough.

"That was a fine idea, and if anybody could get us new industries it would be Rollie Denne. Even if we could get him to act as a dollar-a-year man and pay his expenses to stay around Ottawa I think he would get considerable business for the city. One or two of our industries do that just for themselves and their own advantage; why can't we have some one to act for the city as a whole."

A classic story told by one or two of the men who were there relates to the persistent and successful method he followed in persuading the Johnson Outboard Motor Company to locate their factory in Peterborough. The company had actually decided to acquire a property in Toronto, and it is said they had advanced to the stage at which they were having their stationery printed. Mr. Denne enlisted the help of the late Senator Frank O'Connor and they arranged for a little supper in the O'Connor suite. Accidentally they met the Hon. Peter Heenan and several other men about town in Toronto, and had a pleasant company partly for the purpose of showing these Johnson Motors' people that Peterborough had some friends and standing in Toronto, including a member of the provincial Cabinet. And before that session ended Mr. Denne succeeded in persuading the American visitors to come to Peterborough the next morning, even if they were going to settle down in Toronto. He told them they would probably change their minds, and any way it would not encroach too much on their time.

And that was the turning point in the plans of the Johnson Motor Company, now one of Peterborough's busiest industries, specially equipped for the manufacture of generators and other products needed in the war, and getting a share of contracts. The selling of the idea of locating in Peterborough to that company was the kind of role Mr. Denne would have liked best; and it was only a broad extension of his every day avocation of consistently boosting Peterborough.

The pity of Mr. Denne's death from the standpoint of the community is that the great majority of citizens simply do not know the things Mr. Denne had in mind, are not aware of his special gifts to undertake them, and because of his sudden death and of the opportunity withheld from him they will never realize the loss entailed to them by his untimely death.

The citizens had given him the opportunity of service and he had accepted it to the fullest extent, but its final flowering is now extinguished.

A Defeated Candidate

Mr. Denne tasted a heavy measure of political disappointment in the federal by-election of 1921 when he was the Conservative candidate at the time of the election of G. N. Gordon, K.C. Three other candidates were J. H. Burnham, whose resignation as the Conservative member for West Peterborough hastened the dissolution of the Meighen government; James Campbell and Thos. J. McMurray.

It was characteristic of Mr. Denne that this setback to a natural ambition did not embitter him, and he went on from that stage to the splendid record of civic service which his generation will always gratefully remember.

Loved George Street.

Rollie Denne was essentially a 'main-streeter.' Others could take time out for hunting and holidaying, and spend summer months at some lake, but these attractive relaxations did not appeal to him. He preferred his home on Simcoe street, near the corner of Queen street, because it was close to the centre of the city. He would rather walk or drive around Peterborough to observe new houses in course of construction, new factory additions, and only yesterday he was what might be termed worrying about the prospect of a large increase in the factory employment early in the new year without sufficient new houses going up to accommodate them.

"Everybody should try to do his bit for the city," was his guiding thought; "it should not all be left to a little handful in the council....Peterborough is going to be quite a city some day, and what we do now will have an affect on the city of that day which we cannot estimate."

To those who knew him best the genuineness of those sentiments are deeply understood, and to them, also, will come in these first hours after his death, a feeling of frustration that seemed to seize him of late, that there was much more he would like to try to do, if he could but have the opportunity.

Mr. Denne is survived by his wife, formerly Margaret Roy, and two daughters, Mrs. William Sims of Kitchener, and Miss Margaret Denne of Toronto; his brother, T. H. G. Denne of this city, and his sisters, Mrs. W. B. Schulte of Freeport, Ill., Mrs. W. H. Graham, Mrs. T. H. Bell, and the Misses Gertrude, Margaret and May Denne of this city.

He was a member of Peterborough Lodge 155, A.F. and A.M.

The funeral of Mr. Denne will take place Thursday at 2:30 p.m. from St. John's Church to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson will conduct the service.

said has been shelled by Greek heavy artillery from heights seized in fierce bayonet charges. The Greeks also were reported to have captured the town of Biglista, three miles northwest of the Greek-Albanian frontier on the way to Koritza).

The high command declared the Greek shock troops won another hill yesterday in the successively-captured chain of heights around Koritza. Greeks already have occupied positions on Mount Morava, commanding the troops and supply road the Italian used for their drive toward Phlorina and Salonika.

Surrender Imminent.

Advices from the front did not estimate the number of Italian soldiers already reported captured behind the Greek lines, but said the surrender of the remainder of the 4,000 men was imminent.

The Italians were said to have been sent behind the Greek lines to cut communications. Quantities of supplies, including a portable wireless set, were reported seized after they were dropped from Italian planes for the cornered troops.

(The dispatches did not explain how the troops got behind the Greek defence line).

Prisoners were reported captured, and abandoned trench mortars, machine-guns and war material were reported seized by the Greeks at several places along the battle line as Greek counter attacks kept the Italian invasion stalled.

Piraeus Bombed.

A communique said Italian planes bombed the port of Piraeus, Patras, Volos and numerous other towns again yesterday, causing civilian casualties, but accomplishing no damage to military objectives.

Italian tanks and troops concentrations were reported bombed and machine-gunned by Greek planes.

The Greeks reported one plane lost and five Italian planes shot down by machine-gun fire in Epirus, killing an Italian staff major and three other fliers.

Emanuele Grazzi, Italian Minister to Greece, left Athens last night with his legation staff en route home by way of Yugoslavia. The Greek Government asked that he leave.

ation of the German U-boat menace and the handicaps imposed on the British navy by the neutrality of Eire.

Mr. Churchill expressed confidence that the Navy would find means of beating the U-boat campaign which in recent weeks has taken a heavy toll of British, Allied and neutral shipping on the North Atlantic.

The fact Britain is not able to use bases on the south and west coasts of Eire to refuel submarine-hunting destroyers and aircraft "is a most heavy and grievous burden and one which should never have been placed on our shoulders, broad though they may be," the Prime Minister declared.

Mr. Lees-Smith, who has acted as a substitute for a leader of the opposition since the labor leaders joined Mr. Churchill's government, went even further, suggesting that if Britain could use Lough Swilly and Berehaven on the Eire coast, the U-boat campaign might be transformed in a night.

Price Britain Is Paying

The time is coming, he said, when the United States and other countries interested in Irish independence should understand the price Britain is paying for her principles.

"You know what Hitler would do about those ports," the Labor spokesman added significantly.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former Secretary for War, went the furthest of all, calling on Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Erie to hand back for the duration of the war the ports Britain gave up under the Irish treaty while Irish-born J. J. Tinker, Labor, proposed the same thing in the interest of a united Ireland after the war.

The Prime Minister said that although German submarines have taken a heavy toll of shipping, Britain's tonnage is almost as big as when the war broke out. A steady toll is being taken in underwater craft, two having been destroyed in the Western Approaches the last two or three days, including the one that sank the liner Empress of Britain.

There have been many demands on the Navy, particularly since the collapse of France. Mr. Churchill added, but new construction is coming into service and the 50 United States destroyers will be extremely useful.

Turning to air raids, the Prime Minister announced that 14,000 civilians had been killed and 20,000 seriously wounded since the first big attack eight weeks ago. Property damage, particularly in London, had been severe but it could be handled by the government insurance scheme.

Damage to war industries, more especially aircraft factories, has been slight and none of the essential services, such as electricity, water and gas, had broken down, he went on. Transport was a bigger problem, "but we are getting a good grip on that."

Points Established.

Reviewing the war position, Mr. Churchill made the following main points:

1. A naval and air base has been established in Greece and "I can only say now we shall do our best."

2. The rise in U-boat sinkings is "more serious than air raids," and the inability to use the ports of Eire constitutes "a heavy and grievous burden" upon the Navy.

3. The 50 United States destroyers are coming into service "when most needed" and merchant tonnage is still "very nearly" what it was at the outbreak of war.

4. "Unhappily" the Vichy Government is engaged in "sincere and loyal collaboration with Hitler" and Britain is "therefore left alone."

5. Vigilance has changed the invasion danger to the "invasion scare."

6. Although sea and air are the main elements of the war effort, "we must have a strong army to avoid a disastrous stalemate."

7. On the home front and in the Mediterranean "we are far better off" than could be predicted four or five months ago.

The Prime Minister called the ratio of one British casualty to each 20 Italians in North Africa "a good augury for the greater battles which will develop, if not in the winter, certainly in the spring."

In the air war, he said bombing of military objectives in Italian cities and bases in South Italy "will continue on an ever-growing scale."

German air raids have done "very little" damage to British munitions and aircraft production and no utility in the great cities "has broken down" although transport has been "a greater difficulty," Mr. Churchill declared.

He said shelters are being "multiplied and improved."

Historic Victory

Germany's failure to invade "when we stood alone," constitutes "one of the historic victories of British Isles—and is a monumental milestone of our forward march," Mr. Churchill averred.

He said the weekly average casualties in September were 4,500 and in October 2,500, but the Royal Air Force was destroying "three enemy machines" to each British loss and the enemy was losing from six to 10 pilots to one for Britain.

Air power, "the indispensable precursor of victory," and sea power, which will move "considerable armies" in 1943 and 1944, led him to conclude that "I personally have no doubt whatever that we shall make our way through all right."

Britain's large army, "improved in equipment and training," must be "constantly imbued with a spirit of counter attack," he added, and nothing be done to "retard or impair" its development.

For what it lacks in numbers compared with "Nazi or Fascist hosts" it must make up in "quality and equipment."

Britain has 1,700,000 men in the Home Guard, "all of whom will be in uniform by the end of the year" and nearly 1,000,000 have rifles and machine guns, he announced.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, in a similar war review to the House of Lords, said Germany's "recently redoubled efforts to starve us into surrender" would fail, that Britain has made "the cause of Greece our own" and that "Turkey constitutes a very solid barrier against aggression."

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Lead Winnipeg Grain ... ...t

WINNIPEG, Nov. 5 — (CP). — With United States markets closed for the Presidential election there was little to stimulate wheat dealings at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange during the early part of today's session. Prices remained unchanged at fixed minimum levels of 71⅝ cents a bushel for the December future and 75⅝ cents for May. July wheat did not open.

Trade in the coarse grain pit was thin with only a few routine orders in oats, barley and flax reported. Rye was practically neglected.

Reports from Buenos Aires indicated the Argentine would have an exportable wheat surplus of between 110,000,000 and 120,000,000 bushels in the crop years beginning January 1. So far this year the Argentine has exported almost 124,000,000 bushels.

into the hall, I encountered C. L. Sulzberger, New York Times correspondent. Together we started toward a stairway when a bomb struck the roof a few feet ahead.

Neither of us was hurt. A few seconds later the raid was over. In air thick with dust we looked into rooms just three doors away from our own and found them in ruins. Outside, a dead fisherman lay a few yards from the hotel.

A few fires were burning in the central business district, the hardest hit, and firemen quickly were on the job.

Near a blazing bus and building, two wounded men lay by a wall which appeared ready to collapse. Despite warning shouts, two boys in the uniform of the Metaxas youth organization rushed forward and dragged them to safety.

I was to see many such scenes in the next few days, both by these youths and volunteer Red Cross workers.

This was the first of five raids Friday and six Saturday. Many casualties were reported among women and children when bombs hit a residential section, smashing small homes to bits.

Six Italians Brought Down.

Greek anti-aircraft batteries brought down six attacking planes. Observers believed this performance accounted for Italian caution in attacking the city on Monday, when two alarms were sounded but no planes were sighted.

I saw four captured Italian airmen as they were being questioned. None looked to be more than 18 years old and they admitted having but a few hours' flying experience.

Many Greeks, after the first day, have been taking the raids almost as if they were routine. Air raid trenches are being dug.

Reports from the front tell of steady Greek victories as utilization of Greece's full military power proceeds. Mobilization was completed in four days, but supplies and men still are moving along the roads in the direction of the front.

Pass Ist Das

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(CP).— The crew of a Royal Air Force bomber returning from a raid on Hamburg switched the radio to "transmit" and put on a burlesque of German news in English, followed by songs from the operas of Gilbert and Sullivan. When caught by a large concentration of searchlights, the wireless operator shouted into his set: "Dis is Goering here. Put out dose flaming lights."

Home and School Association News

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL.

"Use and Abuse of Leisure Time" was the interesting topic chosen by Mr. Don Crawford when he spoke on Monday night at a meeting of Queen Alexandra Home and School Association. He first stressed the misuse spent reading comics, and condemned attendance at too many movies, and affiliation with too many organizations. Good use of leisure time was suggested by sports, plenty of outdoor play; good reading, and useful hobbies, such as stamp collecting, wood-wrking, regular duties assigned to each child, and last, but not least, the newspaper carrier.

Gems of literature were also read by Mr. Crawford, who placed the reading of the Bible at the head of all literature.

The meeting opened with "O Canada" and the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. C. C. Doughty, president, was in the chair, and reports were heard from all the various committees.

Miss B. Thompson's room won the attendance for mothers. Interspersing the business meeting were two piano solos by Sheila Smith, and two vocal solos by Hugh and Wallace Graham, with their mother, Mrs. S. J. Graham, at the piano.

Mrs. C. McBride and Mrs. Edgar Simmons read reports on the Regional Conference held in Lindsay on October 25, and an interesting paper on 'Peace" was presented by Mrs. V. R. Henry. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

CENTRAL SCHOOL

Excellent reports, including a paper by Mrs. D. Dickson on the Regional Home and School Conference in Lindsay; of the Local Council of Women meeting by Mrs. Fowler; of the service at All Saints' Church Sunday evening by Mrs. H. Ballard, religious convener, who also reported on the Leadership Class conducted at the Y.W.C.A. by the Home and School Council, were given Monday night at a meeting of Central Home and School Association. The meeting was held in the kindergarten room, and opened with "O Canada" and the Lord's Prayer. Minutes were read by Mrs. H. Borland, secretary.

Announcement was made of the annual "Open House" to be held on Thursday, November 14, when parents are invited to visit classrooms from three to four o'clock in the afternoon, at which tea and cookies will be served by the association. An interesting class project, an electrical map made by boy students, was displayed by Mr. Nicholls.

Mr. R. J. Bolton, principal of the school, gave an address on "Education for Democracy in War and Peace," in which he stated that the chief idea in the mind of many today is to win the war, and the peace that comes after. He stressed the value of education, urging parents to do their utmost to withhold it, and commended the good work of Home and School Associations.

A well presented program included a playlet "The Sleeping Beauty," presented, in costume, by pupils of Miss Bonnycastle's room. Musical numbers included a violin solo by Jack Sutcliffe, accompanied by Raymond Sutcliffe, and two piano solos by Patsy Martin. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

"Supervision of the school child's health marks the new era of medicine," said Dr. R. F. Nott, school medical health officer, at the Queen Mary Home and School Association meeting Monday night. "Modern medicine emphasizes prevention rather than cure, and the Board of Education has taken a forward step along this line by having the school child examined periodically," he said, and stated that after examination the child is placed in category A, B, or C. Into "A" goes the obviously healthy child, and into "B" the child about whom the examiner is doubtful, who is later thoroughly checked and promoted either to "A" as perfectly healthy, or to "C," to which all defectives belong.

Steps are then taken to acquaint the parents of the condition discovered, the speaker explained, and the immediate attention of the family physician is recommended. The school nurse is most helpful at this time—she goes directly to the home, or by letter informs the parents of the situation and the doctor's recommendation. The former procedure is more often followed, as letters are sometimes misconstrued, Dr. Nott stated. The case is kept in sight until full co-operation has been obtained, and the child's health shows improvement.

Dr. Nott said that within the last six months several cardiac conditions were discovered in the city schools. Because of the immediate attention received, these children will grow up into useful, healthy citizens, preventing a state of cardiac invalidism in earlier adult life. Ontario is acclaimed by Dr. Nott as a model of Public Health Service for all the world to follow.

The singing of the National Anthem opened the meeting, at which Mrs. L. Ingram presided, and Mrs. C. H. Crowe reported on the Regional Conference held at Lindsay on October 25. Mrs. T. J. Carley reviewed recent happenings in the war zones, and community singing of patriotic songs was led by Mr. Charles Shaw.

Mary Louise Leslie and Mary Jane Wharry, accompanied at the piano by Miss Agnes Mayock, A.T.C.M., entertained with two well rendered violin duets. The senior attendance banner was won by Miss Stenton's class, and the junior banner by Miss Madill's class. The meeting adjourned with a vote of thanks by the president to the speaker and others taking part in the program.

Doris W. Frost Is Wed To Harold E. Jones

Vari-colored chrysanthemums and quantities of fern adorned the Salvation Army Temple for the marriage on Saturday of Doris Winifred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Frost, 299 Rubidge street, to Harold Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jones, Patterson street. Adjutant Norman Buckley officiated. Mrs. S. Richardson played the wedding music, and during the signing of the register Miss B. Craig sang "O Promise Me."

Mr. F. Frost gave his sister in marriage. She wore a gown of double embroidered net over satin, fashioned with leg-o'-mutton sleeves and high neckline outlined with white velvet daisies. The graceful skirt flowed into a train, and her circular veil of embroidered net was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of American Beauty roses. Miss Dolly Frost attended her sister, wearing blue net appliqued with pink velvet daisies, made with bouffant skirt and pretty matching bolero. Her blue net coronet was sprinkled with tiny pink daisies, and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of baby chysanthemums. Mr. Arthur Jones was groomsman for his brother, and ushers were Mr. J. Craig and Mr. K. Bolam.

A reception was held in the Sunday School hall, where Mrs. Frost received in a gown of soldier blue, with black hat and accessories, and corsage of red roses. Mrs. Jones, mother of the bridegroom, wore a corsage of yellow roses attached to her regulation Salvation Army uniform.

The bridal couple left for a short wedding trip, Mrs. Jones travelling in a smartly tailored tweed coat over a green frock, with accessories to match. They will live at 255 Reid street on their return.

The Stars Say . . .

For Wednesday, November 6

DIFFICULT and dubious situations are the auguries based on adverse positions of major planets. Although there are portents of many trying and stubborn issues, with things pulling, discordantly, both ways, yet good judgment, well-organized plans and efficient executive ability might switch menacing circumstances into profitable and gratifying channels.

Those whose birthday it is have a prophecy of a year in which their sound ideas, expansive urges, and fine abilities may assist them through dangerous shoals, where dogged and determined situations must be wisely navigated.

A child born on this day may have some definitely conflicting traits of character to be composed, having large and expansive aims as well as being actuated by grasping, crafty, selfish and morbid ideals. Yet a fine social sympathy should dominate eventually, giving popularity and prestige.

The Brave People Of Greece

One report tells of a heavy snowfall in the mountains where the Italian troops are now seeking to find their way into Greece. That will make the going hard because if one mountain is crossed there will be another not far off. Greece is like that to a very great extent. In size it looks about the same as England, but on account of the number of mountains it never could support a great population. A safe enough estimate is that not one-fifth of its area is fit for cultivation.

There are no railway lines which the invading force could seize to help the transportation of troops or material, and there are few continuing roads in much of the country. Italy may succeed in taking a quantity of its mechanized equipment on its journey, but the going will be difficult and it will be dangerous. The Greeks depend largely on their coastal steamers to connect various parts of their country. There are virtually no rivers of importance, and nearly all of them become dry in summer. But there are lakes.

Greece has not developed as an industrial nation. Education is eagerly sought after by the young people, and much of it is literary in its scope. That has had the tendency of turning many of the young men toward law, writing, etc., and very few of them toward the industries. But the beauty of design is something which has never left Greece. The nation has seen wars; it has been conquered and it has again been freed.

There was something which caught the fancy and admiration of the world when Greece replied at once to the Italian ultimatum. Three short hours were granted in which to furnish the answer, and in only a few moments Greece had used the plain and readily understood word "NO."

Since then the Greeks have shown they meant exactly what they said. They have been fighting from the start, and they have been inflicting losses on the Italians and bogging down the advance of the invader. The country is subject to extremes of climate; it is hot in summer and cold in winter and snow lies heavy upon the mountains and in the passes between. One can only hope that the snow keeps on falling and the progress of the Italian army is so impeded that ultimate defeat will be certain.

Has He Any Facts?

M. J. Coldwell, Dominion chairman of the C.C.F., appears to be quite certain that wealth and industry are not doing their share in the war effort. That was the text of his address at a dinner meeting in Toronto, and Mr. Coldwell was certain the time had arrived for the Dominion government to take out of private hands all industry engaged in the war effort. The five per cent. margin of profit regulation had gone by the boards, and the industrialists had refused to take contracts on that basis. So by inference the plea of Mr. Coldwell was that industrialists were having their own way and were making a good deal of money.

We do not profess to know on what facts Mr. Coldwell based his charge. He may know just how much profit is being made, while the average man does not. Frequently we see long lists of contracts which have been placed for all manner of military equipment, stores and supplies, but only the name of the firm and the extent and nature of the contract is stated. The amount of estimated profit is not stated. If Mr. Coldwell knows this figure then it would have been interesting to have it published. Our own belief is that Mr. Coldwell does not know the extent of the profit in these contracts.

If one can judge the extent of profits by the performance of the stock prices on the open market and by the amount of dividends which are being paid by some of the war-busy plants then things must be going along just about as usual. In the last war there were stocks known as "war babies," and the price of them mounted rapidly because they had contracts and they were making a great deal of money. The dividends were actually much larger than anything which had ever been received in normal times.

If one follows through the history of some of these companies it will be found that a year ago their value started to increase. There was the anticipation that they would go in for making munitions and war equipment and would therefore be again paying large dividends or bonuses. Today the market value of these stocks has gone down. We can think of one which actually doubled for a time. The dividends have never increased and the plant is full of war orders. The experience of shareholders in the last war is not being repeated at present.

One can look at the stock list and go over the prices of today and find them much less than they were at the beginning of the year. Mr. Coldwell may have information which others do not possess, but on the face of it, and judging by the evidence of market performance and declared dividends, one must come to the conclusion that no melons are being cut for the shareholders. There is a restraining influence at work some place. The effect of increasing taxation is undoubtedly being felt and the increased taxation goes back to the government. If Mr. Coldwell had information to show that industry was—or is—not doing its share, and that undue returns are being made we think he should have presented it rather than taking in so much territory by a mere general statement.

Where Is The Control?

The clerk of a hotel in Kitchener called the police station and asked that officers be sent to eject two brothers who were fighting. The brothers were members of a regiment stationed there, and the trouble was going on in the beverage room. The trouble appeared to be settled and the policemen, two in number, left. It was not long until another call and still a third was sent for more police. In the end seven were on the scene and a couple of provincial officers went to their assistance. The report describes the scene as being one "where a hundred more citizens and soldiers milled about." One policeman had three teeth knocked out when he received a blow in the mouth. The chief of Kitchener police says he is going to ask for an investigation, and it can be taken for granted that the military authorities will not view such an event with composure. It is too drastic a departure from the splendid discipline for which Canadian training centres are noted.

There is something in this case, and in others, which keepers of beverage rooms will note. That is if they are wise. They cannot be unaware of the feeling that beverage rooms should be closed during the years of the war, nor can they have overlooked the fact that the country went dry in the last war in the interests of national sobriety.

An affair such as that in Kitchener does not pass unnoticed. It is regarded as evidence that there is no control being exercised in the operation of the beverage room. There had undoubtedly been too much selling done to some of the patrons. They had probably been served after it should have been apparent they should have nothing more to drink.

The operation of beverage rooms is pretty much up to those who own or manage them because there is so little of what can be called "control" coming directly from the Liquor Control Board. Every time there is trouble reported it adds to the feeling that beverage rooms are getting out of hand. Let that feeling grow for a while and the demand for voting them out will increase.

Many Watch The Price

One plain factor in the present bacon situation is that any price change affects a great many producers at the same time. The Bacon Board at Ottawa announced a reduction of 70 cents per 100 pounds on the price of Wiltshire sides for export, and that has become effective. There has not been a new agreement made with the British government authorities, and at the moment it is not actually known what the new contract price will be.

The first quotation we noticed after that reduction had been announced brought dressed hogs down to $10.75 against a previous figure of $11.25. A hog weighing 200 pounds live weight should dress about 74 per cent. of that weight, or close to 148 pounds. So that should mean about $15.90 or $16 per hog, being close to 8 cents per pound on the old basis of the computing according to live weight. At the moment there appears to be some doubt as to where the figure of the new contract will register as Minister of Agriculture J. G. Gardiner and Hon. J. G. Taggart, chairman of the Bacon Board, are still in London working on the new agreement.

The Turnip Goes Fancy

The turnip looks as though it were starting to go high-hat. We have seen some of those turnip waxing stations in operation, and there the turnip is scrubbed, given a coating of wax, the idea of which is to seal the cut end, and then there is a little sticker placed on the top giving the name of the place from which the turnip was sent forth.

We have seen it stated that when the turnips get well down into the deep South of United States they reach the high mark of appreciation. They have nothing down there which tastes like a turnip, and they like them. The one advantage about the turnip is that one can eat great mounds of it with no harm; it is not high in food value but gives one the passing feeling that he has indeed fared well.

This waxing process is quite different to the way the turnips were used and regarded on the Tenth Concession. One could never be too sure whether the crop was going to be good or not. Might look all right and then slugs would come and feed themselves on the tops.

Taking them in used to come along about this time of year and on occasion we would run into a day when there had been a little snow and a mean and a cold wind. You would feel like wearing a pair of mitts but they'd get sopping wet.

Turnips seemed to be present a good many months in the year. When they were young things they were good to eat raw, the only move necessary being to rub the thing off on the trousers to take the dirt off. If a touch of salt was handy so much the better. In the barn there were more turnips and they had to go through the chopper or cutter. It was a crude old affair with knives on the spokes of a big wheel which had to be turned by hand. It was apt to cut off great flat slices and then if these got into the cow feed some silly cow would get one of those slabs down its throat and choke. The rather flexible handle of an old buggy whip was about the best thing to poke down the throat and shove the turnip past the cross roads.

Turnips were served on the tables all along the Tenth, and there was no wax on them and no fancy stickers. There was something wrong with the individual who did not go for the turnips, and if we did not finish them off at dinner time there was always the certainty they would be warmed over for the evening meal. The turnip travelled along with us for more months in the year than anything else; we saw them in the field; in the barn; on the table in the house and in the cow feed and also in the pit and in the root bin. You couldn't move without coming in contact with a turnip. And they never went through a waxing plant and emerged with a bright little sticker. Turnips seem to be looking up recently.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Spanish minister inspecting troops in the Canary Islands made the claim that "Spain is marching toward her grandeur." We have an inelegant word for that kind of speech and it is just plain: "Applesauce."

In reference to industrial development, we notice where an English firm which makes mining machinery has decided to locate in Canada, and officials were welcomed at a meeting of citizens in Woodstock. It pays to have a man in the watch tower looking out for these developments.

Joe Louis, No. 1 fist fighter in United States, says he is ready to enter the army as a private, "and do anything they want me to do." Our suggestion would be that he take on Hitler or Mussolini at one and the same time. We'd be inclined to strain a point to be in attendance.

Four ministers of the Australian government rode in the same plane, and that is against the regulations of that country. Some time ago three ministers were killed in a crash, and then the ruling was made that only two could ride together.

THEY ALL KNEW

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When Clem was but a little lad, his school work was uncommon bad, he never ranked as smart; the teacher kept him after four, and when he'd gone and closed the door, he took Clem all apart.

¶ He told him he could not succeed, that he would early be in need, no future was in sight; he'd be run down around the heels, he'd have to beg to get his meals, coax lodging for the night.

¶ But all Clem did when he got home, was head off to an attic room, and there he blew a horn; and when he got himself up there, with strangled notes he filled the air, at night and noon and morn.

¶ And neighbors grumbled and they laughed, they said that Clem was somewhat daft, felt sorry for him too; they sometimes reasoned with the lad, he needed most of all the gad, but Clem just blew and blew.

¶ Clem took his horn when he left home, and blew it like 'twas never blown, a famous chap was he; he made more money from his horn, than men did growing spuds and corn, or apples on a tree.

¶ And now that Clem has made his mark, they've named for him the village park, he handed them the deed; and neighbors gather round to say, they always knew that he could play—expected he'd succeed.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THE Toronto Symphony Orchestra gave its first concert of the present season a week ago today. It was an agreeably pre-war occasion; there was the same pleasant air of excitement and gaiety about Massey Hall; there was the same milling [illegible] shoving of the great and the [illegible] great in the aisles and foyers; there was the same creditable display of evening dress. There were the same ushers dressed in red uniforms, the same blue programs, and the same program notes lifted from the same books of reference and couched in the same facetious and patronizing tone that is the prerogative of program annotators. It was all as we expected it to be, and most of it was excellent.

C & B

Massey Hall is a fearful and wonderful edifice, but it has the one overwhelming advantage of possessing good acoustics. Now that a part of the Symphony program is broadcast, one of the little boxes on the left-hand side of the stage is used for a radio-control room. Here, where we had always expected a veiled houri to lean down and toss a rose into the midst of the string section, sit two stern-faced men with a black box. Through a window in the wainscotting we can see the announcer, alone with his soul and his microphone; as each piece nears its completion he rises, clears his throat, and peers anxiously through his window into the hall to see how the orchestra is be relied upon to finish according to getting along, and whether they can schedule. This adds a certain amount of comic relief to the most serious program.

C & B

The opening program was by no means serious. It opened somewhat portentously with Beethoven's Egmont Overture. The program note on this piece began: "Any who may have read Motley's 'Rise of the Dutch Republic' will know the ambitious and tragic figure of Egmont...." Personally we have not read Motley's work, and we wouldn't mind making a small bet that the man, who wrote the note, hasn't read it either. The orchestra was in good trim and played excellently in Egmont. Next followed the surprise of the evening, Berlioz' "Harold in Italy" Symphony. This work is not often performed. It contains some fine passages, but on the whole it is unsatisfactory as a symphony and as a concerto. It is made up of four romantic scenes; the traveller Harold finds himself in mountainous country among revelling brigands and chanting pilgrims and other denizens of the romantic wilderness which was the mind of Hector Berlioz. The symphony has an obligato for solo viola; at no time is the viola allowed to hold the attention for more than a couple of minutes, and is frequently expected to compete with the full orchestra playing its loudest. Nevertheless it was adventurious and wise of the Toronto Symphony to perform this work. Its merit is sufficiently great to justify its appearance on their program about once every five years. Berlioz is a composer known to most concert-goers by a handful of works, and it is interesting and stimulating to hear this symphony which is one of his most characteristic, though not one of his best, productions. William Primrose, the celebrated English violist, played the obligato with taste, but with slight appreciation of the romantic gusto of the work.

C & B

THE program also included a performance of a Ballade for Viola and String Orchestra, written by Godfrey Ridout. Mr. Ridout is a Torontonion, a member of the faculty of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and is twenty-two years old. It was not altogether a happy chance that caused his fragile piece to be played after Schubert's magnificent and exuberant Fifth Symphony, written when that composer was only nineteen. The Ballade is continually reminiscent of Delius, and particularly the Delius of "A Village Romeo and Juliett." Mr. Ridout's work has the same sort of charm and delicacy, but it is to be hoped that he will soon desert this imitation of a style which could prove dangerous to a young composer. Delius' mannerisms were the outcome of his own curious character; there was good reason for him to see life through a blue-grey haze. We doubt if Mr. Ridout will care to imitate him for long. His composition showed a knowledge of how to orchestrate effectively for strings, and a very pleasant sense of form. He is to be congratulated upon the excellent performance which Mr. Primrose and the orchestra gave his work, and we hope that we shall soon hear another composition by him. Canada needs composers badly, and Mr. Ridout has made a good start.

C & B

The concert closed with a performance of Bach's "Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor," arranged for orchestra by another member of the faculty of the Toronto Conservatory, Mr. Ettore Mazzoleni. This work has been played before by the orchestra and always manages to cause discussion as to whether or not it is superior to arrangements of the same piece by Stokowski and Respighi. Many musicians as well as laymen will always think that it sounds best played on the organ, for which Bach intended it. Certainly Mr. Mazzoleni's pyrotechnics seemed little related to the composition as it appears in the organ version.

C & B

Not only Toronto but all of Ontario has cause to be grateful to Sir Ernest Macmillan who has built up this excellent orchestra from a handful of theatre musicians. It would be an admirable thing if arrangements could be made for the Toronto Symphony to visit some of the other cities of the province during the course of its season.

• Living and Working With Bombs

The following excerpts from a letter written by a London merchant to a friend in Montreal throw further light on the heroic manner in which the British people are meeting Hitlers' onslaughts.

WE all hope over here that you understand how much we appreciate the help you are giving us, and we also hope that you appreciate how very badly we want that help, and even more.

Well, we are certainly having a rough time. The damage done in London was very considerable, but almost all of it confined to non-military objects. The Huns, having failed completely to get superiority in the air, are unable to do effective daylight attacks. So they just keep everybody's nerves on edge, and interfere with production as much as they can by making attacks all day and every day, which very, very seldom succeed in getting into London, and all night they send over planes, two or three at a time in groups dotted about over London, and, of course, succeed in getting through without much difficulty, and doing a lot of damage.

It is of course quite impossible for me to explain to you the atmosphere that we live in, but I will give you a rough outline of my personal life, which may give an indication of what life is to all people in London in my position. People living in crowded areas, without the facilities of their own shelter, of course are having a very much rougher time; they have to go into public shelters each night, and their houses are so crowded together that when a bomb falls it does a hell of a lot of damage. Their spirit is, however, marvellous—quiet contempt for Hitler and all his works, there was on the day the war started, and no more signs of panic now than I cannot express to you the admiration I have for these poor people. Compared to them the life of those of us who are fortunate enough to be better off is a bed of roses. We have a good many of our people whose homes have been wrecked, and they all display the same calm indifference to the whole thing, as if it had been caused by a cloudburst, or some phenomena of nature, and was quite unavoidable.

Now to our own life. We get into the office about half past eight, generally during an air raid. We start work as if there were nothing the matter, except that we have a watcher on the roof, and people with whistles all over the building, and if the watcher sees or hears the bombs near, or sees any planes near us, he gives the signal and everybody goes down into the dugout. When the raids first started, they caused us a great dislocation of work, because we used to go down into the dugout for the whole of the warning, but when this got to be five, six, or even seven hours of the day, we gave it up, and adopted the present system, which so far has worked very well.

We go home about 5:30 to 6 in the evening in the car, very often having to go a roundabout route owing to demolition, and having dinner at seven, the wife and the servant and I all in our pyjamas sit about listening to the radio until about 8 to 8:30, when the warning for the night raids goes. We then just go up to the dugout, where we have bedding, taking a portable radio with us, listen to the program till about 10 o'clock, and try to sleep. The racket all night from the guns is really great, and when I say it's great, I speak with some experience of the Western Front in the last war. The All-Clear for the night raids generally goes just about daylight, say to 5:30 in the morning, but if we are awake, well, we don't get up but just stop there till 7 o'clock, get up and have breakfast, and I come down to business.

This is just a plain, unvarnished description of how we spend our life; we haven't actually slept in our beds for sixteen days now. It doesn't sound too pleasant, and it isn't, because the nervous strain is pretty high, but still one's getting used to it, and anyway we've got to stick it out, and we shall stick it out, until we've given the Huns something that they're giving us.

• The Answer to the Cesarewitch

The dictators simply do not understand the English, says the Ottawa Journal.

HITLER won't understand it, nor Mussolini, nor Stalin. But the fact remains that yesterday the English held their famed Cesarewitch, one of the greatest of their four great racing events of the year. Just as in the old days of peace a despatch from Newmarket tells all about it; how Edward Esmond's Hunter's Moon, a French-bred four-year-old colt by Foxhunter from Pearl Opal, came down the last stretch to the cheers of thousands to nose out Sir Pomm and King Legend and pay his lucky backers more than two pounds for ten shillings.

Thus the people that are being "starved" by Hitler's blockade and "exterminated" by Goering's bombers! They just don't know what is happening to them; don't know that they're being beaten. It is one of their old characteristics.

A few years ago a Dutch novelist wrote a book entitled: "The English —Are They Human?" The writer answered the question by saying the English were so human, so reserved, shy and sentimental, so fond of dogs and birds and horses, so full of sport and sportsmanship, that other peoples, less human, failed to understand them.

That, too, is the answer to the Cesarewitch. The answer of a people who can fight and suffer cheerfully, without hate or malice; who are so free from murderous rancor and fanaticism that they can play their old games in the shadow of tragedy. They are suffering—suffering desperately. Their great cities, their homes, their shrines, the temples of their faith, all the things that tell of their greatness, are being crumpled into dust. Yet through bitter days and black nights of terror they keep their courage, their humor, their old games and ways.

This is the England men love. The England of neat hedges and lovely gardens, of green fields and chalk cliffs, of quiet countryside and old walled cities under mist; the England of men and women who love dogs and horses and have kindness for animals and play at games and love sport for sport's sake. The England which is the sepulchre of heroes and warriors, of poets and statesmen, of men who have nurtured liberty and cherished its growth.

It is the England that cannot be beaten; that can never disappear.

WHILE CENSORS SLEEP

In Russia the censors perform their tasks by sleeping. While they rest, the official Stalinesque communiques are sent out, and they get printed 24 hours before the correspondents' stories. The latter are held up until the sleeping censors get around to inspecting them. By that time the government's views have been put across. — Buffalo Courier-Express.

THE REMAINS

The Probate Court in Chicago approved last week a final accounting of the estate of the late Samuel Insull, once head of the famous $1,000,000,000 utility empire. The estate totaled $9,091. Claims against it totaled $4,114,000. Before the empire crashed, its head received, in addition to profits on security deals, an annual salary of $500,000.—New York Times.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Hear my cry O God, attend unto my prayer.

From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed; lead me to the rock that is higher than I.

For thou hast been a shelter to me, and a strong tower from the enemy.

I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever; I will trust in the covert of thy wings.

For thou O God hast heard my vows; thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name.—Part of Psalm 61.

A Bit of Nonsense

Side By Side

"During a recent interview with his army chiefs," says a neutral agency, "the Fuehrer was literally beside himself." This may have something to do with the persistent rumor that Herr Hitler has a double.

A Start

Aunt (inspecting jumper): "And did my little niece knit this all by herself?"

Betty: "Yes, Auntie, all except the hole you put your head through, and that was there when I started."

Too True

Officer: "Now, you see that house about 300 yards away. Well, let us suppose it is occupied by the enemy."

Recruit: "It is occupied by the enemy, sir."

"What do you mean?"

"It's my mother-in-law's house."

Too Risky

The vicar was having a serious chat with one of his flock about her son.

"Tom needs educating, Mrs. Jones," he said; "it is very important. I had to pinch like anything to send my sons to college, but it was worth it."

"Maybe," replied Mrs. Jones; "but my husband's too afraid of the law to do anything like that."

Leading Up To It

After tea Roland went away by himself into the sitting room.

After a while he came out and said, "Aunty, when's your birthday?"

"Why do you want to know?"

"Well, I was thinking I'd give you a present."

"That's nice."

"I was thinking I'd give you a big blue vase with red rings and white flowers all round it."

"But I've got one just like that, dear."

"Oh, no, you haven't," he said. "I just bust it."

Members Meet To Draft Session Plans

OTTAWA, Nov. 5.—(CP).—Canada's 19th Parliament since Confederation ends its first session today with brief formalities, after a lapse of three months since adjournment early in August.

The formalities to-day, reduced to the historic essentials of prorogation because of the war, merely pave the way for the opening of a new parliamentary session Thursday.

For 24 hours members of the House of Commons and Senators have been arriving in the capital in considerable numbers, ready to resume their responsibility of directing the nation's business.

However, because the brief meeting to-day provides no opportunity for discussion, many members are not expected to arrive until tomorrow when each of the three opposition groups plans to hold a caucus and begin drafting a program of operations for the new session. A Liberal caucus likely will not be held before a week from to-morrow.

Social Credit and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation groups will be out almost in full strength to-day but Conservatives and Liberals are not expected to produce more than 50 per cent attendance.

Woodsworth Be Absent.

For the first time since 1921, J. S. Woodsworth, honorary president of the C.C.F., and House leader, will be absent from prorogation proceedings to-day. Still suffering from the effects of illness which kept him out of the House since last May, Mr. Woodsworth is remaining at his Winnipeg home, at least until after the New Year.

It is expected M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. national chairman, who has acted as house leader since Mr. Woodsworth's illness, will be asked to continue in that capacity.

Another C.C.F. absentee today will be T. C. Douglas, member for Weyburn, who is concluding an officers' training course at Dunburn, Sask., before coming to the capital next week.

The program for to-day's meeting of Parliament is brief. Members of the House of Commons and of the Senate assemble at 3 p.m. EDT. In the Commons the four new members elected in by-elections since adjournment since last August 7 will be presented to the chamber, having been previously sworn in. They are Navy Minister Macdonald (Lib., Kingston City), Louis Breithaupt (Lib Waterloo North), A. H. Bence (Con., Saskatoon City) and G. R. Boucher (Con., Carleton).

Then the Commoners will proceed to the Senate chamber to hear Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff, as Deputy Governor-General, read the speech from the throne, thanking them for their services and sketching briefly the work done during the session being ended.

There will be no elaborate ceremonial, no parade, no guard of honor. Wartime simplicity will prevail.

Britons Interested In U.S. Election

LONDON, Nov. 5 — (CP). — The British public has followed the United States presidential campaign so closely the British Broadcasting Corporation has arranged special broadcasts of election returns.

First returns will be broadcast at 4.30 a.m. Wednesday (11.30 p.m., EDT, Tuesday), an hour when the domestic radio usually is silent.

The election crowded the war out of the headlines of most morning papers today.

Editorials, meanwhile, reminded readers that both presidential candidates pledged material aid to Britain.

Unarmed Peace

Cleveland, Nov. 4 (AP)

PRESIDENT Roosevelt, campaigning through Western New York en route to Cleveland, told a crowd at the Buffalo City Hall Saturday that he had seen the Canadian shores across the Niagara River in the morning and this reminded him that United States relations with Canada symbolized the kind of "unarmed peace" that he hoped would prevail ultimately throughout the world.

But while a "storm" is raging in the world, Mr. Roosevelt added, it is necessary to amass arms "for defense."

Survived 70-Day Atlantic Ordeal

Emaciated and 20 pounds lighter, George Tapscott, British seaman from the freighter Anglo Saxon, is shown going ashore at Nassau after spending 70 days bobbing about the south Atlantic in an open boat with his companion, Wilbert Widdicombe. The Anglo Saxon was sunk by a German raider off the Azores. Widdicombe and Tapscott endured the torment of heat and thirst for more than two months before they were rescued. They are now in a Nassau hospital.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER TWO

STANDING there on the street, Lona looked at the three dimes that were her only capital, and then put them back into her purse. Picking up her suitcase again, she trudged on, averting her eyes from the restaurant that loomed invitingly across the way. No supper for her tonight. The dimes would have to be saved for breakfast. It would be easier to sleep on an empty stomach, than to go forth, breakfastless, on the weary hunt for work.

The thought of sleep brought a wry grin to her lips as she set her feet down monotonously one after the other, and considered just what she ought to do. What did girls like her do, she wondered? Girls who had been put out of their boarding houses....There must be some place to go, her tired brain began to repeat rhythmically.... There must be some place.

The Y. W. C. A. was, after all, the last resource left her, she decided, a weary fifteen minutes later. She detested the thought of asking for charity, confessing her plight even to sympathetic ears, but there seemed no other out. Purposely she turned her lagging steps toward the big stone "Y" building she had often passed on her way downtown to the office.

But when she stood at the desk facing the businesslike secretary, her feeble courage failed. The woman was so cheerfully neat, her gray hair so carefully waved, there hung about her and the whole place such an indefinable air of well being, that it was impossible to stammer out her story of failure. While the woman waited, pencil poised expertly, she swallowed back her half-formed plea for help, and brought out some excuse about having come to the wrong place. To cover her confusion she asked to be directed to the nearest restaurant. Restaurant! With thirty cents in her purse....Back out on the street she shifted her suitcase to the other arm, and resumed her tramping in the gathering dusk.

Ten-thirty that night found her shivering on a bench in one of the city parks. About her sounded all the queer noises of the summer night. The humming of insects and the lonesome croaking of frogs in the park pond contrasted with the gay strains of music floating in from the nearby street. She had dragged her bench back into the shelter of some shrubbery, but now and then passersby made her shrink farther back into the gloom. Strolling lovers, these passersby were, mostly. Once a pair of them stopped nearby and she caught the sound of kisses and murmured endearments. It was hard to realize that there were people still loving each other in this world. Somewhere out there, they were dancing, too. Kissing in out-of-the-way corners, and laughing, while she crouched here, alone.

For the first time the full realization of her position seemed to grip her. As the slow minutes dragged by and one by one the lights of the park were extinguished, she tried desperately to flog her tired brain into some semblance of a plan.

There must be something she could do. Something besides just sit here and shiver while the night grew blacker and blacker. There must be something she could do. .... The refrain started again. ....There must be something to do....There must be some place to go....Things like this didn't happen to girls like her....There must be something to do.

It was getting cold. Even the summer nights were chilly at this hour. She found herself shivering more and more, and she was hungry—so hungry. And the darkness was so terrifying. The bushes and trees, so inviting in the heat of the noonday sun, seemed to take on strange shapes. They seemed to be moving, closing in on her like great, hungry animals, nearer, nearer, until she had to shut her eyes to keep out the sight of them. And then she could still hear them moving, moving.

She sprang up, at last, unable to stay quiet any longer. And then, peering through the darkness, she saw that there really was something moving. A dark shape loomed suddenly on the path so near that she could have reached out and touched it. A man's shape. New terror gripped her, then, and she shrank back on her bench again. Supose it were a policeman and he told her to move on! Where could she go?

Then she saw the outline of a head above the bushes and she knew it was no policeman. And in that instant she knew, also, that she was going to speak to him. Whoever he was, she'd speak to him. And whatever followed would have to follow. She was finished with struggling. She'd leave things up to fate. If he was a good man, all right. And if he wasn't—make him be a good man, she began praying crazily....Make him be a good man.

When he was almost upon her, he paused, and a match flamed suddenly. In its light she saw his face as he bent to shelter the cigaret he was trying to light with his cupped hand. A little sob of relief escaped her. He was the man of the boarding house! The man who had taken her room.

At the sound of her sob, he looked up, startled. Then the match died down and he was on the bench beside her.

"What are you doing here?" he asked, and at the sharpness in his tone the tears Lona had kept back until now started in her eyes.

"Don't!" she managed to bring out. "Oh, don't—"

"Why, you poor kid!" He was looking at her battered suitcase. "I was afraid of this," he said, and the sympathy in his voice was the last straw. The flood of sobs she had been damning for days burst forth uncontrollably. Without another word he reached out a reassuring arm for her there in the dark. Like a child she clung, the faint smell of tobacco from his rough man's clothes carrying her back irresistibly to the old days before her father had—left her alone.

"That woman ought to be hung!" He stroked her hair awkwardly. "Putting a kid like you out on the street. Damn her! Why didn't you say something? I wouldn't have taken her room if I—knew—"

For a long, delicious moment Lona gave herself up to the comfort of her sobs. To have someone concerned about her, to feel that she wasn't alone, after these terrible days. It was a taste of heaven! Then, gradually, her sense of propriety reared its head, and she sat up with growing dismay. What was she doing, crying in this strange man's arms Blubbering like a baby.

"Oh, I—I'm sorry," she stammered. "I didn't mean to c-cry. I'll be all right."

"Have you had any supper," he asked her, suddenly. Then, before she could frame an answer, "I know you haven't. Come on, there's a night restaurant open a couple of blocks down."

Her pride raising its head again, she began to protest. She wasn't hungry, she'd had her supper—some supper. Not much, of course, but—

"Come on, girl," he cut her short, gently. "Here! He shoved a big handkerchief smelling of talcum powder toward her in the darkness. "Dry your eyes, and let's get going," he ordered.

Summary Day Planned For November

HAVELOCK, Nov. 5 — (ENS). — Arrangements for the annual "summary day" of the Peterborough County Women's Institutes, which is to be held in the local town hall on Wednesday, October 13, were completed by the Havelock branch, when they assembled yesterday afternoon in the council chamber for their November meeting. With 27 members in attendance, and the president, Mrs. Clare Price in the chair, the meeting opened with the Institute Ode and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Local leaders, Mrs. George Rigby and Miss Ina Morrison will be in charge of the summary day program, when the project is to be "the preservation of fruit." It was decided also that the local branch would serve a 25c tea that day, and the following committee was appointed to look after plans for same: Mrs. H. Hoard, convener, assisted by Mrs. W. Rice, Mrs. R. McCutcheon, Mrs. J. Little, and Mrs. H. Pollock.

The financial returns from the Hallowe'en dance showed total receipts of $68.45. The president extended thanks to all those who had assisted with this dance, and a special vote of thanks was moved to the merchants and members who had donated prizes for this event.

The Institute decided that they would not apply for the legislative grant this year, which amounts to $3. Reports were received also from the relief and sick visiting committees.

In the event that there is a "Remembrance Day" ceremony and parade here on November 11th, the members were requested to be present.

Announcement was made at the meeting that the Home and School had been postponed until next Tuesday evening, November 12, which is in Educational Week; and also that the annual meeting and election of officers of the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society would be held on Monday, November 18.

The members responded well to the roll call with various suggestions on how "they could best serve their country at home."

The program of which Mrs. Robert Jones was the convener, opened with all singing "The Maple Leaf Forever," followed by a vocal solo, "Carry On," by Mrs. (Dr.) D. J. Holdcroft.

Guest speaker of the afternoon was Miss Stafford of the local Faith Mission of Canada, who addressed the members on "Educational Peace," basing her interesting talk on verses from the 14th and 36th chapters of St. John.

The program concluded with a reading by Mrs. Jones, entitled, "Give Peace, O God, Give Peace Again." Thanks was afterwards extended by both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Price to those who had assisted in the program.

Lunch was then served by the refreshment convener, Mrs. Pollock, assisted by Mrs. T. W. Quinn, Mrs. H. Dafoe, and Mrs. T. Easterbrook.

Miner Is Rescued

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 4 (AP)

EXHAUSTED but uninjured, Julius Yankowski staggered weakly out of a West Mountain coal mine drift late last night after 49 hours' imprisonment behind tons of rock and earth.

Sobbing a prayer in Polish, he fell into the arms of rescuers and was taken to hospital.

Only good ventilation in the dark shaft kept Yankowski alive, rescue officials said.

His voice husky and growing steadily weaker, the miner shouted encouragement as rescuers, fearful of additional slides, worked cautiously toward him.

Be Little Aid

Rome, Nov. 5 (AP).

THE Italian press today sought to belittle the armed aid which A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the British Admiralty, said Saturday the Greeks are receiving.

"In Greece," Il Popolo Di Roma said, "there are a few British tugboats which were already there, 60 English airplanes which were already in Greek airdromes, and a modest contingent of troops which already had landed at Crete."

Communion Service Gift At Millbrook

Dedication of the new communion service, given by the congregation of St. Andrew's church in loving memory of Mrs. L. H. Rea, for many years a valued member who gave faithful attendance and support, took place at morning worship on Sunday, when it was used for the first time, following the prayer of consecration by the pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D.

Elders assisting with the initial communion in the recently opened and dedicated church were Percy Stinson, W. F. Fallis, George Patterson and G. E. Burnham, together with Dr. A. Jemison, Clerk of the Session.

Following the evening service, Mr. Charles Franklin Legge, of Toronto, who installed the new "Hetherington Memorial Organ," gave a recital, Mrs. Legge being also present, and singing "Ave Maria" in splendid voice. Mr. Legge presided at the organ throughout the service, and a number from the other congregations of the village came in for the recital, following the regular order of worship.

Taking as his theme, "The Light of the World," and using the beautiful memorial window at the end of the chancel which depicts this famous picture of Holman Hunt's, Mr. Sisco told the story in vivid detail, basing his remarks on the verse: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." "The original painting is valued at over $100,000, and I know must be in some place for safe keeping from the bombs of the Huns, though it usually is kept at Oxford. Holman Hunt spent much time in Palestine, and many a night stayed out on the hills of Judea as the shepherds of old did, in order to gain the right atmosphere and knowledge before painting this wonderful picture."

"The robes Christ is wearing represent Him as a prophet, priest and king; the lantern (for it is the midnight hour), represents the light of conscience, since apart from Christ darkness fills the heart; the apples beneath the lantern show the wilfulness and stubbornness of the human heart; neglect is depicted by the weeds and the unkept garden; the bat, disturbed by the lantern's light, evil deeds and dark passions; the door, locked and barred, the resistance to Christ of the natural heart; the latch, on the inside only, makes it clear that the individual soul must open to the Saviour's knock. All that is wrong and sinful is put to flight when the door is opened from within, and the Light of the World is made a welcome guest."

Rev. E. M. Cooke, of Foxboro, read the lesson and offered the prayers on Sunday evening, and the choir sang: "O Light Eternal," as its first anthem, and also during the offertory.

Three Stray Horses Figure In Car Crash

TWEED, Nov. 5 — (ENS). — One horse had to be destroyed and another sustained minor cuts, when three horses, the property of Thomas E. Fleming, Ivanhoe, broke loose from their corral and were wandering on the highway, when struck by a motor car driven by James Sopha. Sopha was proceeding north early on Sunday morning, when he suddenly came upon three horses wandering on the highway. Despite his efforts to avoid collision, Sopha's car crashed into the animals, one being injured so badly it was necessary to destroy it.

Historical Documents Discovered Given To Canada By Lady Oakes

OTTAWA, Nov. 5—(CP).—Another piece has been added to the Mosaic of Canada's early history by discovery of documents written by Baron de Lahontan about 1796. The documents, presented to Canada by Lady Oakes, wife of Sir Harry Oakes of Nassau, Bahamas, have been published by the National Archives.

The publication, with an introduction by Dominion Archivist Gustave Lanctot, is bilingual. It contains two memoirs, a transcript of the Baron's will, a letter he sent to French authorities from Hamburg in 1698 and the official census of New France in 1692.

There are several plates showing early views of Quebec and military maps for use in the planned siege of the city by British ships.

Baron de Lahontan, a Frenchman, turned to Britain when jealousy of Governor Brouillan of the French colony of Newfoundland brought a warrant for his arrest from the King of France.

A comprehensive survey of New France in the 17th century, from first hand information by military and civil affairs, is contained in the two memoirs.

The first, written to convince Britain of the value of Canada, explains the possibilities in agriculture, manufacturing, shipbuilding and the colossal profits made in the fur trade.

"Canada would make the finest empire and the greatest state in the world were it possible to unite new France and new England," he wrote.

A detailed account of the Iroquois war and resulting devastation is given.

The second memoir, "outline of a project to capture Quebec and Placentia," details the manpower and defences of Quebec and Placentia (capital of French-held territory in Newfoundland) and suggests how these places might be captured.

Baron de Lahontan came to Canada in 1683 at the age of 17. At Montreal in winter of 1684-5, made his will, leaving his goods to his mother after payment of "the sum of 365 livres Canadian money to the Parish Church at Montreal and 200 more lires to the hospital."

"Canada returns nothing to the King of France," he wrote in one memoir "since the sums accruing from the beaver lease, import and export trade is used to maintain 40 companies of marines, a governor-general, four local governors, an intendant, a sovereign council and a hundred other officers of justice, a bishop and all his clergy, two or three seminaries, as many hospitals, seven or eight convents of either sex, and 30 missions, besides the cost of large amounts of munitions."

The census of new France taken in 1692 shows a population of 11,075. There were 99 towns and villages, Quebec being the largest, with 1,570 inhabitants.

Nazi Spy Attired As Dandy Ends Career With Penny Tip

(By EDWIN STOUT)

LONDON, Nov. 5—(AP).—Women spies may be as active in this war as they were in the first Great War, but to date the work of fifth columnists has been more in the limelight.

The Nazi-developed science of causing disaffection, terror and confusion among soldiers and citizens of invaded countries has grown to rank as a major job of enemy agents, as vital as the gathering of secret information by "old school" spies in wars of the past.

Since the war began, the public has been given only a few incidents involving alleged spies, centering around secret codes, mystery parachutists and plans for getting arms to help invaders—when and if the Germans ever land in Great Britain.

Police reporters in one northern city tell of a "much wanted" spy arrested at a railway station when a sharp-witted porter notified detectives that a well-dressed man had tipped him a penny—so small no Englishman would dare to offer it as a tip.

In Britain there are 17,700 aliens held in detention camps as potential fifth columnists, the kind police fear might sabotage factories, signal objectives to enemy airplanes and spread defeatist talk.

Fifth columnists in countries overrun by Germany found that dumb looks and records as anti-Nazis refugees were better than expensive wardrobes and friends in high places.

Fancy clothes have turned up in only one case—the arrest of Anna Wolkoff, Russia charmer and daughter of a former Russia admiral, who once operated a fashionable London dress shop.

Anna, with Tyler Kent, 29-year-old dismissed cipher clerk in the United States Embassy in London, is charged with violating the Official Secrets Act. Kent has been convicted and his sentence postponed until the Wolkoff trial is completed.

In two other espionage trials two men and a woman were convicted and another woman was acquitted.

Stephen C. Held, Irish Republican sympathizer, was brought into Dublin criminal court May 24 by police who produced a soiled parachute, the plans of an Irish airdrome, a secret code, $20,000 in United States money, a radio transmitter and a German air force cap and badge.

The prosecution said these articles were found in a raid on Held's home and charged him with sheltering a Germany spy. Held was convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment for "aiding an unkown person to obtain information prejudicial to the State."

One Woman Acquitted

Before the Held trial started, Mrs. Iseult Stuart, wife of the Irish poet and novelist, Francis Stuart, was accused of obtaining clothes for a parachutist. She was acquitted.

Mrs. Louisa Ingram, 42, German-born wife of a Royal Air Force sergeant and domestic servant of a British naval officer, was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment. She told the Portsmouth court, July 1, that she wanted to see Germany win, and police quoted her as saying Hitler would make Sir Oswald Mosley, Fascist leader, who is now in jail, the boss of Great Britain.

Mrs. Ingram was convicted of trying to get soldiers to steal arms to aid invaders if they ever came to Britain. Convicted with her was William Swift, an employee of the Portsmouth naval dockyard.

Besides the cases which reach the public records, there are continual reports of the arrest of a "fifth columnist" or "spy." Usually they are ordinary people — or at least pose as such — servant girls near army camps, waiters, clerks, musicians or theatre ushers.

Fall Plowing Progressing Very Slowly

TORONTO, Nov. 5 — (CP). — The Weekly Crop Report issued Monday by the Ontario Department of Agriculture showed that dry weather had been experienced generally in Eastern and Central Ontario and that in some cases many farmers' wells were dry. Fall ploughing was said to be progressing slowly because of the dried-out condition of the land.

Farmers in Prescott and Russell counties were reported suffering from dought. A large number of wells were dry and in many cases farmers were forced to haul water long distances to feed livestock. Glengarry and East Stormont reported that ploughing was slow, but that rains of the last few days helped soften the land. Some livestock was in a thin condition due to dry pastures.

Rains last week penetrated below plough depth in Hastings and Prince Edward counties, to aid in the work. Some Hastings and Victoria wells were reported as almost dry.

Harvesting of a good crop of turnips was general throughout Western and Southern Ontario. In some sections the sugar beet harvest is being rushed and some heavy yields were reported.

In contrast to the Central and Eastern sections of the Province, Western and Southern Ontario, in the main, reported abundance of grass for cattle on pastures. Grain harvesting has practically been completed, along with apple picking.

Northern Ontario reported frosts which hindered Fall ploughing, although practically all field crops are gathered.

Temiskaming agriculture authorities said that threshing was nearly completed, although results have been disappointing.

W.A. Membership Increases In Canada

OMEMEE, Nov. 5—(ENS). — A most encouraging and well attended missionary and devotional meeting of Christ Church Women's Auxiliary was held at the home of the Misses Curry on Thursday afternoon.

Liberal donations were received for the bale of new clothing and quilts and gifts to be sent to an Indian school in the Northwest. The work done by the W.A. during the year was on exhibition.

Missionary meeting was made interesting by the reading of letters from Toronto correspondents, who gave the cheerful tidings that the membership of the W.A. in the Dominion had increased during the past year. At the close of the meeting a happy social hour was spent over a cup of tea.

Mr. William Stephenson of Camp Borden spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Stephenson.

Miss Jessie Lam of Hastings was a week-end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lamb.

DICK IRVIN IS DOING GOOD JOB IN REBUILDING THE CANADIENS

Of 17 Players Carried Nine New Men

By The Canadian Press

It has often been said that a coach is no better than his player material, yet the argument doesn't seem to stand in the case of Dick Irvin, who guides the destinies of Montreal's National Hockey League Canadiens.

Canadiens have played only one game so far in the new season, but already it is being recognized that Coach Dick Irvin has done a stand-out job with the team that finished last in the 1939-40 season. Quietly but methodically he is rebuilding Canadiens in the hope that they come back to the glories of other Habitant teams of a decade ago.

Of the 17 men being carried by Irvin, nine are newcomers. In additions, five of these new men performed in amateur ranks last season. Hockey fans undoubtedly would have to go through a lot of record books to find an instance where as many new men, particularly amateurs, were broken in at once with an N.H.L. club.

Yet Irvin tossed his team out on the ice at the Forum in Montreal on Sunday night against Boston Bruins and when it was all over the teams had battled to a 1-1 overtime draw. It was quite a feat, considering that Bruins have been rated by their manager, Art Ross, as the best club ever to represent Boston in the N.H.L. And Ross has plenty of outside support in his contention.

Irvin says that this season's edition of Canadiens is the best-conditioned team he has ever seen start off an N.H.L. season and the customers were ready to believe him after the game against Bruins.

Canadiens play their second game of the season next Sunday at home against Chicago Black Hawks The Hawks alone of the seven teams in the league have yet to get into regular play They make their start in Chicago on Thursday against New York Americans.

One other game is scheduled for this coming Sunday, with New York Rangers playing at Detroit against the Red Wings, while on Saturday the Wings play at Toronto against the Maple Leafs.

Challedon To California

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5 (UP)—Challedon broke training today firmly established as the sixth richest thoroughbred winner of all time, but he won't quit racing until he supplants Seabiscuit at the top of the ladder. Seabiscuit won over $425,000.

That was the word from owner W. L. Brann after the big Maryland-bred colt loafed to a two-length triumph over Myron Selznick's Can't Wait in the fourth running of the $10,000 Pimlico Special. Definitely scotching all rumors of a Challedon retirement as premature, Brann said his colt would continue to race until injury or excess weight forced him off the tracks.

"We are shipping early this week to California," Brann explained. "Challedon will be pointed for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and then he will return to race again in the East. His sire, Challanger II. is still a young stallion and I have no need right now for two horses at stud, I hope Challedon still is running when he is eight years old."

The 4-year-old left here Monday for Empire City and probably will depart from there for the coast today or Wednesday. Brann and Trainer Don Cameron want to give their charge plenty of time to become accustomed to California's climate and water before the season. Although no program was specified, it is believed the horse will be nominated for five or six Santa Anita stakes as well as for several in Florida.

The runaway victory in the special, the mile and 3-16 fixture which opened Pimlico's 13-day fall meeting, boosted Challedon's earnings for the past three years to a total of $322,860. The figure moved him up past Zev to sixth position in world rankings and put him within easy striking distance of Gallant Fox, Equipoise and Phar Lap.

Miss Francis Margueratt Rolls 763 For Record Score in Challenge Tilt

With over 400 bowling addicts participating in league games during the week-end at Duffus' Alleys, Stan McBride's 393 Westclox single of last Wednesday was the only former big score for the year which was not wiped out.

Francis Margueratt started the parade of upsets on Saturday evening when she bowled for the Outboard Marine girls against the Lucky Strikes in the ladies' challenge match. With plenty of classy competition all around her Miss Margueratt went to work on the pins proper when she set up a new mark for ladies with 763 for three games.

In the De Laval loop last night Isobel Glover took a strangle hold on this week's Coca-Cola when she reeled off 324 for her third game, while in the sixteen-team lot of C.G.E. men "Bud" White cropped up with a desperate bid for a 1,000-pin total. He might have had it too as his first game of 361 followed by another 310 gave him a flying start. However the head-pin jinx touched him in the wrong place and he finished up with a still fine 393.

Football Tame Without Co-eds

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 5—(CP).—The university here thought it could get along without girl cheer leaders and drum majorettes at its football games. So last year these jobs for co-eds were abolished. The girls said you'll be sorry, you'll want us back. And they were right. One season's experiment was enough. Denver found the football scene wasn't quite as exciting without the co-eds' glamor. So the girls were welcomed back this fall with a lot of new tricks in their repertoire.

A Real Wallop

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Nov. 5 (AP)—The electric fence on Farmer Robert Pinto's farm wouldn't keep "Old Betsy," a big sow, from straying. So Robert, Jr., plugged the fence into a 110-volt house light socket. Three of Betsy's shoats starting under the fence were knocked cold, and so was Robert, Jr., in attempting a rescue. Pinto broke the connection, revived his son and three shoats. "Old Betsy" hadn't gone near the fence.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Connie Smythe's radio reference to the mission of Canadian professional hockey players as representatives of the Dominion's war effort and as an offset to German propaganda in the United States was one of those things better left unsaid. If the N.H.L. wanted to pose as an emblem of Canada's war effort it has missed the boat. The one way in which Americans could have been impressed, through the medium of professional hockey, with the part the Dominion is taking in the war, was for the various professional clubs to have turned up this season minus some of their players and the explanation that there were gaps in the ranks because the N.H.L. stars had answered the call of their country. When they line up however after Canada has been at war for over a year with their ranks intact there is nothing in that situation to suggest to the folk south of the border that Canada has gone all out in this struggle to save democracy from Nazism.

* * * * * *

Canadians have a pretty clear idea of just what is the mission of our professional hockey players. Briefly it is to provide a form of athletic entertainment for the benefit of American sport lovers at good salaries for the players involved and bringing in fat returns for the clubs interested. In so far as our professional hockey stars do that in a manner that brings credit upon our national winter game and on their home land, we are proud of them, proud of their skill and ability and of the manner in which they stand up in the hurly-burly of one of the fastest sports in the world. But let it go at that. To represent these boys as representating our war effort is merely twaddle.

* * * * * *

We prefer our American cousins not to get their ideas about the Dominion's share in the war from those husky young gents who are chasing a bit of rubber around a frozen surface for high wages. We would rather they obtain their impressions of what we are doing to beat Hitler from the thousands of other husky young Canadians who just now are guiding bombers over Germany, hurling Spitfires and Hurricanes at German aerial invaders of England, braving mines and submarines in Canada's navy or wearing the battle uniform of Canada's land forces and waiting for the hour when they will engage the enemy. Until the N.H.L. is represented among those Canadians it might be just as well to go slow in putting professional hockey on a plane of lofty patriotism.

The trial balloon suggestion made some time ago that the control of hockey here this season should be turned over to the military authorities has not made much of a hit with Peterborough players. So far as this column has been able to dig into the matter the puck-chasers would prefer their hockey straight and not with a dash of the military in it. In fact we have yet to find a player who wants to see the game get into military control. Most of the hockey stars have been drilling and they are satisfied to keep that activity separated from hockey. Military hockey of course is not entirely a stranger here. We had two army teams in the last Great War, the 93rd Battalion team in the winter of 1915-16 and the 247th Battalion team in 1916-17.

The former was entirely a military team and all the players who took part went overseas. A couple of players were brought in, Percy Windsor, a smooth centre from Cobalt and Lieut. Sexton, a defence player from the Maritimes but they went across the pond with the battalion. Lieut. Sexton remained in England after the war and for years was a member of the English hockey team, taking part in several Olympic contests. The 247th aggretion the following year which was eliminated by Hamilton in the intermediate semi-finals included four Fort William players, Jack Adams, now manager of the Detroit Red Wings, Bobby Armstrong, and Pat and Alf Flanagan. Interestingly enough these four found themselves discharged from the army at the end of the season on the ground that they were not likely to become efficient soldiers.

* * * * * *

Armstrong, one of the greatest scorers to ever wear a Peterborough uniform, and a conscientious young man, rather felt his position and immediately returned to his home town and enlisted for overseas service and went across. A great guy was Bobby Armstrong. On one trip he had an injured arm and was carrying it in a sling. He was of course wearing a military uniform. Waiting over between trains at Toronto he was sitting in the Walker House rotunda when an old gentleman came over, slipped something into his hand and departed. The embarrassed Armstrong came over to the writer. "That old fellow took me for a wounded soldier back from the front," he said. "He gave me a dollar to buy cigarettes. Come on, we're going to find a returned soldier." And out he dashed. He had to walk over to Yonge street and several blocks up that thoroughfare before he spied a couple of veterans. To them he explained what had happened and tried to hand over the dollar. "Keep it," said the veterans but Armstrong stoutly refused. Things were deadlocked for a while until one of the returned men suggested as a compromise that they buy a dollar's worth of smokes and share them up between the hockey player and themselves. Only then was the conscientious Armstrong satisfied.

The Oshawa G-M making their senior debut Monday night took a 7 to 2 beating at the hands of Port Colborne which isn't surprising in view of the fact that the team was hastily organized and has had no chance to shake down into a hockey machine as yet. However, the Oshawa gang were not outfought, even if they were outplayed and they provided plenty of fireworks for the Port Colborne fans. They battled about everything and the payoff came when Coach Tracey Shaw was banished from the players' bench by Referee Bert McCaffery. Shaw had invaded the ice to claim a penalty against one of the Sailors and the referee ordered him to be chased off the playing surface and off the playing bench. The constabulary were called in when he refused to go and the Oshawa pilot took his team off the ice. He sent them back in a hurry when warned that the game would be forfeited. It must have been a merry party.

It is thumbs down on American football players so far as Hamilton Tigers are concerned. Henceforth the emphasis is to be placed on the grooming of high school players for senior positions and the United States stars are to be left at home. With that attitude most folk will agree. There is no reason why Canadian football should require American reinforcemeents, except perhaps in the department of forward passing and reception and there too we are rapidly catching up to the inventors of that phase of football. Of course there are imports and imports. Some of them like Warren Stevens and Johnny Ferraro have made a valuable contribution to the game in Canada. Others have been flops. The Tigers apparently got that kind of a pair this season for two birds Grieco and Baker have been shipped back to their home in New York state.

The identity of the unlucky individual who is to get the job of managing the Cleveland ball club next season has yet to be uncovered. Reports that Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators was the man to succeed Oscar Vitt had gained considerable circulation but the stories have been killed by the announcement from Washington that Harris has been signed for another season as pilot there. Now the guessing as to the Cleveland job is on again. Luke Sewell is the player most frequently mentioned. He is probably home now drilling himself in how to say "Yes" which seems to be an essential element in the task of managing the Indians.

Seymour Leads In O.R.F.U. With 15 Points

TORONTO, Nov. 5. — One of the lowest scoring week-ends in the East's five-weeks-old football season resulted in only one major change in the scoring leaders to-day — Frank Seymour's jump from third place to the leadership of the Ontario Union.

The ace Toronto Balmy Beach plunger got a touchdown, his third, in the club's 14-1 victory over Camp Borden on Saturday, vaulting over Hugh Tunnicliffe, a teammate, and Frank Galloway of Sarnia. Seymour's fifteen-point total left him with a two-point edge on Tunnicliffe.

George Wright of Hamilton Tigers maintained his lead on the Interprovincial Union. The fourth Canadian Press scoring summary showed Wright with 19 points, two better than last week, and a seven-point margin over Ray Mullins of Montreal.

The only newcomer to the first ten in the Big Four was Bill Murnylyk of Hamilton, who booted a field goal to run his total to eight and a share of tenth place with Montreal's Gordie Noseworthy. The summary:

Cornell Leads As No. 1 Team

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(AP).—The football season is near the home stretch, and so is the race for the No. 1 position of the Associated Press ranking poll for the 1940 United States campaign.

It's Cornell, Minnesota, Michigan and the Texas Aggies in the first four places this week, with only 375 points separating first place from fourth. Two major contests Saturday will eliminate one or more of these leaders, as Minnesota and Michigan clash at Minneapolis and Texas A. and M. plays Southern Methodist, which is strong enough to win 14th place on the week's list.

The more certain indication that the "championship" race is being narrowed is found, however, in the first place votes. The 178 experts who participated in the fifth weekly poll gave one or more points to 30 teams, but only seven were mentioned for first place. Cornell received 119 of the 178 first-place votes. Minnesota drew 18, and was rated second by 82 experts. The Aggies received 14 first and Michigan and Tennessee, 11 each. Stanford received three and Boston College, two. On the point system, it was much closer, with 1,560 for Cornell; 1,420 for Minnesota; 1,258 for Michigan, and 1,185 for Texas A. and M.

PORT COLBORNE SAILORS DEFEAT OSHAWA GENERALS BY 7 TO 2

Marlboros Held To Tie By Niagara Falls

(By the Canadian Press.)

If early games in the Ontario Hockey Association's senior series indicate anything of the shape of things to come, this winter should see some rousing battles in the seven-team circuit.

There was little fireworks as Toronto Marlboros and Niagara Falls Brights played a 1-1 tie at Niagara Falls but two misconduct penalties and banishment of a coach featured a rough, hard-hitting contest at Port Colborne in which the Sailors trounced Oshawa Generals 7-2.

Coach Tracy Shaw of Oshawa, returning to the league after a brief absence, was ordered from the bench in the second period after he had argued with Referee Bert McCaffery. Shaw had gone on the ice protesting a penalty should be awarded after Thompson of Oshawa was hurt in a collision with Swanson of Port Colborne.

Maundrell of Oshawa was given a match penalty after a prolonged argument with the referee in the first period and Finkbeiner of Generals was handed a misconduct for arguing with McCaffery.

Doug Runions was outstanding for Port Colborne as he tallied twice.

Other Sailor scorers were Concessi, Hepworth, Leitch, Thompson and Swanson, Cooper and Covert counted for Oshawa.

Niagara Falls' tie lifted Bright's to the league leadership with three points, one more than Port Colborne, defeated by Bright's Saturday. Stirling scored for Niagara Falls and Mair for Marlboros.

So far only four teams have seen action. Hamilton goes to St. Catharines to-night for the opening game for both teams. London, shifting to the O.H.A. from the Michigan-Ontario circuit, will play ther first game Wednesday when they come to Toronto to tackle Marlboros.

New White Hope Has High Hopes

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 5—(CP).—Billy Conn's Irish eyes are smiling and it isn't all because he's courting the world's heavyweight championship.

He's also courting a girl—he won't disclose her identity because her father "would kill me." He wants to get married but—"I've got to make a lot of money first. I've got to lick Joe Louis."

That's a pretty big order for a 23-year-old but behind that goal is the fact that poor boy Billy "came up from the alley" to light heavyweight king and fortune in four short years.

"I got only $2.50 for my first fight," recalls pugilism's "white hope. "I didn't have nothing — didn't have a suit of clothes. I had to bum rides downtown. My manager Johhny Ray took me off the street corner and made me a champ.

"Fighting made a high-class gentleman out of me. See this house—$110 per month—that big automobile downstairs. Look at these $5 ties, $20 hats, $20 shoes, this $75 sport coat. I take care of all the family—the whole joint. There's mother, dad, two sisters and two brothers—Jackie, who's quit fighting, and truck-driver Frankie are joining the Navy. If Uncle Sam sends for me I'll be ready.

"But I've got a lot of big things to do. I've gotta lick Joe Louis. I could whip him right now—any day. I'm the next heavyweight champ. I can't miss. And I'm not bragging either."

They'll Try For Team If—

Oklahoma City University's football team better start winning some games or these two co-eds are going out for the team themselves. Or so they say. Most college queens just sit and look pretty, but not these two. Band Queen Billie Chipman and Football Queen Mary Hays. They spend their afternoons practicing football. Mary does the kicking here.

Racing Crowns Are Wide Open To Contenders In Most Divisions

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 — (AP). — Only Challedon, among the handicap horses, and Level Best, among the two-year-old fillies, seem to have definite claims on the racing championships of 1940. Not in years has there been such a wide-open setup.

Among the three-year-old colts you have to choose from among Bimelech, Mioland, Gallahadion, Sweepida, Sirocco, Your Chance, and Fenelon. The three-year-old filly race is a wide-open affair among Salminia, Fairy Chant, and Damaged Goods.

And right now it looks as if the throne for the two-year-old colts will have to be a three-seater, at least, because Our Boots, Whirlaway, and last week's Pimlico Futurity winner, Bold Irishman, all have a claim staked out.

Challedon has the best right to the handicap title. He has won five of seven starts this year, including last week's Pimlico Special. Yet, Hash has finished in front of him twice. And, while Eight Thirty is retired for the year, he won more money than any of the others.

At the start of the year the boys were willing to hand the three-year-old crown to Bimelech on a platter. But Gallahadion beat him in the Kentucky Derby and Sirocco ran his legs off in the Arlington Classic before his hoof injury was discovered. Then Fenelon hit his peak, but he, like Bimmie, was injured. Then it was Your Chance, but he turned out to be what the trackmen call an "excuse horse," mostly finishing second and "He would have won if—." Finally, Mioland, the internationally bred colt from Oregon, reached his top form and right now is second only to Bimelech among the year's leading money winners.

Bucky Harris Signs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP).—Stanley (Bucky) Harris signed a new one-year contract Monday to manage the Senators for 1941, terminating reports that he might succeed Oscar Vitt as pilot of Cleveland Indians.

"I had always hoped that Harris would be back with the Washington club for next season and I am proud to announce it," said President Clark Griffin.

Terms of the contract were not made public, but it was indicated that Harris received a raise.

Sports Stars Had Their Say In '40 Election

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(CP).—Stars of the sporting world, the idols of millions of fans of boxing, baseball, football and track, have done their share to boost their respective candidates in a torrid Presidential election campaign.

Many of them led campaigns of their own, "stumping" for President Roosevelt or for the Republican nominee, Wendell L. Willkie. Others have been satisfied merely to state their party affiliation, "sell" a few friends, and let it go at that.

The sports committee for Willkie, headed by Sports Writer Grantland Rice, ran full-page newspaper advertisements containing photographs and names of more than 200 sports stars and writers who favored Willkie.

Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion, came out for Willkie, "because he stands for what is best for us colored people." Jesse Owens, former Indinana track star who was a sensation at the 1936 Olympics, rooted for Roosevelt and challenged Louis to debate the issues concerning "our people."

Tony Galento, a former heavyweight title contender, declared Roosevelt would "beat this Willkie just as bad as I'll beat Joe Louis the next time I catch up with the bum."

"Believe it or not" Bob Ripley made his Willkie affiliation clear by saying:—

"President Roosevelt has spent more in 7 2/3 years than the other 29 Presidents together spent in 135 years—Wilson's expenditures during the war excluded."

Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion, and Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion, have led vigorous campaigns for Roosevelt.

Leading sport figures for Willkie included:—

Boxing.—Joe Louis, Jack Johnson, Al McCoy, Artie McGovern, and Fritzie Zivic.

Baseball.—Larry French, Chicago Cubs; Billy Werber, Jimmy Wilson, Bucky Walters, Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati Reds; Bob Klinger, Pittsburg Pirates.

Football. — Nile Kinnick, All-American with Iowa, 1939.

Golf.—Craig Wood, Ben Hogan, Horton Smith.

Sculling.—Joe Burk.

Track.—Glen Gunningham.

Leading sport figures for Roosevelt included:—

Boxing.—Max Baer, Mike Jacobs, Jim Braddock.

Baseball.—Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio.

When Footballs JumpedHerWall

LONDON, Nov. 5 — (CP). — Mrs. Emily Wood, of Shepherd's Bush, London, was summoned by the Queen's Park Rangers' soccer club for wrongfully keeping their footballs.

Mrs. Wood told the court "for 20 years this has been going on. These dangerous balls used to come over on to my back-garden when the American baseball team was using the ground."

Magistrate Paul Bennett expressed deep sympathy, but asked her to return the balls, as she had no right to keep them.

Lady Basketballers Re-elect Mrs. Watson

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—(CP)—Mrs. John Watson of Chatham will continue as president of the Ontario Ladies' Basketball Association, with Miss Bessie Thackeray of Chatham as secretary. Mrs. Watson accepted a continuation of her term when no other nominations for the office were made at the annual meeting here Saturday night.

The other officers are all from Toronto. Miss Lois Branston, first vice-president; Miss Rita Courthey, treasurer; Miss Ruby Anderson and Mrs. Len Sommer, executive members; Mrs. Frank Branston, honorary president.

The Ontario Church Association has stated that it is reaffiliating and entries are also expected from Peterborough, Belleville and Cobourg. Efforts will be made to secure affiliation of a Y.M.C.A. league comprising Galt, Guelph, Kitchener, Ingersoll, London, Brantford and St. Thomas.

We can find no reason for middleweight cham Ken Overlin climbing this tree at Summit, N.J., where he is training for a defence of his title against Steve Belloise of New York. Perhaps the cameraman ran out of ideas for posing his subject or maybe it strengthens Ken's legs to clamber the wood.

Tony Lee Wins Three Heats In Classified Pace At Dufferin Park

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—Tony Lee, son of Markfast and owned by E. Morris of LaCrosse, Wis., occupied the feature role at Dufferin Park yesterday as harness racing was conducted under ideal weather conditions for the second day of the Fall and Winter racing season.

Tony Lee won all three heats of the Classified Pace, first race on the program. He was driven by his owner and paced the mile heats in the fast times of 2:19, 2:20 and 2:18¾ in his final effort.

Abbe Patch, from the stable of C. W. Hodgson of Haliburton, was his chief rival, finishing in second place in two heats and third in the other.

The feature race of the day, the 2:12 trot for a purse of $250, saw eight face the barrier and Mr. Harriman, making his first start in Toronto for the local stable of Hillock & Harvey, proved best when he accounted for the last two heats in handy fashion. Laurel Watts, from the barn of C. J. Fowler of Kingston, won the other event.

St. Patrick, racing for G. H. Rose of Toronto, also proved a double heat winner in the third event when he accounted for the last two heats. Queen Elizabeth, owned by A. Dickerson of Mount Hope, was the other victor.

Irene Harvester, racing for H. Galbraith of Stratford, was successful in two of his three starts in the fourth event, while Princess Lee from the stable of R. Preston of London was the other heat winner.

Bing Crosby, owned by M. L. Tolles of Northville, Mich., a pacer recently converted into a trotter, proved a bad actor in the first heat of the fourth race. After holding up the start for some time he was left when the break came, but went out a mile after being lapped by his field. The crowd disapproved of the way Bing Crosby was started and many expected a refund of their wagers.

New Treatment Cures Dread Trachoma

PENDLETON, Ore., Nov. 5 (AP). —Sulfanilamide is giving back to Indians eyesight threatened by Trachoma.

In tiny clinics spotted throughout the United States West, public health and Indian service doctors are treating the dread eye disease which once meant blindness or patient treatment that might show results in six months—or three years.

The Indian Service estimates that there are 25,030 cases, in the United States among the Indians, but it concedes the existence of many more. Some cases exist in Northern Canada.

Indian Service doctors learned in 1938 that internal doses of Sulfanilamide would halt the symptoms of Trachoma within three days and that proper use would arrest progress of the disease itself within two weeks. Many cases apparently were cured.

The new treatment, supplanting a tedious process of inverting the affected eyelids and massaging them with medicine, revived the Indians' waning faith in White doctors. Many who had given up treatments in disgust returned to Reservation clinics.

Give him his daily HALIBORANGE

The Nicest Way of Taking Halibut Liver Oil

Children need more vitamins A and D in winter to make up for lack of summer sunshine. Give your kiddies a daily dose of natural vitamins in the form of Haliborange. That will help to keep them strong and healthy. Haliborange provides the essential vitamins A and D contained in Halibut Liver Oil and also vitamin C found in the fresh orange juice. It is delicious to take. Haliborange is twice as rich in vitamins A and D as Cod Liver Oil.

Adults, too, find Haliborange beneficial in warding off winter's ills and in restoring vitality. Try it. Haliborange is a real health restorer.

many sober observers believe he can win.

The campaign managers stood upon their previous predictions. Edward Flynn, Democratic national chairman, called for 427 electoral votes out of 531 for the President; Joseph Martin, Republican, predicted 324 for Mr. Willkie. Polls sampling public opinion came out with predictions of a closer popular vote and said many states are in doubt.

In addition to a President and Vice-President, the voters will choose one-third of the Senate and an entire House of Representatives at Washington; as well as holders of many state and municipal offices of various importance, including 34 Governors. There are also a number of state referenda, but none of these has achieved national attention—such as did the fights in other days on prohibition and pensions.

The long-drawn Presidential campaign, featured by bitter debate over the third-term issue, has obscured the personalities of those contesting other offices.

But one triumvirate came in for much attention. They are the three Mr. Roosevelt linked together as "Martin, Barton and Fish," three Republican members of the last House of Representatives. Joseph Martin and Hamilton Fish are again candidates for that House; Bruce Barton seeks a Senate seat from New York States. The President accused all three of opposing national defence measures and steps to aid farmers.

Standout Issues.

As the Presidential campaign drew to a close, issues that stood out included two in particular.

The first is the war. Mr. Willkie, although endorsing all possible material aid to Great Britain, emphatically contends that a provocative attitude toward the Axis countries will lead to war if the President is re-elected.

In reply, the President says that any change that he is heading toward war is contrary to all the facts in the record. It is for peace he has labored, he says, and will continue to labor throughout his life.

The second great issue is the summation of months of controversy over the question of concentration of power in Washington. The Republicans contend this issue is epitomized in the proposal that, contrary to tradition, the President be elected for a third term. Dictatorship may be the result, says Mr. Willkie.

Roosevelt supporters answer that the powers of the Federal Government have necessarily been increased to meet successive crisis — the depression, war abroad and the urgent necessity for re-armament. They add that Congress still functions, the election is free, the press is free, speech is free, and they ask: "What sign is there of an impending dictatorship." Mr. Roosevelt's knowledge of foreign affairs makes a third term necessary, at a time of crisis such as this, they assert.

Mr. Roosevelt has declared a third term will be his last.

Equality For Jews

LONDON, Nov. 5—(CP Cable). —Polish Jews pledging allegiance to the Polish Fatherland at a meeting here on Sunday heard Professor Stanczwyk, Minister of Welfare in the Polish Government in Britain, assert that in the Poland of the future the Jew will have equal rights and obligations with the Polish community.

Other speakers referred to the common cause uniting Jews and Poles and expressed confidence that the victory will bring rebirth of a free, independent and democratic Poland in which proper place will be assigned the Jews.

Unguarded Shaft Is Cause Of Man's Death

"Purely accidental" was the death in Read Brothers' sawmill at Nogie's Creek on October 17 of Harold Akister, 41, of Fenelon Falls, in the opinion of a coroner's jury. Sitting under Coroner Dr. Eugene Snider in the Bobcaygeon town hall Monday afternoon seven Bobcaygeon citizens unanimously agreed in the verdict which sets forth that Akister "came to his death by being caught on a shaft in Read Brothers mill and that his death was purely accidental and we attach no blame to the owners of the said mill."

Highlights of the inquiry were the evidence of William Roy Stuart, mill employee and the only eye-witness of the tragedy as to Akister's body being whirled around perhaps 30 times by the shaft, testimony that the victim's duties did not call for his being in the part of the mill where the accident occurred and the opinion expressed by a number of witnesses that if the protruding shaft upon which Akister was caught had been guarded there would have been no accident.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., examined the six witnesses heard.

Clarence Read, the first of these said that he and his brother owned the mill which was equipped with a 40 h.p. steam engine and on the afternoon of the accident had eighteen men at work. Mr. Read said that the mill had just resumed operations that day after being idle a month. Akister had worked for the firm at various jobs for around 40 days and on the day of the accident his job was to fire the boiler. There was no occasion, so far as his duties were concerned, for him to be in the bottom of the mill where the accident had occurred.

Heard Men Shout

Mr. Read said that he himself was working outside on the logs 100 feet away from the mill and his first knowledge of the accident was when he heard the men in the mill shouting. He had immediately run to get medical assistance for the injured man.

William Roy Stuart testified that he had been oiling the machinery in the bottom part of the mill. He said that the shaft on which Akister had caught was two inches in diameter and protruded about 18 inches. The shaft was revolving 200 times a minute.

Akister had come down to speak to the witness and ask him to help him with the boiler that night, Stuart said. He had not heard him until Akister spoke."

"I turned around," said Stuart, "and he could see that his smock was caught on the shaft and he was holding it with both hands. His clothes were being wrapped around the shaft and he made it tighter by holding it. If he had backed away he might have released himself. I saw him lifted off his feet by the shaft and whirled around, his forehead striking the beam overhead. I ran to shut off the machinery but he fell off the shaft before I could do so. All his clothes were torn off and he was badly injured."

"He was dead when he hit the floor," Stuart said, and added that in inspecting Akister's clothing after the accident he and Constable Silvester had found the end of the shaft in the pocket of he man's long smock.

Stuart said that the shaft was unprotected and agreed with Crown Attorney McElderry that if there had been a guard on the shaft there would have been no accident. Stuart said that when the mill had been inspected by a government inspector all the safety suggestions made at that time had been carried out.

Very Badly Injured

Dr. B. Kelly of Bobcaygeon said that Akister was dead when he reached him and was very badly injured. His skull was fractured and both legs and both arms were broken and there were other severe injuries. "The injury to his head would have been sufficient to cause death," said Dr. Kelly. "He never knew anything after his head first hit the beam."

Carl Akister, Fenelon Falls, brother of the dead man, gave identification evidence.

Dan Douglas of Peterborough, provincial inspector for the Ontario Department of Labor, said that he had not inspected the mill before the accident but believed it had been inspected by another official. When he investigated after the accident all the hazards, including the shaft on which Akister had been caught were protected.

"We do not think it good policy to oil machinery while it is running," Mr. Douglas stated. He added in reply to a question from Mr. McElderry that guarding the protruding end of the shaft would have prevented an accident. He pointed out that in inspecting a plant when the machinery was not running it was not difficult to overlook a haazrd. "Some one missed something," Mr. Douglas said.

Provincial Constable David Silvester told of investigating the accident on the night of October 17, and described the manner in which Akister had been battered and torn. On investigating the man's clothes Constable Silvester said that it had been found that the end of the shaft was in Akister's pocket.

Clarence Read, recalled, said that he thought that his mill was exceedingly well protected. When it had been inspected by Mr. Hazzelwood, the Lumberman's Safety Inspector, in August, two safety recommendations had been made and these were carried out but there had been no suggestion as to the shaft underneath the mill.

The shaft, he said, was very smooth and polished and he believed that it would be almost impossible for a cloth to catch on it. Coroner Snider in a brief address to the jury told them that if they wished to include in their verdict any hint of blame for either the mill owners or the inspectors they were free to do so.

The jury was composed of Thomas Henderson, chairman; Cecil Pogue, Joseph Henderson, Robert L. Wright, Delbert Junkin, Henry Devitt and Noxon Thurston.

Rescue In Sight

One of their companions in the small boat snapped this picture just after the Sunderland flying boat had been sighted.

Girl's Courage Recognized In Award List

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 5.—(CP) —Sixteen-year-old June Mills, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has been awarded the Royal Canadian Humane Association's bronze medal for heroic action last June 9. The girl, one of a party of seven, tried to save members of her party struggling in the water in Haviland Bay and succeeded in rescuing one.

Five persons were drowned, including the girl's mother and a young brother Earl, when the boat in they were returning from a camp across the bay was swamped and seven persons tossed into the water. Others drowned were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Macdonald and their son, Donald.

It was dark and most of the party disappeared in the water. June went to the rescuet of Mr. Macdonald and was forced to let him go and then directed Macdonald's daughter, Dorene to the boat, and held her there until June's father arrived in another boat one hour later.

Other Medals

Two other persons from Ontario—William Briscoe of Hornepayne and David McFarlane, Hamilton—were awarded the Society's bronze medal. Briscoe saved a baby from her burning home Jan. 21, 1940. McFarlane, in a canoe with Edward Toswell and Vern O'Keefe in Hamilton Bay last July 9, swam in rough water to shore for help when the craft started to sink half way across the Bay. The other boys were rescued.

Cavan Pioneer Dies In 84th Year

MILLBROOK, Nov. 5 (ENS)—The death of Mrs. Eliza Jane Whyte, which took place unexpectedly at Toronto on Sunday, although deceased had not been in good health for some time, removed a citizen who had spent the greater part of her life in Millbrook, and who was held in high esteem, and affection, by a wide circle of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Whyte was of pioneer stock, being the eldest daughter of the late James Sloane, and his wife, Annie Deyell, the latter a member of the family of John Deyell, the first settler in Cavan township, who had the honor of naming both it, and the adjoining one of South Monaghan, after counties in his native Ireland.

She was born at Millbrook eighty-three years ago, and was brought up and educated here. She moved to Lindsay to live following her marriage to the late John George Whyte, who predeceased his wife by over forty years. An Anglican in religion, Mrs. Whyte was devoted to her church and its interests, and was faithful in attendance and support as long as health and strength permitted; she was also a valued worker in the W.A. of St. Thomas' church, filling the office of recording secretary with marked efficiency over a long period of years.

Following her husband's death, Mrs. Whyte returned to Millbrook to reside, building the attractive and comfortable home on King street, which later, when the state of her health made a change imperative, became the property of the late Mrs. L. H. Rea.

The immediate surviving relatives include an only son, Dr. B. C. Whyte, of Battle Creek, Michigan; two grandchildren, Geoffrey Whyte, now of the R.C.A.F., at Montreal; and Nancy Whyte, of Battle Creek; two sisters, Mrs. John R. Fitzgerald of Toronto, and Mrs. J. R. Eakins of Millbrook; there are a number of nieces and nephews. An only brother, Wesley Sloane, who lived in the West, died some years ago.

The funeral took place on Wednesday, a private service at Toronto at 11 a.m., preceding the commitment service at Riverside cemetery, Lindsay, where interment was beside her husband. The Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson, B.A., rector of the parish of Cavan, conducting the church ritual. Pall bearers included ex-Warden W. T. Wood and J. R. Eakins of Millbrook; a nephew and grand-nephew J. W. Pickup, K.C., and John Pickup, of Toronto; John Deyell and another cousin of Lindsay.

British Suspect Treachery; Laval Partial To Nazi Views

LONDON, Nov. 5—(CP).—British official circles are beginning to be suspicious of the long period of silence and reticence observed both by Germany and the Vichy Government on Marshal Petain's agreement to "co-operate" with Hitler on the new order of Europe.

It is understood strong steps are being taken to obtain from Vichy full information on the agreement, particularly the part bearing on use of the French Navy and naval bases on the Mediterranean and the west coast of Africa.

"We do not want any surprises to be sprung on us," said a diplomatic source, adding that he saw indications of a stiffening of Britain's attitude toward Vichy.

Some diplomatic observers believe the aged Marshal has come under the complete domination of Pierre Laval, his Vice-Premier, who openly advocates Franco-German collaboration.

For some time there has been a disposition here to regard Petain and General Weygand as foils to Laval's policies. But during the last few days, and despite Weygand's reported assurances to the French North African colonies that there would be no cessions "incompatible with France's interests and honor," official circles here are beginning to be suspicious of Vichy's silence.

At present there is no disposition here to disturb the diplomatic relations with Vichy as long as Britain's interests are not endangered any further.

It is understood here that at the time Laval first interviewed Hitler the German terms included use of the French Navy and air force and cession of many parts of the French mainland and African colonies.

There is little doubt here these terms were watered down by Hitler when he interviewed Petain. But there is still doubt concerning the future use of the French Navy and naval bases.

Zog's Palace Hit

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)

A British Broadcasting Corporation report yesterday said a joint British and Greek air attack on Tirana, Albanian capital, Saturday, resulted in the "partial destruction" of the palace of exiled King Zog, which is now being used as headquarters for the Italian Army in Albania.

Zog now is in England. The report was heard here by the National Broadcasting Company.

An unidentified Albanian port also was said to have been bombed. Porto Edda and Durazzo are two of the Albanian ports being used by Italians to ferry troops and supplies across the Adriatic for the Greek campaign.

All City-Minded

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(CP).—Canadians would rather spend their leaves in cities than in the country. Arrangements were made to accommodate soldiers on leave in country quarters, "but all too few availed themselves of these facilities," said Major J. M. Humphrey of Canadian military headquarters. "They light the 'bright lights'," Major Humphrey added.

Possession of a gun at Stoney Lake when Fish and Game Overseer I. J. Lyons happened along has cost Jack Matthews of Toronto a $10 fine. Matthews was charged with hunting without a license and on a written plea of guilty this morning was nicked $10 and $2.50 costs.

SPITFIRE FUND CLEARS $2,000

A preliminary checkup of the local police Spitfire fund reveals that the sale of tickets here has resulted in approximately $2,000 for the fund by which the police of Canada are to donate a Spitfire plane to the Air Force. The expenses of the local drive were practically nothing, only the nominal cost of printing the tickets having to be assumed.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED

The used car stolen from Hood and Cumming Saturday by two men in uniform who obtained the machine on the pretext that they wanted to try the car out and who failed to return has been recovered, outside the south fence of the Exhibition Grounds. The automobile was parked behind a house on McGill street and close against the fence, as if it had been used to help some one climb over the barrier.

NO SCENT

Modern advertising has done more to glorify nature than most people realize, and an excellent example of gilding the lily was brought to light this morning. A well-known George street druggist was changing a window display, and, in taking the advertising material out of the window, remarked that it is indeed strange that the product therein advertised was named after a flower. The odd part of the affair is that the product, a perfumed preparation, is named after a flower that has no scent whatsoever.

NOT SO SCOTCH

That the Scots are not a bit stingy is the contention of Leading Aircraftsman Robert Barrett. His grandmother, Mrs. R. Even the cobbler, after mending his shoes, would take no pay. Robert is 18 years of age, and is with the 110th Army Co-operation Squadron R.C.A.F.

RECEIVED WASTE PAPER

The empty Water street store opposite the Examiner office has been loaned to the Salvage Campaign Committee for the reception of waste paper, and will be open each day from four until five with a Girl Guide to receive, and Mrs. R. A large paper collection is to be made by the Boy Scouts this coming Saturday, but in the meantime the committee is appealing to citizens to help the Scouts in what is anticipated to be a heavy paper collection day, by bringing their contribution of waste paper to the Water street store.

STORES OPEN TOMORROW

Peterborough's stores will remain open tomorrow, Wednesday afternoon, as the weekly half holiday schedule is cancelled for November and December, to be resumed again in January. The stores will also be open all day next Monday, November 11, which is not being observed as a general holiday here.

Rambling Reporters

AND SO IT WAS

It may not be a new story, but it happened. A young man, a visitor in town, was having a shave in a downtown barber shop. The barber had been a little annoying to the customer, who was not in the mood for inconsequential conversation, and wasn't holding up his end of the chatter.

The barber had made several subtle, but futile, attempts to find out the young man's name, his occupation, and all there was to know about him. Finally, in desperation, the barber said:

"Your home in Peterborough?"

"Nope," came the answer.

"Weren't you in here last year?"

"Nope."

"That's funny, your face sure looks familiar."

With that, the young man pushed himself up on his elbows, and looking at his own reflection in the barber shop mirror, nodded his head, and said, "You're right, Mac, it sure does."—J.W.H.

Took Interest In Baby Witness Claims

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 5—(CP)—Mrs. Fred Johnson testified in Supreme Court before Mr. Justice J. Keiller MacKay today Robert McFarland showed great interest in the baby he is accused of murdering. The attention was evinced while he was courting the child's mother. Mrs. Johnson is a sister of the mother, Alice Archer McFarland, declared insane yesterday and incapable of standing trial for the slaying for her 18-months-old son last July.

Murder charges were preferred against the youthful couple when the wirebound body of the baby was found in Trent Canal.

Mrs. Johnson said the 21-year-old accused said he was willing to provide a home for the child when he married the mother.

Fred Johnson told the court the accused had stated his intentions were honorable and the child's illegitimacy made no difference to him.

George Mondeville, Canadian National Railway bridge tender, testified he had seen a couple crossing a railway footbridge July 25. The woman had a bundle. Later he saw a man and woman coming from a footpath leading from the river to the bridge. He could not identify them.

George Wickens, driving from Trenton to Glen Miller, had picked up "small, young people." He did not know them, and had driven them to Glen Miller. They did not have a baby with them.

Everett Hall, who know McFarland, testified to picking him up "with a girl," about 200 yards north of the Wickens home near midnight July 25. He did not know the girl but swore she had no baby with her.

Refuse To Pay Proper Fare

Taxi drivers have complained to the police that they have been experiencing difficulties in securing the proper fares from some of the trainees and some of the instructors at the local military camp. As a result one driver said he was out $3.75 which he had to refund to his employer out of his own pocket because the men in uniform refused to pay the legal fare after ordering a taxi. Apparently some of the trainees and instructors from out-of-town are not aware of the fact that fares are set by the local taxi bylaw and that the taxi men can be fined for not collecting the proper amount.

Minister Warns Indifference To Be Avoided

The monthly meeting of the Ministerial Association met in the Y.M.C.A. at 10 o'clock Monday, November 4. Rev. C. C. Boyter, president, in the chair.

Revs. J. F. Everson and E. W. Rowland conducted worship. Dr. E. W. Young acted as secretary in place of Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, who was unable to be present. The arrangements for the Gideons public meeting in George Street Church on Sunday, November 17, were left in the hands of Rev. H. L. Roberts.

The following program of men to arrange for speakers at the monthly meetings was arranged as follows: December, Adjt. Norman Buckley; January, Dr. A. T. Barr; February, J. H. Sutcliffe; March, Rev. E. W. Rowland; April, Rev. T. J. Floyd.

The president presented a letter from the Peterborough Health Association, asking for a representative to be appointed to attend their next meeting. It was decided that Rev. C. C. Boyter should represent the association. A communtication was received from Mrs. J. M. Leeson, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, giving information of a system of religious education in hospitals throughout Ontario.

It was moved by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe that the association provide this education, and that Dr. E. W. Young summon the Religious Education committee to deal with the matter; this was carried by the members.

The meeting expressed its appreciation of the fact that Rev. R. T. F. Brain had been appointed a permanent chaplain to the military forces, and that Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt had become a part-time chaplain.

Dr. E. W. Young then spoke on "The policy of spiritual advance," which had been suggested to the Association by the Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church. This, he said, is a great issue, the most vital to us of all questions. We are inclined to shelve the greater issues of our ministry and to turn to lesser matters because they are easier to deal with.

He read a passage from a book by the late Dr. R. W. Dale of Birmingham, in which he spoke of God's eternal purpose in the troubles which come to individual lives and the calamities of nations.

There is a divine purpose that can bring good out of evil, but we can frustrate that purpose by slackness and indifference. We know that the habits of people have changed during the last two decades. But we must face the question: Have they changed for the better? Has the soul of humanity a keener vision of God today than our fathers had? The speaker outlined some of the changes that had taken place, there is a different attitude towards the Sabbath, towards prayer and worship, towards the church. Institutions that owe their origin to the desire to advance evangelical religion have become almost entirely secular. Many men of high intelligence and ability place their club or lodge before their church.

Dr. Young then outlined various methods by which the association might promote spiritual advance, as follows.

An organized effort to reach the young people that parade in the streets of the city on the Sunday nights.

A united movement of one particular Sunday to sound a recall to religion in all the congregations of the city.

An appeal to the neutral organizations of the city, in which the call of God and of the Church would be sounded. We can do by united effort what we cannot do as individuals.

There was a lengthy discussion in which all the members joined, and the utmost enthusiasm was felt towards the idea of spiritual advance. Several of the concrete proposals were arranged for the program of the next meeting, and suggestions were offered from the practises in other cities like Peterborough.

On the motion of Dr. A. T. Barr, seconded by Rev. F. W. Craik, it was decided to hold a united rally of Sunday School scholars and teachers in the city on New Year's Day; the following were appointed to arrange for this rally of young people: Dr. A. T. Barr, the president, Rev. F. W. Craik, Rev. T. J. Floyd and Rev. W. McArthur.

Council Aid Sought In Hydro Grievance

The members of the North Monaghan Ratepayers' Association, decided at their meeting last night, to request that the Hydro Electric Power Commission send a man down from Toronto to join with them in the discussion of the problems occasioned by the rates they are paying at the present time. It was decided that an open meeting should be held at that time, and that ratepayers from Smith, Douro and Otonabee should be invited to sit in.

If the members feel that their grievances are of a solid nature, it is likely that a deputation will be sent to Toronto discuss the matter with Hydro officials.

It was also decided that a resolution be sent to the council, asking that right be granted to hold yearly elections if the ratepayers deemed it advisable. It is felt that the every other year arrangement that has been suggested might not be adequate, even for the duration of the war.

New President

Jack Sullivan, popular member of the Friday Night Supper Club for a number of years, who has been elected president for the season 1940-41.

City Is Asked To Pay Off $3,818 Debt

"We'll have to pay off the prize-winners at fifty cents on the dollar, and that wouldnt be good for the city."

In those words Roland Denne made his last plea to the City Council on Monday night, urging its members to make up the Exhibition Board's outstanding deficit of $3,818.

With him were Charles W. Cowling, D. B. Falkner, and Tom Brown of the Exhibition Board and Harold A. Morrow, who as owner of the park property gave it to the city to be used for agricultural purposes.

Mr. Morrow lent his support to the deputation's appeal, simply saying "It seems to me the city ought to help out the Agricultural Society as they will have no funds until the war is over."

The petition was referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

Mr. Denne's brief argument was that the initiative of the City Council had brought about the Government's acceptance of Exhibition Park for military purposes until the war is over, and that the unpaid debt of $3,818 should be accepted as liability of the city.

Jack Sullivan Heads Club

At the annual election of the Friday Night Supper Club here at the Y.M.C.A., the following officers were elected for the season of 1940-1941; Chairman, Jack Sullivan; secretary-treasurer, Mario Banks; committee chairman and executive, Bill Ferguson, Ken Gadd, Bill Scott, Doug Grant, Bob Garner.

The reports from the various committees were received, indicating an extremely satisfactory year. While a great number of the boys from this popular Supper Club have enlisted in the various units, new members coming in have filled up the membership until it is to-day about normal.

Car Is Impounded By Police Officer

Constable Gordon K. Hardy noticed a car travelling south on George street Monday night, with the tail light out. As he pulled up alongside of the machine he saw a square of cardboard doing duty as a window and after he had passed found that only one headlight was going. The officer decided to make a further investigation and discovered that the brakes of the automobile were inadequate.

Accordingly he impounded the machine and this morning Ellwood Stone of Lakefield entered a written plea of guilty to a charge of operating an automobile with inadequate brakes and was fined $10 and $2.50 costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. Repairs will have to be made to the car before it will be released for operation.

Money Bylaws Approved By City Council

Two money borrowing by-laws involving a total of $110,000 were read at Monday night's Council meeting.

One of them authorized the issuing of $100,000 serial debentures for the construction of an auxiliary sub-station on Romaine Street, west of Park Street. These bonds are for 20 years, paying 3¼ per cent. Instalments of interest and principal are to be paid yearly.

Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Commission, previously explained that this capital expenditure is to be financed as an overhead charge against consumers of power.

The other by-law, to borrow $10,000 for an extension to the Nicholls Hospital, was given only two of the required three readings.

On the suggestion of M. E. Shaver, city treasurer, the terms of these debentures will be five years. A leter from the Ontario Municipal Board advised the Council that approval of this by-law would have to wait until a copy of it was received by the Board. They also wrote that they would require written affidavits to be filed showing that this extension to the hospital "is sufficient of an emergency measure to warrant an application to the Board to dispense with a vote of the ratepayers." Both conditions are being complied with.

The two by-laws received unanimous support from the Council in their respective readings.

Raybestos Adds Building; 2nd This Year

Further expansion of the Canadian Raybestos Company's plant on Perry street became evident today when it was learned that the Dickie Construction Company of Toronto had been awarded an additional contract for another building.

Early in September this construction firm was given the job of building an addition to the rubber room on the southwest corner of the existing plant, and work went ahead rapidly. This first addition was estimated to cost $25,000, a one-storey fireproof wing, of brick and steel.

The new contract is for a building 60 x 80 feet on the east of the present office building. It is to be one storey, brick and steel.

Cost of the new addition is believed to be in the neighborhood of $25,000 which would bring the total expenditures for new buildings, this year alone to $50,000. The extensions are made necessary by a stepping up of the plant's production to meet the vital needs at the present time.

Work started on the new building this morning and will be pushed ahead at the fastest rate possible.

Recently the Canadian Raybestos Company made application to the City council for a strip of land on the east side of their present property, which would permit plant extension, and this is under consideration at the present time.

Pedestrian Suffers Injuries To Leg

John Fenton, 356 Simcoe street, had several ribs broken and his leg injured Monday afternoon when he was hit and knocked down by an automobile while he was crossing Aylmer street at Simcoe street. The driver of the car picked the injured man up and drove him home. Fenton did not think that he was hurt very much but afterward discovered that several ribs had been broken. He had failed to get the name of the driver or the number of the car involved, and so far the motorist has failed to make any report of the accident to the police.

Peterborough's Old Dustless Sweeper Be Sold For Junk To Aid Win War

"The dustless sweeper, a civic implement perhaps unknown to the younger generation of citizens, is going to be dragged from its dusty obscurity to end its long suspended service in a flash of glory not only for Peterborough but also for the cause of the nation and the Empire.

This almost forgotten machine is going to be broken up into scrap iron, and regenerated in some form of munitions, possibly as a nest of bombs to be hurled against Hitler.

Originally this street sweeper cost $15,000, an investment in Peterborough's habitual practice of civic neatness, and the recollection of that expenditure twenty or so years ago momentarily stayed the council's hand, gave the council pause, in its decision to part with it as material for explosive shells. One of the motives actuating its purchase was the fact that it was to be manufactured in Peterborough, that it seemed an earnest of manufacturing company that was coming into being with prospects of an expansive future.

"You had four years' service out of it," Alderman Wilson reminded the council, as the council's collective hand began to loosen again after that first reaction of hesitancy.

Alderman Gordon had raised the question whether any of the parts were potentially of more value than scrap iron. There was a big motor in it that might still do some ordinary and peaceful utility.

But, Alderman Dutton remarked, the Deisel engine had outmoded it, and Mayor Hamilton said: "I doubt whether you could get any one to use it."

"A few years ago we were offered $25 for the whole works," Alderman McIntyre recalled, and by that time you could visualize the old sweeping machine creaking into motion in the direction of scrap heap and the reducing furnaces.

It was Alderman McCannan who proposed that the dustless sweeper be given to the I.O.D.E. and the Women's Council of War Services, an agency of collecting scrap metal for war purposes. He paid a little tribute to Bert Withers, garbage coltractor, for the extra work he had done in gathering up the metallic junk set out by citizens in front of their houses. And Alderman Stocker interjected a salty comment that apparently the end of the year was approaching, the inference being that Alderman McCannan was giving Mr. Withers a plug at a season when a new garbage contract may have to be considered.

Alderman McCannan urged that the council might as well part with the big sweeper gracefully instead of letting it rust in disuse. And even if it did cost $15,000, when much was expected of it, he and Alderman Ovens proposed that it be given to the I.O.D.E. Some conversation ensued, and finally when the possible salvage of the machine's engine was generally doubted, Alderman Stocker and McIntyre endorsed the sacrifice in much the same words as the earlier motion.

In the end Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, lightened the pain of parting with an old friend, mentioned occasionally during the years by successive councils, with this resolution: "That the chairman of the Property committee (Alderman McCannan) be authorized to dispose of the dustless sweeper in the Board of Works yard."

And that was the last word, leaving to Alderman McCannan the duty of rolling out the sweeper for the last time. Probably it will never roll again, as a matter of fact, but will be attacked with sledge hammers while the chairman of the Property committee dedicates it to an heroic last stand against some German barricade, and in the thought: "There goes $15,000."

Sons Of England Honor Veterans

The officers of Lansdowne Lodge Sons of England for the coming year were installed by District Deputy Supreme President Bro. Arthur Harris at the regular meeting Monday night.

Two members of the Lodge Bro. Albert S. Curtis and George Carpenter, who joined the lodge together on November 3, 1890, were presented with veterans' jewels by Bro. Harris on behalf of the Supreme Council and on behalf of the lodge congratulated them on their 50 years of membership in Lansdowne Lodge.

The special fund being raised by the Sons of England throughout the Dominion to assist those citizens of London and other British cities whose home have been destroyed in the recent bombing attack by the Nazis has met with a generous response. $75 has been subscribed to date by the members of Lansdowne Lodge. The death of Bro. G. R. Stevens in Cornwall, England, was reported. Bro. Steevns was a resident of Peterborough for many years and was well known to many residents of Peterborough. One candidate was initiated into the Red Rose Degree during the evening and a welcome extended to visiting brethren from Lodge Westminster, Lindsay.

The president was authorized to purchase a Poppy wreath and lay it on the cenotaph on Remembrance Day. The following are the officers installed:

President, Bro. F. J. Parsons; president, W. W. Gray; vice-pres., D. Leether; chaplain, A. Follis; secretary, W. C. Shiner; treasurer, C. Wood; first committeeman, W. R. Field; second, G. Groombridge; third, G. Palmer; fourth, F. Leether; fifth, G. Benton; sixth, W. G. P. Benton; inside guard, R. Wright; outside, J. Townsend; organist, G. Groombridge; trustees, R. Starr, D. Curtis; auditors, J. Barnes, G. Benton, W. G. P. Benton.

After the installation the members enjoyed an hour of social fellowship around the banquet table prepared and served by Bro. Charlie Coleman. The singing of the National Anthem brought a very successful meeting to a close.

Lions Are Placed In 4 Categories

Bismarck, Kaiser Wilhelm, and now Hitler; three big-game hunters, and all, in their respective times, after the British Lion, the Lion that will eventually prove to be the salvation of the world. These words were spoke by Rev. Dr. P. J. Kelly, in his address to the Peterborough Lions' Club, at the Kawartha Club last night. Dr. Kelly used as his subject "Lions," and his talk embraced lions of four categories: the real animal, the symbolic lion, the lion of literature, and the false lion.

The lion, Dr. Kelly pointed out, is mentioned at least one hundred times in the scriptures, and the Son of Man is referred to as "The Lion of Judah." The lion has been used throughout the ages as a symbol of victory. The speaker mentioned some of the majestic lions in statuary, one of the most famous examples being the lions on the monument in Trafalgar Square, London, England.

Dr. Kelly pointed to the use made of the lion by writers of all manner of literature from its begining, and utilized Aesop's Fables in his illustration.

With a pleasing display of his ready wit, Dr. Kelly spoke of the false, or unreal lion. The social lion, sometimes referred to as the Ladies Lion, the business lion who constantly talks in big figures, and is usually trying to create an impression.

Comparing the hunting of the lion in the jungle with the stalking of the British Lion by the Germans, The speaker said that heavy guns are used in the jungle. The lion is hard to kill. The British Lion will be harder to kill than any other, and no matter what the Germans may use in their attempt at its destruction, the Lion will stand. It will be the salvation of the world.

Dr. Kelly has long been regarded as a keen student of world affairs, and his value as a teacher has always been appreciated. For these reasons he is a most welcome speaker and one who has a worth while outlook, and one that is willingly shared.

President Herb Jamison advised the members that the District Governor, Cliff Cotter, of Ottawa, would pay his official visit to the Peterborough Lions on Nov. 21, and a motion carried that plans be made for Ladies' Night in conjunction with his visit.

Memorial Day Service Planned For Hastings

HASTINGS, Nov. 5 — (ENS). — Despite the fact that World War II. is now in progress, Hastings veterans of 1914-18 will honor their fallen comrades. This year, Memorial Day service will be held in the Town Hall at 11 o'clock on the morning of November 11, under the auspices of the veterans of Hastings, Iden Bond, Sr., announced. Two minutes silence will be observed and clergy of the village will conduct the service. Placing of wreaths on the Cenotaph will be carried out following the service. The committee in charge is anxious to have as many as possible attend the service.

Squadron Leader Ernest McNab Is Promoted To Command Royal Air Force Station

LONDON, Nov. 5 — (CP Cable).— Acting Wing-Comander Ernest McNab, leader of the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadron in Britain, is to be transwerred to the Royal Air Force, it was learned today, and will shortly be placed in command of an R.A.F. station.

The exact nature of the duties has not yet been defined. McNab's promotion from squadron leader to acting wing commander was announced officially here to-day.

McNab's promotion became known in Ottawa last night together with news of the appointment of Acting Squadron-Leader Roy McGregor of Montreal to succeed him as leader of the R.C.A.F. fighter squadron.)

McNab's squadron has destroyed approximately 75 German aircraft in the weeks it has been fighting in the defence of Britain. McNab from Regina, Sask., was the first officer of the R.C.A.F. to get into action, shooting down a German bomber on his first combat flight on August 15.

Gracie Field Concert Nets $1,650.89

Net proceeds of the Gracie Field concert in the Armouries amounted to $1,650.89, Alderman Dutton reported to the council Monday night, presenting a detailed statement audited by Edward Humpage.

Gross receipts were $1,881.15 from which the expenses of preparing the parade hall for the concert and other incidentals were deducted.

Alderman Dutton also read a letter from the Navy League of Canada acknowledging the receipt of a cheque for $1,650.89, and expressing the League's gratification at the splendid results of the Peterborough concert. Other members of the council said that citizens would be pleased to know that their support and attendance had yielded this comparatively large sum for the League.

Engineers Grateful

Another agreeable note at the meeting was a letter to Mayor Hamilton from Major Medlen of the 3rd Field Park Company of the Royal Canadian Engineers conveying the appreciation of the officers and men of the unit of the "send off given them by the city council and the citizens of Peterborough." Major Medlen also mentioned that the Peterborough company is now comfortably quartered in Nova Scotia.

Invited To Church

An invitation from the Canadian Legion requesting the council to join with them in attending divine service at Trinity United Church next Sunday night was accepted in a motion by Alderman Cotton, seconded by Alderman Bradburn. This resolution also accepted the Legion's invitation to the council to take part in the Remembrance Day service at Confederation Square next Monday morning.

A letter from Sir Edward Beatty expressed his regret that he had to forego his plans for a visit to Peterborough last month. The head of the C.P.R. wrote that there had been no relaxation in the pressure of his responsibilties, and that his projected trip through Ontario had to be cancelled.

BEGIN EARLY TO PREPARE FOR YEARS THAT ARE COMING

Elderly People Are Disliked and Unwanted Often Because They Grow Careless in Dress and Manners

Since the only way we can escape age is by dying young—which is the last thing that any of us wish to do—is it not strange that so few people even give a thought to preparing themselves for their inevitable fate? All about them they see old people who are such bores that every one flees from them as they would from a man-devouring wild beast. They see frowsy old people who are repulsive to have about because they look as if they need to be disinfected and run through a steam laundry. They see grumpy old people, all the 57 different varieties of disagreeable and disgruntled old people who made the problem of what to do with aged parents one of the most heartbreaking riddles in the world. And yet, seeing how unhappy most old people are and how much grief they can cause young ones, how seldom does it occur to any man and woman in the thirties to begin to cultivate the graces of mind and character that will make them attractive in their seventies and eighties. How many look at an old person whom everybody dreads and shuns and say to themselves: "There, but for the grace of God, go I 50 years from now if I don't watch my step."

The necessity of old people making themselves desirable if they expect to be wanted has been borne in on me very forcibly recently by three cases which have come under my personal observation. Two old women and an elderly man have lost good homes, which they sadly needed, because they made themselves so unpleasant that not even the generous hosts who had taken them in out of the cold could endure them any longer.

Refuses to Change

One of the old women is an unreconstructed Victoria who believes that every one should dress and act exactly as she did when she was young. She forgets that the privileges of a guest do not include criticizing the children of the household and telling their mother that Sally's dresses are too short, and it is outrageous to let Mary stay out until 12 o'clock at night at a party, and that she doesn't know what the world is coming to when parents will let a boy of 16 have the use of the car on Friday nights.

The result of Aunt Martha's strictures is, of course, that she and the children are always in a row, and in the end it is suggested that she would be happier somewhere else.

The other old woman is a religious fanatic who believes that she has a sacred duty to save everybody with whom she comes in contact by converting them to her particular faith. And after the people who have invited her to make her home with them because she had nowhere to go, have stood being preached at as long as human nature can endure it, she also has to move along.

And the old man is unwelcome in his children's homes just because he is so careless about his manners and his appearance they are ashamed of him. His hair always needs cuttings. He always needs a bath. His clothes need cleaning. And he eats like a pig. He is a bad influence on the children whose table manners their mother is trying to form. And he is no credit to the family, no matter if he is a noble Christian character.

Watch Your Grooming

Nothing else in the world is so pathetic as lonely, unloved, unwanted old age, but 99 times out of 100 when old people find themselves in, that cruel position it is their own fault. Instead of trying to make themselves attractive to their fellow creatures they somehow seem to feel that age gives them the right to be as disagreeable as they please, and to dispense with all the amenities of life.

Because it is easier and more comfortable to go slouchy they won't make the effort to be well groomed and well dressed. Because they enjoy the sound of their own voices they become garrulous and tell the same tales a hundred times and never give anyone else a chance to say a word.

Because they get lazy and self-indulgent they do not mind their manners even at the table. And because they know they can get away with it on account of their age they become merciless tyrants in their families and snap and snarl at every one like a vicious dog.

And then they wonder that nobody loves them, no body wants them. And that is the kind of old people we all will be if we don't watch out.

Yes, playing the guitar, you are the magnet at a party. As you strum away — playing a favorite strain, accompanying a song — you attract everyone to your side as surely as honey attracts bees.

You can easily teach yourself the guitar. You don't have to know a note to play chords in accompanying a song.

For the chords, popular music has symbols — simple to understand. The diagram with our picture explains the symbol for the G major chord used at the start of "Home on the Range."

The vertical lines are the strings of the guitar fingerboard, the horizontal lines are the frets or crosswise bars.

Where you see the numbers 3 and 4, press the strings with the third and fourth fingers of the left hand. Then with the right hand pluck the same strings, also the strings marked 0, near the sound hole. Use the fingers indicated, playing the thumb (X) a little before the others.

Fun to go on, learn to play favorite melodies. Our 32-page booklet explains the guitar fingerboard, tells how to read notes, gives elements of music. Has table of chords, shows correct fingering. Includes seven popular tunes for practice.

SHOWING A SECOND FIT

ORDINARILY, when a satisfactory fit in a major suit has been found, it is unwise to bid other suit lengths and thereby give the opponents information which may aid them in the defense of the hand more than it will help your side in the bidding. But there are times when advanced players find it advisable to probe the situation in a side suit, in order to determine whether possible losers there are taken care of well enough to justify a slam contract.

On this deal, in a duplicate tournament, the first bid by each player was the same at a number of tables. South on his second turn, however, produced various bids at the different spots. In one case he bid 4-No Trumps, the Blackwood convention, and after his partner's response of 5-Clubs showing no aces, he decided to sign off at 5-Hearts. At another table, South's second bid was the diamond suit which West called to show no losses, but when North refused the invitation to show any aces, merely returning to hearts, the side quit at game. One South, after hearing his partner's free raise of hearts, took a chance with a jump to 6-Hearts.

The most expert pair in the game used the bidding shown. After hearing his partner's free raise, South felt that slam depended on heading off spade losers more than any other factor. So he bid his spades on his second turn and then rebid them on his third turn. This showed they were at least five cards long, and that hearts were longer because bid first. It also was clear to North that South was trying to find out whether North could stop spade losers, so he showed that ability with 5-Spades. South then went on to his 6-Hearts, feeling almost certain the slam must be in the cards.

Greeks Get 3 Planes

Athens, Nov. 4 (BUP)

TWO heavy Italian bombers landed intact near Kastoria Sunday. When the pilots were questioned they denied that they had encountered Greek anti-aircraft fire and gave no reason for landing. A third Italian bomber landed south of Kastoria when it ran out of gasoline. The planes, in perfect condition, will be used by the Greek Air Force.

In attacks Saturday on Tirana, Albanian capital, and Santa Quaranta, the Greek fliers were led by Flight Lieutenant Katsiyanis. His plane was riddled by Italian ground fire and he returned to his base at Larissa with difficulty, his wireless out of order so that he was unable to signal his own ground crew.

They mistook him for an enemy and opened fire, forcing him to abandon plans for landing there. He proceeded to Athens, where, bleeding profusely, he landed safely and then lapsed into unconsciousness.

Relieved Pains in Back and Hips, Says This Local Lady

Has High Praise for Syntona as Nerves Are Relaxed and Sleep Is More Restful. Condition Followed Indigestion, Gas, Acidity and Heartburn.

MRS. FLORENCE HINCHCLIFFE

"The way Syntona has helped me is just grand and I will be glad to have others know about it," said Mrs. Florence Hincheliffe in a recent report.

"I had been troubled with indigestion, stomach gas, acidity, and heartburn. Then, severe pains set into my hips and back. These pains became so bad I couldn't even walk at times. My nerves were bad. I slept poorly, and I suffered with frequent headaches and constipation.

"I wasn't taking Syntona long before my food began to digest better without all that indigestion, sourness and gas. Then the pains went away and my nerves felt relaxed, I sleep better now, and I arise mornings feeling rested and happy."

Surely, when Syntona has helped so many people right here in Peterborough and vicinity, it would be a mistake if others who suffer similarly did not give it a fair trial. You, too, may receive these priceless benefits.

Syntona contains no harmful drugs or depressors. It is made only from the pure extracts of herbs, roots and barks that aid in proper assimilation of food to build sound bodies and strong, healthy nerves. It rids the system of irritating acids and poisonous waste matter. Many who have used it say that even after the first few days, the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and resistance.

Come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, to-day and get yourself a treatment of Syntona. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time. Ask about the special introductory offer.—(Advt.)

Mexico Links Her Defenses To United States, Latin America By Universal Conscription

By JACK STARR-HUNT
(Central Press Canadian Correspondent.)

MEXICO CITY, Nov: 5—Mexico's "tough little army" of approximately 52,000 officers and men is going to be increased by 200,000 within the next two years.

Linking her defence measures to those of the United States and the rest of Latin America, Mexico recently adopted a sweeping universal conscription law for the first time in history. The first two divisions of 12,000 men each will be called to duty on Jan. 1, 1941. Thereafter, other groups will be summoned for training until the desired expansion is reached.

Almost overlooked in the summer's general political excitement, the new law was passed by congress and approved by President Cardenas. Supplies and equipment for the new forces are being assembled as rapidly as possible, and war department specialists are hard at work ironing out details for training of the nation's manpower.

Urged By U.S.

Mexico City military circles have no doubt that the revolutionary steps was largely brought about by gentle urging from the United States. Mexicans, like Americans, have traditionally shunned the idea of conscription. But once proposed, the law met little opposition in congress and has been greeted with enthusiasm by the people. Posters, put out by most labor organizations such as the CTM, have lately plastered the city, urging the nation to organize for national defence.

All able-bodied males in the republic between the ages of 18 and 45 will now be liable for military service. After a year's training with the army, each man will be on call for active duty for a period of four years after his return to civilian life. After that, he will pass into successive reserve groups until he reaches the age of 45, when he will become part of a proposed home guard.

All classes of the nation will be affected. From the wealthy man's son to the humble peon, toiling in the fields and mountains in remote parts of the country.

For the first time in their lives, thousands of illiterate and ragged Indians wil be moved from their straw huts to military centres. There they will be taught the rudiments of modern warfare, clothed, fed and trained to read and write. Many of them will learn trades in the army's vocational schools. Many will learn to think of their country in a new way, as a nation among the nations of the world, as an object for their fierce but undirected loyalties.

Far Reaching

This mobilization of the relatively untouched levels of the population is, in the opinion of foreign observers as well as educated Mexicans, one of the most significant and far-reaching steps that Mexico has ever taken. It is one of the reasons why there was little effective opposition to the law.

In a country where roughly half of the population cannot read nor write, where the cleavage between classes is unbelievably wide, conscription will have more than a military meaning. Mexicans are counting on economic and social gains, as well as armed strength.

But uppermost in the minds of foreign military observers is the effect of universal service on Mexican internal and external security. The creation of a large, well-trained and loyal army will, in their opinion, be a stabilizing force for the country. Fifth column dangers and the possibility of future internal trouble stirred up by outside forces will be greatly reduced, they say. Conscription will give the government power to crush any subversive agitation.

This added security for Mexico will lift a load off the shoulders of Uncle Sam. Knowing well the explosive nature of Mexican politics, the United States has had to keep in mind the possibility of some day intervening to guarantee order and to keep Mexico from dangerous hands. This worry should be greatly lessened in the future.

Many Army Changes

In preparation for conscription, the present Mexican army has recently been undergoing radical changes in leadership and equipment. The traditional bureaucratic, inefficient type of officer—a holdover from revolutionary days—is being gradually replaced by younger men, professionally trained in the army military college, the Mexican West Point. Light tanks have been added to the army, a few anti-aircraft guns have been bought, and a new communications division, equipped with the latest radio devices, has been formed within the past year.

The qualities of the Mexican soldier are held in high regard by foreign military attaches. They are "tough little men", drawn from sturdy peasant and Indian stock. They are admirably suited for the kind of fighting they are most likely to be called on to do—fighting in the hills and mountains and in the desert. Able to fight and live on little food, their powers of endurance are the equal of any army in the world. Essentially, their favorite tactics are those of the American Indian. They know how to fight in the hills, taking advantage of every natural obstacle, firing from behind every rock and tree.

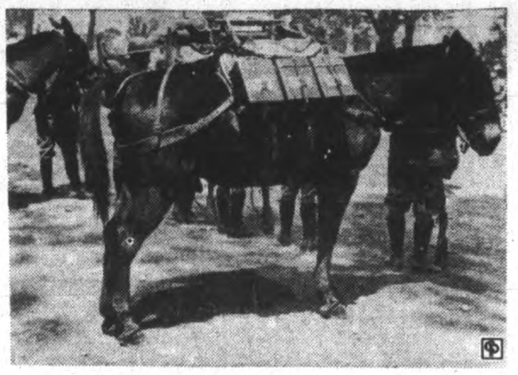
Past Record Bad

Military history shows that most of their defeats, which have given rise to a legend of inefficiency and cowardice, were due to poor leadership, to politician-officers ready to sell out to the highest bidder. That is now being changed, although the small Mexican army still has more generals on the list than the army of the United States.

Some day, in defence of the hemisphere, Mexican and United States troops may have to fight side by side. If sea routes to the vital Panama Canal should ever be threatened, the United States army would have to move south by land, through Mexico and the other Latin American countries. Mexico would then be an important link in the chain of communications with Panama, as well as a possible landing base for foreign troops.

With a strong Mexican army, trained to repel or delay landing operations, the defence of the American hemisphere will be made more easy. And so, United States oficials here have welcomed Mexican conscription as a valuable co-operative step.

Mexico's well-trained infantry will find their ranks swelled by 200,000 within the next two years.



In Mexico's rough country the donkey still is a necessary part of the army able to travel where trucks and tanks would be helpless.

Bill Foley Discovers Lassoing Fish Is Easiest Way Of Getting Them Into Boat

Echoes of July 1 are still being heard in Peterborough, for one citizen has had a change in status since then. W. E. (Bill) Foley, on July 1 was an ordinary man. But today he is the exponent of the famous "Foley lunge lasso" type of fishing. Since July 1, Mr. Foley has caught a lung, some, including Mr. Foley, say he has caught several lunge, and this is how he did it.

"So many of the big muskies in the district are big because they are smart," Mr. Foley said. One day he had a vision. He saw a fish coming into a boat, and it was lassoed. The line was wound around the fish, and it was in the gills. Even if it had been a big fish, it couldn't have gotten away, because there was an exceptionally heavy line on the hooks. Bill Foley concluded that if it could happen that way, he would be the one to make it happen, so he immediately embarked upon a course of study and research.

It finally happened, as it always will in the case of "Bill," and the Foley spirit triumphed. W. E. Foley became "Maskinonge Foley," and overnight his fame became widespread.

When asked by an interested citizen, just how these feats were accomplished, Mr. Foley shrugged his shoulders, and said, "Just take a heavy line, give it a twist, like this, and the rest is simple, all you have to do is pull the fish in." The report is that he is now involved in plans for capturing his deer alive this year, but on that point he remained silent.

Women Warned Of Menace To Good Health

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5. — (ENS).—One of the primary responsibilities of the Women's Institute during war time is in promoting public health according to Miss Helen Gardner, Niagara Falls, who addressed a gathering of nearly eighty Institute members at the home of Mrs. Robert McCulloch on Friday. Miss Gardner, who is a representative of the Department of Health, was principal speaker at a special meeting at which the Seymour East Branch were guests of Seymour West. Emphasizing the importance of special measues during war the speaker pointed out that sixty thousand men died of disease during the last war and seventy thousand babies under one year died during the four years immediately after the war. To further show the need for increased care in the prevention of debility she told members that one Canadian mother died every eight hours during the same four year period. Other contributing factors to the high mortality rate in order of their toll are heart disease, diseases of the arteries, cancer, and accidents in the home and on the highway.

Miss Gardner reminded her listeners that no tuberculosis sufferer needed go without treatment since the provincial government provided hospitalization when this was necessary for the more advanced cases and when this period of treatment was completed the municipality became responsible for a further recuperative period.

In conclusion she urged members to do their part in encouraging the promotion of health both through diet and preventive measures. The secretary read a communication from Agricultural Representative Ian MacLeod, Brighton, directing attetion to the short course in household science and agricultural projects to be held in Campbellford from November 26th to December 22nd.

Other item on the afternoon program included a reading by Mrs. George Craighead and a guitar and vocal solo by Miss Doris Locke.

Tendered Shower.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Stephens (nee Irene Jeffs) whose marriage was an event of interest here on October 23rd, were guests of honour at a miscellaneous shower held in the Parish Hall here on Friday evening. More than one hundred friends of the popular young couple now residing in Seymour township, attended the affair and presented many lovely and useful gifts, including glassware, kitchenware, linens, towels, lamps and walnut furniture, to the young couple. Music for dancing was provided by Spencer's orchestra. The program was arranged by Mrs. Frank Potts, Mrs. Chas. Fraser, Mrs. Eugene King and Mrs. Jos. Bolton.

A Wet Landing.

Havelock Aces made an unscheduled stop following their regular appearance in Hastings on Friday. While returning the driver missed a turn four miles west of Campbellford and instead of going over a small bridge the car zoomed into a creek. Though no damage was done to the car the boys are reported to have wet their feet as they attempted to get back on the road. The accident happened early Saturday morning.

On the first sign of a cough or cold the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help get rid of the trouble.

Its promptness and effectiveness in loosening the phlegm, and stimulating the bronchial organs is such that the cough may be checked before anything of a serious nature sets in.

DEMOCRATIC SLATE IS RETURN IN U.S. ELECTIONS

President Franklin D. Roosevelt (LEFT) was returned as President of the United States for a third term, while his running mate, Henry A. Wallace, will be the new vice-president. Return of Mr. Roosevelt will ensure uninterrupted continuation of a U.S. foreign policy of all aid "short of war" for Britain.

Britons Greet Election Of Roosevelt

British Nation Had Personal Interest In U.S. Elections

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP Cable).—The British public today greeted the re-election of President Roosevelt with unrestrained enthusiasm, millions of Londoners grinning happily as each edition of the newspapers announced a bigger majority for the man who, in the past six months, has done more to cement Anglo-American friendship than any other in a decade.

The reaction of the British public was summed up in a banner headline across the front page of the tabloid Evening Standard: "Roosevelt Is Safe." It told more of the relief and satisfaction felt here than The Star's "Roosevelt Elected Again," or The News' "Roosevelt Victorious."

Not a Blow at Willkie

This feeling of relief and satisfaction did not mean a blow toward Wendell L. Willkie, the unsuccessful Republican nominee, but was only a natural reaction to the re-election of the man regarded by the average Briton as "our best friend."

For a week or ten days the United States election has been crowding the war news off the front pages of London newspapers. There was more interest exhibited in the election than at any time since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was re-elected President.

It was not because of American domestic politics involved—that subject is almost a closed book to the average Briton—but because of its possible effect on Anglo-American relations and the flow of war materials across the north Atlantic.

With Mr. Roosevelt re-elected for a third term there was no danger of a new and unknown administration coming into office and no danger of a hiaus before a new President assumed office.

Hepburn Hails Return Of Roosevelt

TORONTO, Nov. 6—(CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario said in a statement today that "great rejoicing" should arise in Canada and the British Empire with the return to office of President Roosevelt.

The relationship of Wendell Willkie, defeated candidate, with the British Empire had never been tested, the Premier said.

"But there is one thing we do know," he added. "That is, that Mr. Roosevelt has been one of the greatest friends of Canada and the British Empire that we have ever had as President of the United States. For that reason his election should cause great rejoicing throughout the Empire."

He said that concerning problems of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Mr. Roosevelt "has within the last few months proven himself to be fully cognizant of our full requirements and most sympathetic."

Hails Demise Of Lewis.

The Premier hailed the "political demise of John L. Lewis who has been roundly repudiated by the Labor masses in the great industrial cities."

"So far as I am concerned," he added, "his exit calls from me, 'Thank God and amen'."

(Lewis, leader of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the United States, declared during the election campaign that he would resign if President Roosevelt was returned.

(Premier Hepburn and two of his Ministers, Mayor Dave Croll of Windsor, and Arthur Roebuck, Toronto M.P., divided on the C.I.O. issue in the Oshawa General Motors strike several years ago, and Croll and Roebuck resigned).

Conant Had Ordered Wide Search

Passenger Is Held On Charge Of Abetting The Driver

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 6—(CP).—Norman Reynolds, 19 - year - old Greenbank district farmhand, was formally charged today with manslaughter in connection with the death of Louis A. Arbourne, 22, killed last Saturday near Greenbank when struck by an automobile that did not stop.

Arbourne was said to have been walking on the pavement when struck. A companion, Kenneth Rodd, escaped by leaping into a ditch. Lawrence Hood, 18, alleged by police to have been a passenger in the Reynolds' car, was charged with abetting the driver. The two were arrested late yesterday on information of an unnamed garage employee.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, member for Ontario riding, which takes in this district, ordered a province-wide search for the automobile, and police officers scoured every garage in the neighborhood in an effort to apprehend the driver through pieces of broken glass found at the scene.

Mr. Conant recently had asked the co-operation of garage and service station operators in helping to track down operators of automobiles which failed to remain at the scene of an accident.

Thousands Of Enemy Taken By Greeks Bombers Keep Away

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 6—(AP)—The Greeks were reported in frontier advices today to have entered the Albanian town of Koritza, Italian military base for the Greek sands of Italians.

Large groups of Italian prisoners offensive and to have captured thou- arrived in Salonika today, transported from the fighting front in buses.

I saw five bus loads near the Salonika railway station. The captives appeared poorly clothed for battles in the frigid mountain area.

(The report of the capture of Koritza may be premature, since it is not claimed in later advices from Athens which merely said the Greeks have captured fortifications dominating the city and are shelling it.)

One of the men questioning the prisoners quoted them as saying they had been told by their officers that "Greece will not fight; we will just walk in."

1,000 Civilians Killed

The Greek air force, aided by British planes, attacked Italian troop and supply positions in Albania, while in Greece the civilian casualties from Italian air raids the first nine days of the war were counted at almost 1,000.

Greek planes were said to have bombed airdromes at Koritza and Argyrocastro, Albania, destroying some Italian planes which were on the ground.

The Greek communique blamed Italian planes for the bombing yesterday of the Yugoslav town of Bitol), just across the frontier from the Greek-Albanian battlefront.

A Security Ministry communique said 291 civilians had been killed and 690 injured since Italian planes started striking at Greece, Oct. 28.

Only Margin Of Victory Is In Doubt

President Holds Lead Of 468 Votes To 83 In Electoral College

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (CP)—The electoral tide sweeping Franklin D. Roosevelt into the White House for a tradition-smashing third term continued full today with new states entering the Democratic column.

Wendell Willkie, the dynamic Republican standard bearer, wired Mr. Roosevelt congratulations shortly before noon when mounting returns showed the president's foreign and domestic "New Deal" policies had been endorsed by a majority of several million votes. He had refused to concede defeat before retiring early this morning.

Left With Free Hand

The failure of Willkie's spectacular challenge left President Roosevelt free to press on toward his announced goals of all possible material aid to Great Britain "short of war," national and hemisphere defence, and friendship with all other democracies.

With about 75 per cent of the country's election districts reporting, Mr. Roosevelt held a lead of some 3,500,000 votes over his Republican opponent and it appeared that his election had been accomplished with 468 of the 531 votes making up the electoral college. The number required for election is 266.

The president's sweep helped the Democratic party keep control of both the Senate and the House of Representatives. In the House the Democrats were certain of 237 seats —19 more than the 218 needed for a majority—while the Republicans were sure of 114. At this point the Democrats had made a net gain of 11 seats.

New Jersey, Michigan and Wisconsin were states which went into the Roosevelt column today after giving the early lead to the Republican nominee.

Michigan Swings

Michigan's 19 electorial votes swung into the Democratic column as industrial Wayne County's vote for President Roosevelt overcame an early margin for Willkie based on out-state returns. At the same time Republican Governor Luren D. Dickinson conceded his defeat at the hands of Murray E. Van Wagoner, Democratic State Highway Commissioner who challenged the 81-year-old critic of "high life" and vice in the Gubernatorial race.

Fought Hard Campaign

Mr. Willkie, who fought a hard campaign, not sparing himself any ounce of effort in his record-breaking tour through 34 states in which he made hundreds of speeches, had the satisfaction of knowing that he had restored the vitality of the Republican party after two disastrous defeats, attracted a popular vote

Did Roosevelt's Last-Minute Campaign Save The Day?

Willkie Put Up a Campaign That Put Fear Into Politicians

By ELMER DULMAGE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(CP).—It wasn't even close in the electoral college vote, but United States voters can always say that Wendell Willkie gave them one of the big thrills of presidential campaigning.

It wasn't close at the finish but Willkie, starting from scratch, convinced the entire country—including President Roosevelt—that his whirlwind, non-stop campaign was leading him directly to the White House.

Hard To Believe Results.

A fighter of such calibre that early this morning his disappointment did not permit him to concede defeat when the evidence was overwhelming. Willkie so impressed newspaper reporters of all political colors who made the great American tour with him that they scarcely could believe last night's returns.

He was such an earnest "man of destiny" as he went his hurried way around the country, such an impressive platform speaker who attracted tremendous crowds wherever he went, that the strongest Roosevelt supporters feared him in every state north of the Mason and Dixie

That Vote Getting Magic

Roosevelt's Name Goes Far In Getting Votes

By W. B. RAGSDALE
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The name of Franklin D. Roosevelt has lost none of its vote-getting magic.

With one more swift operation, it has conjured out of the polling booths millions of votes pointing to triumph and four more years in the White House, thereby toppling the third term precedent and giving a rousing endorsement to his foreign policy.

Beyond that, it reversed a political trend which set in in the Congressional election of 1938. In that election, when Democrats were running for House and Senate alone and unsheltered by the Roosevelt name, they lost seats right and left. This time, they apparently not only held control of the Senate and House, but picked up a few seats in the latter.

Unable to Hold Ground

If the Republicans could have held the ground they gained in 1938 and taken New York, Wendell Willkie would have moved into the White House, come January. Republicans outvoted the Democrats then in enough states to have swung the election if they could have sustained that performance.

But as the figures marched in from Tuesday's voting, those gains melted. One by one, they crumpled —Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Wyoming. Then came New York to deal the final blow to Republican hopes.

Something Back Of This

Such an overturn of votes, a wresting away from the Republicans of an advantage they had gained the hard way two years ago, was accomplished by neither an ordinary campaign nor by the threshing out of ordinary issues.

At the outset of the campaign, Mr. Roosevelt notified his party that he would be too busy with the foreign situation to give much time to campaigning. But though he said he would shun purely political speeches, he left the way clear to

Move Nazi Officers

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Movement of German officer prisoners of war from a Muskoka internment camp to another camp in eastern Ontario has been completed, an official of internment operations announced today.

It is understood the officers were accompanied by a sufficient number of other ranks to look after their needs.

Under international law officer prisoners do not work and the new arrangemen, it was said, was made largely to take care of this situation, the presence of the officers in a work camp being unsuitable from the administration standout.

Ontario Vote Not Likely

TORONTO, Nov. 6 — (CP). — Premier Hepburn said to-day the Government has no plans to introduce a Redistribution Bill at the next session of the Ontario Legislature. The session opens in February.

Asked about the possibility of an election in 1941, Mr. Hepburn said: "I repeat—I don't believe the people of Ontario are desirous of the turmoil or expense of a general election at the moment. For that reason, there is no urgency."

He said the question of redistribution of Ontario's 90 ridings is "highly controversial and in any event the measure could not be effective until the next general election." He added that the possible reduction of seats in any part of the province hadn't been given consideration.

He said, however that the Government could carry on more efficiently and with less expense with fewer members. Mr. Hepburn did not specify how many.

Massed Raids On Southampton

LONDON, Nov. 6 (CP)—German bombers smashed public buildings and houses in Southampton in a massed raid early tonight and killed and injured an unstated number of persons.

However, most of the raiders were unable to penetrate inland.

An art school and an office building were hit by bombs, and a number of persons buried in the ruins.

Three German raiders, the air ministry said, were shot down during the day. Two British planes were missing but one of the pilots was reported safe.

London was showered with incendiary and high explosive bombs during the longest night raid of the war but came up today with the official announcement that "the general scale of damage was not heavy and it is confirmed that the number of casualties was not large."

R.A.F. Sets 30 Fires

German Naval Base Of Emden Is Raided

LONDON, Nov. 6 — (CP). — British bombers started 30 fires among petroleum tanks at the big German naval base at Emden last night and damaged shipyards at Bremerhaven and Bremen, the Air Ministry announced to-day.

Other attacks were launched against the Neuhof power station at Hamburg, where fires were started, and against the submarine building yards at Vegesack, near Bremen, a communique said.

In addition, the German invasion ports of Boulogne, Calais, Dunkirk, Antwerp, and Flushing and "a number of airdromes in German-occupied teritory" were heavily bombed.

The operations cost the Royal Air Force two aircraft.

Swiss Protest

BERNE, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Swiss Government today directed its minister in London to protest against alleged violations of Swiss territory by British bombers during the night. The government recalled it previously had received assurances from London that British planes would "cease flying over Swiss territory."

The Swiss high command earlier this morning said heavy anti-aircraft fire had "dispersed one squadron" of the many warplanes that flew over Switzerland during the night.

Dispersed Squadron

The high command announced heavy anti-aircraft fire had "dispersed one squadron" of many airplanes which flew over Swiss territory during the night.

The communique did not identify the planes, but said they crossed Switzerland from northeast to southeast. One squadron, the announcement said, "took the road back before crossing the Alps."

The appearance of the planes gave Berne and Zurich air alarms which lasted 1½ hours.

(Such alarms in the past usually have indicated British planes were en route to or from attacks on objectives in Northern Italy.)

Naples Bombed.

ROME, Nov. 6 — (AP). — The Italian high command said to-day that British warplanes bombed the area around Naples during night.

The Italians said the raid was the third in less than a week on Naples, centre of many important Italian war industries.

France's Hope Is In Britain

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 — (CP). — Britain is the only hope France has to save her home frontiers and her colonial possessions, The New York Times said today in commenting editorially upon yesterday's address in the House of Lords by Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary.

Noting that the Foreign Secretary had said Britain has "repeatedly rejected suggestions from the enemy for agreement at the expense of France," the newspaper remarked, "this is a pertinent and highly important point," adding:—

"Now France is the spoil for the victors. France and her empire represent booty beyond the dreams of the conqueror a year ago, and there is no question that Britain could preserve her empire intact at the price of surrendering this rich prize to the Axis powers. In the most literal sense, therefore, the British are fighting for the French."

Rescind Orders

HONG KONG, Nov. 6 — (CP).—Orders for compulsory departure of British women and children from Hong Kong have been rescinded on instructions from London, an official announcement said today.

Restrictions against return of persons already removed, most of whom now are in Australia, were not lifted, however.

The announcement that those remaining here would not be compelled to leave was interpreted generally as meaning that British apprehensions of a crisis in the Pacific are lessening.

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP).—London newspapers today hailed President Roosevelt's lead for re-election as a blow at Hitler and welcome news for Britain.

An editorial in the Evening Star said "All the influence which Hitler was able to bring to bear was thrown against him (Roosevelt)," and added:

"We heartily welcome the American decision. Germany cannot mistake its implications. It is one of a Growing number of signs that the tide is setting against tyranny and will finally engulf it."

Germans Claim Heavy Ship Toll

BERLIN, Nov. 6 — (CP). — The German high command claimed today that "enemy shipping or shipping usable by the enemy" sunk by German forces since the war began now totals 7,162,200 tons.

(This is more than twice the total of official British Admiralty figures, which place the total of British, Allied and neutral shipping sunk at approximately 3,250,000 tons.)

The Nazis assert that of the claimed total submarines accounted for 3,714,000 tons, naval surface craft for 1,810,000 tons, and the air force for 1,638,200 tons.

R.A.F. Strike Back With Raids Upon German Cities

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Low-flying German bombers gave London its longest air raid larm of the war, scattering explosive and incendiary bombs over the capital from dusk until after sunrise today in a series of persistent, but no unduly damaging, attacks which were met by furious anti-aircraft fire.

The Nazis, taking advantage of the long hours of winter darkness, began their assaults earlier than usual last night and the night-long alarm still was in effect when London's workers started for their jobs.

The industrial Midlands and Scotland also were raided and damage was done to homes and industrial premises, the air ministry said.

efficiency of the corps.

When the 1st Division came to England nearly a year ago it had its own Provost Company, made up of men recruited from the R.C.M.P. As more troops arrived the provost problem broadened. Other companies were formed and finally the Provost Corps emerged.

Five companies, mounted on motor cycles, will look after the provost duties in the new set-up. The corps will be administered by Lt.-Col. C. H. Hill of Victoria, Deputy Provost Marshal at Canadian military headquarters overseas. Direction of personnel in the corps area is under Major W. R. Day of Ottawa, assistant Provost Marshal of the Corps, who came to England as Officer Commanding the 7st Provost Company.

The 1st Provost Company is still the representative unit of the R.C.M.P. with the Canadian forces. The other companies have been recruited mainly from among men who never wore the scarlet tunics of the Mounties.

"This Provost Corps just had to be," said Maj. Day. "It is a logical step from a Canadian military point of view."

The Provost Corps will enforce discipline and handle police matters. Of paramount importance is the question of handling traffic and directing truck convoys along the narrow, winding roads of the British defence areas.

"Traffic problems are particularly important now in light of the high mechanization of the forces," said Maj. Day. "About 50 per cent of our work will be concerned with traffic duties and special training is given officers and men in this regard."

The new corps unit also will look after prisoners of war.

Ottawa Silent On U.S. Result

OTTAWA, Nov. 6. —(CP)— The government maintained today its traditional attitude of impartiality toward domestic affairs of a friendly foreign country and spokesmen remained silent on the outcome of the United States elections.

It was expected, however, that Prime Minister Mackenzie King, both as head of the government and as a personal friend, would send a message of congratulation to President Roosevelt.

Conservative Leader Hanson, when asked his reaction, said "Canada intervened enough in the election campaign." He would not amplify his statement.

Re-election of President Roosevelt for a third term means that there need be no break in the continuity of relations with the administration which now are at an important stage from many standpoints.

It has been the feeling here throughout the campaign that either major party in the United States would seek to carry on the measure of assistance the United States has rendered Canada and the Empire in the war, and maintain the friendly relations on other issues such as the St. Lawrence waterways proposals and trade.

A change in the administration, however, would have meant an inevitable delay during the period of transition and the installation of men in high offices who would not have the ready familiarity with Canadian problems now enjoyed by those in the present administration.

take an active part in the drive by remarking that he would reply to anything he considered distortions of fact.

Objections inside his own party to the third term effort had whittled away some of his staunchest supporters in past campaigns. Chief among them was James Farley, who quit his post as national chairman. Vice-President John Garner went home to Texas, took no part in the campaign, and stayed away from the polls. Farley, however, rendered yeoman service in New York.

Willkie went forth in a mighty drive. In its marathon itinerary, unflagging effort and staggering number of speeches, the Willkie "crusade" as he called it was a thing to wonder at. Democrats sat tight until the Republican dust began to settle upon them, and it settled thick. Charges were flying thick and fast, then in the last two weeks the president turned his full vigor into the campaign.

Charges Made

Of the charges that had been turned upon him, one of the chief was that he was leading the country into war. Another was that centralization of power in the federal government was leading toward state socialism. And the third was that the overthrow of the third term tradition would set the nation upon the road to dictatorship.

Mr. Roosevelt denied the first, said he was working for peace and would do so all the days of his life. He paid little heed to the second charge, but replied to the third that the free ballot was a complete safeguard against the overthrow of democracy.

Few would agree upon what issues the campaign turned.

That 1936 trend continued until the fall of 1939? But in the fall, war broke out in Europe. Orders from Great Britain and France, plus the upset of the usual channels of trade, gave a boost to business. Through the winter and spring this continued. And 1940 brought the United States' defence program, setting wheels to turning, adding more thousands to payrolls.

Along with this, the collapse of France and the desperate battle of Britain had set the nation to thinking of the urgency of its own situation.

Many Priests Attend Cobourg Rites

COBOURG, Nov. 6 — (Special).—Rt. Rev. Monsignor A. F. Kelly, pastor of St. Michael's Catholic Church, Cobourg, was buried here yesterday morning with full church honors. The Funeral Mass was solemnized by Rt. Rev. Denis O'Connor, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Peterborough. Deacons of the Mass were Rev. P. J. Galvin, Grafton, and Rev. J. McCauley of Campbellford. The Deacons of Honor were Rev. J. F. Finn of Parry Sound, and Rev. J. J. McCarthy of Douro . Assistant priest was Rev. V. G. McFadden, of Downeyville; Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Dr. V. J. Masterson of Peterborough; assistant Master of Ceremonies, Rev. E. Grant, Peterborough; acolytes, Rev. H. Archambault, Brett, and Rev K. Malone, Lakefield; censer bearer, Rev. H. Black, Wooler; mitre bearer, Rev. J. Houlihan, Peterborough; book bearer, Rev. J. Walsh, Peterborough; candle bearer, Rev G. Wolff, Cobourg.

The prayers at the grave were recited by Very Rev. Dean O'Sullivan of Peterborough. Honorary pallbearers were; Judge L. V. O'Connor, W. J. Maher, P. Delanty, J. S. Bowen, J. E. Quinn, D. Rooney, J. Flannagan and J. Leonard. Active pall-bearers were:, Rev. Dr. E. J. Masterson, Peterborough, Rev. J. Collins, Trout Creek, Rev. C. Carroll, Norwood, Rev. P. Costello, Hastings, Rev. E. Welsh, Lindsay, Rev. Dr. F. Grant, Peterborough. Honorary pall-bearers from the clergy: Dean O'Sullivan, Dean O'Leary, Bracebridge, Rev. Father Ryan, of Toronto, Rev. J. Guiry, Port Hope, Rev. Costello and Rev. Dr. P. J. Kelly of Peterborough. Members of the congregation of St. Michael's, clergy, and other citizens of the town attended the service.

The preacher at the funeral service was Rev. J. P. Collins, pastor of Trout Creek parish, where the late Msgr. Kelly had labored for 33 years. The speaker dwelt at some length on the dignity of the priesthood—a man in the eyes of faith, possessed of extraordinary spiritual powers, selected from among men, yet to all appearances as other men. These spiritual powers were given by God to the Apostles and they in turn ordained men to the priesthood to assist them in their work, the speaker declared. This dignity does not come from the personal character of the priest, but from the sublime functions which he performs. He is an ambassador of Christ. What is an ambassador, asked the speaker. He was an official representative form one country to another with powers to act in the name of that country. So also is the priest an official representative of God, said the speaker.

"As the Father hath sent me," says the Lord to His Apostles, "I also send you. Go ye, therefore, to teach ye all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and behold I am with you all day even to the consummation of the world," he quoted.

Had Personal Interest.

For the first time in many years the British nation had a personal interest in an American Presidential election.

When the early returns showed a lead for the President, men who stopped on the street to read newspaper boards were heard murmuring: "Good old Roosevelt." Everyone was discussing the results, from bus conductors to immaculately dressed "city" stockbrokers, and everyone seemed to agree, "I'm glad he has been returned."

Because of the difference in time between Britain and the United States, afternoon newspapers replated their editorial pages for short comments on the election.

Wyndham Robinson had a cartoon in The Star captioned: "The Hat Trick," showing a smiling Roosevelt pulling from a hat ribbons that spiralled into the words "Third Term."

Diplomatic sources suggested that American help to Britain probably would be increased still further now the campaign is over. It was suggested that the campaign held up decisions on many schemes which now could be proceeded with.

Willkie Wires Roosevelt On Re-election

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie today telegraphed President Roosevelt congratulations on his re-election.

At 11:30 a.m. EDT, Willkie's press secretary, Lem. Jones, gave out the text as follows:

"Franklin D. Roosevelt,
"President of the United States,
"Hyde Park, New York.

"Congratulations on your re-election as President of the United States. I know that we are both gratified that so many American citizens participated in the election. I wish you all personal health and happiness. Cordially,
"Wendell L. Willkie."

After a leisurely breakfast in his hotel suite, Mr. Willkie made a final survey of the election returns and then called in Fred Rahter, one of his secretaries, to dictate the message.

The Republican presidential nominee went to bed at 2:30 a.m. EDT after telling a rally of Willkie supporters: "The principles for which we fought will prevail, as surely as the principles of truth always prevail."

While the audience in the main ballroom of the Hotel Commodore cheered and waved handkerchiefs, Willkie added, "Don't be afraid, and never quit."

He acknowledged the applause with a sweep of his arm, then went upstairs. He sent word to reporters that he would have no further statement until 11 a.m. EDT.

Checked Returns

Before he retired, the candidate had spent nearly 10 hours checking returns from each state. Seated at the end of a couch littered with newspapers and election charts, he smoked numerous cigarettes, conferred with associates and made hasty pencilled calculations.

The hotel room held chairs for only four or five presons. Willkie's brother, Ed. stayed near him all evening, as did the nominee's 20-year-old son, Philip.

Statisticians sent in periodic reports on probable state totals. Early in the evening, Willkie described the election as a "horse race" and expressed the opinion it would not be decided until today.

Shortly after midnight, Willkie went to the ballroom where a "victory party" rapidly was turning into a quiet gathering.

He stepped to the platform, in front of an election blackboard, and expressed thanks to his "fellow fighters in this struggle."

"I congratulate you," he said, "on being a part of the greatest crusade of the century... I hope that none of you is either afraid of disheartened, because I am not in the slightest."

This story concerns an interesting little dog named "Teddy," he's a beagle, and he's pretty, but he won't hunt. Last year he was in his infancy, only one year old, and perhaps there was some excuse for his lack of interest in what was to have been his quarry. He would start a chase all right enough, but only a few minutes after taking the scent, he would come back to his master Chris Hughes, panting, and looking awfully proud of himself, and there he'd sit.

He was sent home in what should have been disgrace to any other beagle, but to Teddy it was just one of those things. He'd been away from home and now he was back again. Then the week after the hunt was over, the dog seemed to think of redemption, for while out looking over some land, Mr. Hughes saw Teddy dash off after a fine buck, and he was gone for hours; as a matter of fact darkness came, and Teddy didn't. The next day Chris went out to the woods and found the dog waiting for him on the roadside. That was a big day in Teddy's life, he was a popular hero, the lion of the hour, his master pointed to him with pride, said he'd found himself, and had already won his spurs, just wait until next year.

Teddy is two years old now, and no longer can his inconsistencies be blamed upon infancy, he's a veteran. On Sunday, Chris and the dog left for the north woods and the deer. Teddy had that look about him, there's no doubt about that, he knew just what was expected of him, and this year he'd show all the doubting Thomases a thing or two. He'd been called "half a dog" and such all summer, but here it was November, it was his month, and he was "raring to go."

The best laid plans of beagles and men oft go astray and leave us naught. Teddy is home. The hunt is still on but not for him. His devotion to his master has again proved to be greater than his desire for excitement, and the deer can go to blazes for all of Teddy. He'd much rather sit beside his master on the watch, and if a deer did chance to come by, of course he'd bark at it; protecter Teddy; the deer would probably turn before Chris had a chance to shoot at it.

So that's the reason that Vern Selkirk brought the beagle home last night. "It isn't any use," he said, "he won't leave Chris." ... Well, anyhow, he's a great dog after oats.

Van Wagoner Is Michigan's New Governor

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—(AP).—Murray Van Wagoner, Democratic candidate for Governor, forged into a substantial lead over Governor Luren Dickinson of Michigan to-day on the strength of heavy Democratic voting in Wayne county.

Judge Glenn Gillespie, Dickinson's legal adviser, conceded Van Wagoner's election as the Wayne vote wiped out Dickinson's out-State margin. With 2,471 of the State's 3,632 precincts reported, the vote was: Van Wagoner 661,373, Dickinson 625,794.

The Presidential contest in Michigan threatened to settle into a neck-and-neck race as pluralities for President Roosevelt in metropolitan Detroit tended to offset the margin compiled by Wendell Willkie in rural areas.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican seeking re-election, held a margin over Frank Fitzgerald, Democratic "unknown," but here, too, the contest was close, and in general followed the line of cleavage between urban and rural areas.

Dickinson, 51-year old critic of "High Life," compiled an advantage of nearly 100,000 out-State, but it quickly melted away as Wayne county's vote was tallied.

Willkie's lead, at one time 140,000, was cut in half by the first 400 of the country's 1,215 precincts and continued to dwindle. With 2,216 precincts of the 3,632 in the State reported, Willkie had 621,796, Roosevelt 546,285.

Masquerade Party Is Great Success

ROSENEATH, Nov. 6 — (ENS).—Many and varied were the costumes at a jolly masquerade party held on Monday night in the Town Hall under the auspices of the United Sunday School. As one entered the hall an old rhyme came to mind, "When black cats stalk and goblins walk and witches ride the broom." The orange decorations symbolized the fire the ancients kindled to ward off the evil spirits, and the spirits were represented by many black cats, bats, witches riding broomsticks, and the grinning jack-o'-lanterns. The judges, Mrs. Frank George and Mrs. J. H. Mouncey, Fenella, and Mrs. Arnold Elder of Centenary, awarded the prizes as follows:

Beginners' Class, fancy, Barbara Skuce; comic, June Linton.

Primary Class, fancy, Joan McMillan; comic, Ralph Sherwin.

A game period followed and refreshments were served.

Did Roosevelt's line.

His campaign was almost fantastic, probably beyond the powers of endurance of an Al Smith, or a Hoover, a Landon or even of a Roosevelt. He went everywhere, apparently captivated everyone.

It took a few weeks, but in the end the sensational Willkie boom that conquered the Republican convention last June in Philadelphia had apparently conquered great sections of the country. The Indianan was on his way and nobody denied it. He was a political rookie, never having run for office before, but that only added color to the performance.

Rising Tide For Willkie.

In the end the American Institute of public opinion—the gallup poll—reported a rising tide of Willkie support that could conceivably defeat the President if it continued up to polling day. All other neutral authorities conceded Willkie was distinctly in the running. The result would be close.

The President had announced he would not campaign due to the pressure of State business, but the Willkie drive brought him to the radio and platform in the last two weeks like the old campaigner he always has been.

Perhaps the Roosevelt last-minute campaign saved the day.

Americans were so convinced of Willkie's vote-getting potency that they were prepared to stay up all night, if necessary, to get the final result. Even the best political observers were predicting that the whole question might revolve around the 23 electoral college votes of California as it did in 1916 when Woodrow Wilson defeated Charles Evans Hughes.

Newspapers devoted many a column in the last week to the Wilson-Hughes contest which California turned to Wilson after eastern voters were abed, assured Hughes had won. The Roosevelt-Willkie contest might be a parallel one!

Last night the east didn't have to stay up late for the result.
